From that point the biography dealt chiefly with the younger of the two. It recounted in detail Paul's first bit of business inspiration, in which the boy showed himself as father to the man. A letter from Peter O'Mara, his mother's brother, who worked in the Dundee mines in Pennsylvania, had hinted at one of those early difficulties between miner and employer which were afterward organized into strikes. Julius Murray told during all the rest of his life how Paul had rushed into his office breathless with the news. He was fond of describing the lad as he stood there, straight and erect, in all the dignity of his thirteen years, his hands behind his back and his blue eyes flashing. "Wouldn't it be well, Mr. Murray, to buy up all the Dundee coal you can get between today and tomorrow? By the day after that everybody else will know the news as well as we." Julius Murray, unaccustomed to wisdom from the mouth of babes and sucklings, laughed at the boy's ardor and poohpoohed his advice. When he awoke next day to the fact that he was letting a great opportunity slip by he had only twenty-four hours in which to do the work of forty-eight. The money he made when, in the following winter, Dundee coal went up to the price, unheard of in those days, of $11 a ton was that which gave Miss Julia Murray the claim to be considered an heiress when she eloped with Paul Trafford in 1870.

In subsequent numbers Paula read the history of the Trafford rise step by step, scheme by scheme, million by million, lawsuit by lawsuit, fight by fight—a great, sordid epic of finance in which reputations were ruined, homes wrecked, lives blasted and a whole country's commercial, legal, political and moral honor brought painfully into question.

Paula read with no more than a vague comprehension. There were so many questions involved—legal, legislative, geological and economical—that her simple intelligence reeled in the effort to understand.

Where there were dramatic personal events she grasped the subject more fully. She could follow the story of the ruin of the Winships from beginning to end. She could do the same with those of the Marshalls of Turtonville, of the Brewers of Albany and of poor Jackson of Ohio. But whether details were clear to her or not one great fact surged up out of this weltering mass of testimony—that the father she adored had fought his way to success by means which made her shudder. Nothing she had guessed at, nothing she had feared, could equal this heaping up of testimony from every corner of the land. Nothing she had ever imagined of Russian tyranny or Turkish misrule could be more merciless than the despotism with which her father and his associates in a country considered free had been able to club and crush and gag and grind into helplessness whatever lifted itself against them. And he was her father! She was his child! She was bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh! She could no more dissociate herself from him and his work than she could from the line of laborers and servants from whom she sprang. However confused she might be about facts, she had no doubt as to her duty here. It was to stand by the man who depended upon her, to stand by him all the more now when in his old age the storm of popular wrath was gathering and breaking about him.

All through July, August and September she had been reading these articles secretly. That her father was reading them, too, she knew from seeing in New York papers an occasional statement from his legal representatives in which this or that accusation was denied. How deeply he resented this history of himself she could see from his increasing depression as each new number of the series appeared. Now, on one of the last days of September, the October issue was in her hands.

She had just finished reading it in her favorite corner of the English garden. It had been especially pitiless to her father in the piling up of charges against him. She closed the volume and with hands clasped upon it gazed vaguely across the lawn, indifferent to its sunlit spaces as well as to the masses of dahlia and cannas gorgeous with autumn bloom.

"No, no," she kept saying to herself; "Roger couldn't take that money. It's blood money. And I must keep it. There's no way by which I could give it up. If I did it would kill papa. I must go on all my life clothed in the ruin of beggared men and of hungry women and children. Roger said that, and it's quite true. My pearls are their tears, and my rubies are their sweat of blood. And yet I must wear them for papa's sake, whatever the world may think, whatever Roger himself may believe of me. Oh, Roger! Oh, my love! How can I go on all through the years without you? O God, help me!" she prayed, with a sudden lifting of her eyes. "O God, help me! I'm so weak. I'm so tired. I've so little strength left to keep the struggle up."

Her breath came in hard gasps; the tears blinded her. She had just time to control herself and dash her hand across her eyes as she saw Wiltshire coming toward her through the trees.

She was not surprised. She knew he would be looking for her somewhere in the grounds. During the week after their first meeting he had come every second day to the Pavilion de la Reine. During the week after that his visits had been daily. In the third week Trafford had invited him to move out to Versailles and become their guest.

To this arrangement Paula had given the welcome of her acquiescence. Though she was aware of what her father meant, she was sensible, too, of the relief which Wiltshire's presence brought into the tension of their daily life. Whenever he was with them there was a return to something like the old time happiness. Her father seemed to grow younger in his society, and she herself drew comfort from the knowledge that this good man's support was near. She could not bear to check his gentle, tentative advances; still less could she bear to give back cold refusal to the silent pleading in her father's eyes.

Little by little she began to see all that this marriage would mean to him. It would be more now than anything he had said when he had first spoken of it months ago. Then the advantages of protection and position were to be for her; now she could see that he was not without need of them himself. It gave her a feeling that the foundations of the earth were loosened to think that he, whom she had looked upon as almost omnipotent, should require aid. But there was no doubt that his position in the world was shaken as much so as his moral courage or his bodily frame. The strong, resourceful, self dependent man had reached the moment when he was beginning to hold out his hands for help. With Wiltshire as a son to him, he would have an ally whose strength it would be hard to overestimate. She had no skill in calculation and little knowledge of the world, and yet she could not be unaware that an English duke, rich, powerful, highly placed and full of good will and sympathy, could not be other than an able friend to any man with needs and ambitions like her father's.

So the days at Versailles were slipping by, with courage growing in Wiltshire's heart and hope brightening in Trafford's, while in her own she was searching for strength to make the sacrifice.

As Wiltshire drew near his increased confidence was expressed in his eyes, his smile, his attitude and the very tones of his voice. It was not until he had drawn a wicker chair near to hers that he noticed the emotion she had been unable to conceal.

"You've been crying?" he exclaimed.

"Not quite," she said, trying to smile at him through the mist of her tears. "I've been reading this."

She held up the magazine, at which Wiltshire looked with a certain air of embarrassment.

"You know what's in it," she went on as he said nothing. "You've read it too."

"I hope you don't let these things distress you," he said after a minute's hesitation.

"If they were said of your father, wouldn't they distress you?"

He leaned forward and drew the magazine gently from her hands.

"It's always well to remember," he said in a kindly voice, "that one story is true till another is told. It's perfectly astonishing how many different versions you can get of what seems like one plain, unvarnished tale. We've one important condition to remember, and that is the imperfect conception of honor that exists in the financial world."

"I don't see why that should make any difference," she declared, with a touch of honest indignation.

"It does in this way—that it's very hard for any but the highest moral natures to be superior to the surroundings in which they live. Some of our most respected institutions would have to be made all over again if we were to put forth any pretension to follow the Golden Rule of Christ. You see, Paula—I may call you Paula, mayn't I?"

"If you like," she murmured, letting her eyes drop.

"You see, Paula, that you and I, whose ideas are different, ought not to be surprised if a man like your father, who has probably not studied the question of ethics to any great extent, conforms to the general standard around him. After all, he's only in the same case with thousands of other men who on every point but that of making money are among the most high minded in the world."

"I know you want to comfort me"—

"I should like to do more than comfort you," he said, with a sudden change of tone.

"It's the money," she hurried on confusedly, giving him a frightened glance. "There so much of it, and it will all come to me. I shall have to take it. It would kill papa if he thought I wouldn't. I don't want it. I hate it. If I could only find a way to give it back"—

"Paula, let me say something. I know your trouble, and I understand it. I don't believe that anybody in the world could feel with you more thoroughly than I. It's my trouble too. It couldn't be more my own if I was—your father's son."

Paula gave a little start. The words were so exactly the utterance of her own thought that they sounded to her like the summons of destiny. While she sat outwardly composed, pale, still, with hands clasped and eyes downcast, her heart was calling its last drowning farewells before going down into the sea of sacrifice.

"It's coming now," she was saying to herself. "I can't help it. I can't cling any longer. I must let go. Oh, Roger, goodby!"

"And since the trouble is not only yours, but mine," Wiltshire went on tenderly, "why couldn't I bear it with you?"

"I don't think anybody could."

"Nobody could but I. I could. I could take you and shelter you and hedge you all round with so much protection that this great question, so insistent in your life now, would pass into the second plane."

She lifted her eyes in interrogation.

"This is what I mean," he pursued quietly. "To my wife even such a great acquisition of wealth as you might receive from your father could make no external difference. You won't think that I'm speaking in vulgar boastfulness"—

"Oh, no!"

"I'm only stating the facts as they are. Don't you see, then, what I mean? If you were my wife, all this money could come to you, and you could use it as you chose. No one would know, not even your father, that you didn't spend it on yourself. You could give it away to the last farthing. You could do more than that. I know that your aim would be not merely to give the money away, but as far as possible to give it back to the people who used to own it. I would help you in that. We should make it our life's work. It would be a difficult task, and I don't know how far we should be successful, but at least we could try it. Here in these pages," he went on, tapping the cover of the magazine, "there is mention made of hundreds of families. We could hunt them up and see what we could do. We should have to work discreetly, cautiously, secretly perhaps, and safeguard in every way the honor of your father's name. But we could do our best, and even if we only succeeded once it would be worth the trying. Wouldn't it mean something to you just to be making the attempt?"

"How good you are! How well you understand!"

"I do understand, Paula, dear. That's my one justification for offering you a sort of bribe. And yet, God knows, I don't mean it as a bribe. It's only the eagerness of my love to protect you from everything that could hurt you or make you unhappy. When the gods of old saw those they loved in trouble or danger they threw a cloud about them and snatched them away into a place of safety. And that's what I want to do for you, Paula. I can do it if you'll let me. When I see you in the midst of this huge, unworthy battle I'm in terror lest some of its arrows may wound you. But as my wife you'd be safe—that is, as safe as any earthly conditions can make you. I won't force the great question between us. I won't ask you again if you love me"—

"Oh, duke," she broke in impulsively, "I do love you—in a way."

"Then I won't ask you what that way is," he said quickly. "If you can say as much as that I shall be content."

When a minute or two had passed in silence he took her hand and raised it to his lips. Leaning back, with eyes closed, she allowed him to repeat the caress. But she was thinking of the day when beneath the questioning eyes of the woman in black and green Winship had told her that he loved her.

CHAPTER XX.

THERE were several reasons for keeping the fact of Paula's engagement to the Duke of Wiltshire a temporary secret from the outside world. Trafford himself was receiving only too much publicity at the time, and he shrank from seeing his daughter's name brought prominently into the American press, as it would be if the news were known to a few. As the wedding was to take place in January, it was decided that it would be soon enough after Christmas to let the information get abroad.

The details were arranged between Wiltshire and Trafford alone. Paula acquiesced with a submission which barely concealed her listlessness. They were, in fact, too busy with the service of the temple to observe that their divinity grew thinner and thinner and paler and paler day by day. Because she smiled at them and consented to all their arrangements they failed to notice that in the hours they spent together the number of words she uttered could be counted.

It was not till they returned to Paris for Christmas and the wedding that Trafford and Wiltshire received the first shock of enlightenment.

"What have you been doing to her?" more than one old friend exclaimed. "If I had met her in the street, I don't believe I should have known her."

The impression made on the father and the lover was one of uneasiness rather than of alarm. Instead of their plans for London in February, with the opening of parliament and the presentation of the new duchess at an early court, they began to talk of Egypt, Algiers and Biskra. Trafford had no doubt that she would be better when she was married. Wiltshire was sure she would regain strength and color in the eagerness of putting into practice the great scheme of restitution they had planned.

It was for this reason that he began thinking over the matter of the million to be forced upon Winship. He had done nothing in that cause as yet though Trafford had referred to it once or twice as a promise Wiltshire had made him. The business which had been repugnant at first began to have aspects that appealed to him when he thought of the pleasure his success would give Paula.

During the three months since they had become engaged he had been slowly forming his own theory of the situation between her and Winship. That there was a situation was clear to him from the something guarded in her words and attitude whenever his name was mentioned. The young man had fallen in love with her, he thought, and had asked her to be his wife. She had resented the liberty, while, womanlike, she had condoned the offense. The opportunity had been taken to offer him the money Trafford was so eager to get off his conscience, and Winship had refused the proposal as an outrage to his dignity.

The more Wiltshire reflected the more exactly did this version seem to fit the facts of the case. The elements it presented were not very difficult for a man of the world to deal with, and so on a bright afternoon in January he set out for the studio in the Passage de la Nativite. If he could come back with the news that the victory had been won, he knew that to Paula the tidings would be more precious as a gift than all the jewels he could offer her.

And yet when face to face with the artist in the atelier Wiltshire found the subject less easy to introduce than he had expected. Like the other actors in the drama, Winship, too, had changed much during the passage of a twelvemonth. With the exception of a few minutes on two occasions at Monte Carlo in the previous winter, the duke had seen nothing of Winship for several years. He still thought of him as "Alice's protege," a clever, hard-working, immature young man, to whom he could speak with a certain amount of authority. It disturbed his ideas at the outset to discover that time, assurance and success had evolved a personage quite different from that which he had thought to find. Winship's keen eyes and hard mouth and determined manner were so much at variance with the timid deference of the lad of eight or ten years ago that Wiltshire found his sense of annoyance deepening as the conversation passed from one topic to another. He knew at last that if the object of his errand were to be attained it must be by diving into the subject brusquely.

"I say, Winship," he began suddenly, "I've looked in on you to offer you some advice."

"That's very kind of you, duke," Winship returned easily. "I'm sure I must need it when you put yourself to so much trouble."

"I rather think you do. We all require a friendly word at one time or another in our lives."

"I've wanted it many a time when I didn't get it," Winship laughed, "and so I'm all the more grateful to you now."

PARENTS SHOULD ENLIGHTEN CHILDREN ON SEX QUESTIONS

And Until They do They are Making a Tremendous Contribution to Evil of the World, States Rev. J. Aspinall McCuaig — To Save Our Sons and Daughters from Ruining Effects of a Devouring Traffic

Probably the most outspoken lecture on the sex question ever given before an audience in a local church was delivered last night at St. Andrew's by Rev. Mr. McCuaig, of New York, who as announced previously, is here for a special series of educational and religious discourses on the greatest problem which confronts civilization at the present time—that of social impurity. "The White Slave Traffic and our Children," was Mr. McCuaig's topic, and at the commencement of his address he said there was no great problem in life that could be successfully approached and dealt with from any standpoint other than the standpoint of God, and it was in this light that the speaker treated his subject. If dealt with any other way he stated, wrong conclusions would be arrived at and wrong inferences drawn.

The white slave traffic was the illicit traffic in alien women. This was, however, only a small phase of the question of prostitution. Personally he was convinced that with the present organization not two per cent. of the moral outcasts of this great army of degeneracy could be reached. He questioned if there were any great churches whose doors would be swung open to receive them in the large cities. But if they were practically beyond redemption the speaker would make an appeal for the 500,000 little girls who might later on be called to take the place of these fallen women in America. We stood between the ranks of the fallen and the innocents to save the latter if possible. The false education of the children in the matter of sex was responsible for most of the vice of social impurity.

We were instinctively fathers and mothers and the fulness of our lives was realized when God blessed us with little children. Our children were the windows through which we gazed and widened our sympathies until we became fathers and mothers of the children of the whole world.

A child was the germ of eternal destiny and it was the responsibility of parents to properly direct that germ. The sex passion was the imperial passion of the human race and the children should be enlightened upon this as well as on the other attributes to which they are heirs. They should be made known of the terrible results of the prostitution of this passion and the great blessing of its God-given employment.

The speaker deplored the fact that so many homes of this continent were barren children and that race suicide had become a heinous menace to the development of the race.

In conclusion it was emphasized that children were impressionable and the means by which they learned things had a large influence on their conception of them. The greatest influence in the white slave traffic were men who had grown from improperly educated boys. Mothers and fathers were making a tremendous contribution to the evil of the world when they neglected to explain to their children the mysteries of the sex passion and of the saving grip of the faith in Jesus Christ.

PARCHMENT WILL BE REDUCED TO ASHES AT THE Y.W.C.A.

The most joyous event in the history of the local Y.W.C.A. will take place at the association building to-night when the mortgage on the building will be burned. This encumbrance has has been fully paid off, thanks to the able management of the Y.W.C.A. and to the commendable support of the public.

An attractive musical programme will be a feature of the occasion. Among those who will contribute to the programme are Miss Helen Davies, Mrs. Dickson Hall, Dr. Parks and Miss Jean Hill. Greetings from the Y.M.C.A. will also be tendered and Mrs. A. Stevenson will read a history of the local branch's inauguration and progress.

TENDERS MAY AGAIN BE ASKED FOR IN CONNECTION WITH BUILDING OF SEWERS

Board of Works Send Resolution to City Council in This Connection--Money Left Over From Building Bridges over Creek—Preparing to Start Work on Sidewalks and Sewers.

There is a probability that the city council will revert to the tender system of constructing the sewers in the city. For the past three years they have been done by day labor, under the supervision of the city engineering department. The question was considered by the Board of Works last night, and a resolution was passed recommending the Council to revoke the rule made three years ago, that all sewers should be built by day labor. The committee was not unanimous on the matter, three voting for and two against the motion to make a recommendation to the Council to ask for tenders for sewer construction.

Those present were: Ald. Hicks, chairman; Aldermen Duffus, Phelan, Graham, Duncan and Metheral.

A NEST EGG.

There is about $4,000 to the credit of the city as a result of this amount of the money raised by by-laws to build bridges over the creek which runs through the city not being spent, as the work was done at less cost than was estimated. As the by-laws stated specially that the money raised was for the purpose mentioned above, the unexpended amount cannot be used for any other purpose. The Board of Works will likely apply to the Ontario Legislature for permission to use this money for other public works in the city. Before applying for the legislation the Board will ascertain upon what works the money will be spent, as this will have to be stated when legislation is applied for.

The engineer reported that he had made an arrangement with E. and F. Conroy for filling in with stone at the back of the abutments at the new Smith street bridge at $2.50 per cord. This was work outside the contract, and it was intended to have it done by the city's men. Conditions have made it necessary, however, to have the work done at once, and it was considered advisable to make the agreement with Messrs. Conroy. The arrangements made by the engineer were endorsed by the Board.

C. Kovalinki was heard in reference to the necessity of a new sidewalk on the east side of Donegal street, between London and Dublin streets.

On motion of Ald. Duncan and Ald. Graham, the engineer was instructed to report on the matter.

SEWER PIPE.

SEWER CONSTRUCTION.

Ald. Metheral moved that the Board of Works recommend to the Council that the city ask for tenders for sewer construction, the engineering department to tender on the work and to do the work if their figure is the lowest.

Ald. Graham seconded the motion.

Ald. Phelan moved an amendment that the work be done by day labor, as it has been for the past three years.

The city engineer said the present system had given good satisfaction.

Ald. Duffus seconded Ald. Phelan's amendment.

The amendment was lost by a vote of 3—2, and Ald. Metheral's motion carried.

ELECTRIC SIGNS

A request from W. J. O'Brien to erect a number of electric signs was referred to the city engineer, who will report to the committee.

SIDEWALKS WANTED.

Thomas Gunn and others drew attention to the bad condition of a board sidewalk on London street, between Park and Gilchrist streets. They asked that the new sidewalk be built outside the tree line.

It was decided to ask those who signed the notification to petition for a granolithic sidewalk.

Dr. Burnham protested against the building of a granolithic sidewalk on McDonnel street, from Water to George street. The city owns half of the property on which the sidewalk will front.

The city solicitor will be asked to look into the matter, and see if the city has authority to build the sidewalk.

It was decided to extend the arm on the stand-pipe near the corner of London and Water streets.

A petition was received for a sidewalk on Dublin street, from Ryerson Ritchie, and it was granted.

It was decided to grant the petition on motion of Ald. Duffus and Ald. Graham.

A petition was received for a granolithic sidewalk on the east side of Aylmer street, from Romaine to Westcott street.

The petition was granted, on motion of Ald. Duffus and Duncan.

Mr. McMillan, who resides on Townsend street, waited on the Board and stated that the height of the sidewalk in front of his property, kept the water in a low part of the lot, and also made it inconvenient to drive into his premises from the street.

The city engineer stated that a drain would relieve the flooding complained of, and he was authorized to have it constructed, on motion of Ald. Duffus and Ald. Duncan. In regards to an approach being needed, the Board decided to have a look at the place in question, before taking action.

There was some discussion as to where the sidewalk going should start work. Ald. Duffus and Phelan moved that it be on the south end of the city, and Ald. Duncan and Ald. Graham moved that the first work be done on the south side of Charlotte street, west of Park street. The latter resolution carried.

We have received several requests this week to have the Annex Dodger sent per mail each week, as there has been some dissatisfaction in the distribution of the bills lately, owing to the change of distributors. The new service will soon learn the ground and give better service. However, if you are desirous of always receiving the Annex dodger each week, send a posta to our advertising office and you will receive the same every Monday without fail. A postal card will do it.

A BEAUTIFUL FLORAL GIFT

Cabbage Bouquet Left for Rural Reporter of the Review

A cabbage gone bad but still containing some healthy vegetation, has been left in the Review office, with a special tag accompanying it and consigning it to the rural reporter. After a painstaking analysis the latter has come to the conclusion that the significance of the offering is owing to the fact that a large new growth of luxuriant light colored leaf is sprouting out of the old plant, which in the word of "The Mikado" song, was "sufficiently decayed" to have its consignment to the garbage heap effected at the earliest convenience.

THEATRICAL

IRVING'S NEW PLAY.

Laurence Irving and Mabel Hackney, late of the "Affinity," in Mr. Irving's adaptation of Eugene Brieux's play, "The Three Daughters of Monsieur Dupont," will follow Mary Mannering in "A Man's World," at the Comedy theatre, New York City, opening on April 13th.

The supporting company will include Dorothy Dorr, Emily Wakeman, Jeffreys Lewis, Isabel Waldron, Charles Millward, J. Hooker Wright, Alfred Cahill, Henry Scarborough, Pauline Whitson, Louise Wolfe, and Henry Mortimer.

MABEL BARRISON'S NEW PLAY.

While there is no similarity between "Lulu's Husbands" and "The Blue Mouse," as far as the story is concerned, it is an odd fact that Mabel Barrison, who created the role of "Paulette Divine," in the latter farce, is to play the role of an actress in the former. Lulu Rogers is to be the name of the stage lady. It will be remembered that "Paulette Divine," advertised a public auction of the effects of her "Inner-apartments," doing so to arouse public interest.

"Miss Rogers," inspired by a similar mental perversity, advertises for a husband, planning to "shake him" at the very moment they reach the altar. It is this wholesale matrimonial angling that draws the actress into the complications necessary to the life of the comedy and catches on her hook a Dr. Morrison (Harry Conor), who is the ideal incarnation of the beloved husband waiting for the first call of the lobster palace. Miss Barrison and Mr. Conor have been fortunately cast, and while the burden of the fun does not entirely rest with them it may be surmised that the director has made no mistake in alloting the centre of the stage to these two favourites.

The people of Peterborough should not miss hearing Master Wilfrid Morrison, the great boy soprano, at St. Andrew's, Friday, April 22nd.

DRAMATIZATION OF FAMOUS NOVEL

St Elmo an Attractive Offering in Play Form of Book That Has Entertained Millions

There are many people to-day who remember as if it were only yesterday the instant popularity achieved by "St. Elmo," the novel by Augusta Evans-Wilson. Forty years have elapsed since it was offered to the stage, but soon withdrawn at the request of the author. Now comes the interesting announcement that once more it is to be offered as a play, this time with the work of dramatization skillfully done, its stirring story of a clash of strong characters shaped into a vehicle for fine acting. A company well suited to the demands of Mrs. Wilson's characters has been organized and has entered upon a tour which people, fitted by long experience to judge, say is bound to prove a notable success.

St. Elmo Murray, Edna Earl and all the other important people of the story are shown true to the author's design. The play in the cities in which it has been presented has struck a new note in contemporaneous stage history.

Its visit to the Grand opera house next Saturday, April 16th, matinee and night, will be one of the season's notable events.

ANNUAL VESTRY MEETING OF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

The Celebrating of the 75th Anniversary of the Church is Proposed—Committee Will Arrange for the Procuring of a Chime of Bells—An Outline of the Work of the Year

The adjourned annual vestry meeting of St. John's church was held in the school house last night. The rector, Rev. Canon Davidson, presided. The different societies of the church presented their reports.

REPORTS OF SOCIETIES.

The King's Daughters reported proceeds to the amount of $89.58 as revenue from the tea rooms and the present balance of $18.20. The Chancel Guild reported a balance of $98.47, which is being held to put a new hardwood floor in the chancel. Mrs. Rush is the president.

The Girl's Guild reported outfits of clothing sent to the Mission school at Onion Lake and to Rev. F. C. Barber at Bobcaygeon. After all payments had been met a balance of $2.27 remained with the treasury. Miss L. Hall is the president of this society. The choir reported an average attendance of 36 throughout the year, with frequently an attendance of 50 out of 52 members. The Crucifixion has become recognized as an annual service and also the Daughter of Jarius. The new hymn book has been introduced at a cost of $50 and the choir are much pleased.

The Woman's Auxiliary reported a membership of 67. Mrs. P. Campbell has succeeded Mrs. Palmer as president. A bale of clothing was sent to Moose Fort and the members went to the Childrens' Shelter to sew. For the past ten years the W. A. has done all the collecting for the Diocesan missions, but now the Laymen's Missionary Society has arranged to collect the subscriptions of the men.

The Young People's Association, through Miss Morse reported 35 paid members who had paid the yearly fee of 25c. Mr. Devey is the president. Not much active church work was done during the year, but the Lawn Tennis Club had a successful year, and the social features of the society were well brought out. The revenue from the social in June amounted to $38.80.

Two classes were organized to study first aid in the ambulance work, under Dr. Cameron. There were 30 members present at the latest class. Several meetings were held by the society and Miss Humphries, of the Margaret Cox Home for Girls and Rev. J. R. McLean, of Colborne, made addresses. During the year the vestry has been furnished, the floor covered with a good linoleum and a large carpet rug placed in the centre of the room. Mr. S. Jay had also given an American organ for use there, and $16 has been raised to provide Bibles for the Sunday school. A large number of calls on the sick had been made and flowers distributed. A balance of $7.63 remains.

The Boy's Brotherhood through Kenneth Brown, reported a large number of visits to the younger members of the congregation. Frank Pigeon was the president.

CHURCH OPERATIONS.

After these reports had been received a most splendid report of the past year's operations in church work was made by the retiring church warden, Mr. Joseph Mills.

The old sheds at the rear of the church had been removed, and the Brock street front, the prettiest part of the property, will be further improved by the contemplated flower beds. The whole had been neatly fenced. Turpular lamps had replaced the old electric lights throughout the church, and $20 had been spent in new hymn books and prayer books. It was strongly urged that the members of the congregation supply themselves with these books, leaving the present supply for strangers and visitors. Reviewing the different items in the financial statement, he showed an increase of $150, as a result of the envelope system. More subscriptions were made by this system, and more attends had been taken in the church. Considerable money had been spent in improving the church fabric. Tuckpointing had been done where necessary, and improvements made to the roof. Altogether $280 had been spent in new work. Owing to the large increase in the number present at the early service and the proportionate increase in the offertory, it had been taken over by the church wardens for the general expenses of the service. A cheque was given to the rector for the relief of the poor as needed. The offertories at this service since July amounted to $80, and the third Sunday of each month went to the Chancel Guild. In the same way all monies paid for diocesan and all missionary enterprises had been paid through the church wardens, and for the first time this year the financial report showed the receipts of all monies contributed for the advance of the church. This plan was generally endorsed by the meeting. The election of church officers then took place.

Mr. W. F. Johnston was nominated by the rector as his warden, and took his new honors amidst much enthusiasm. Mr. Coulthard, as warden was elected by the people. The Advisory Committee was elected, as well as the sidesmen and ushers.

The Rectory Committee reported through Mr Campbell, that the rectory was now completed, and asked to be retired from office. A floating liability of $430 was left for the church wardens. The sum of $1,000 was paid upon the mortgage debt of the church, including $500 from the Easter offering and $500 from current funds. The wardens also recommended the granting of an honorarium of $500 to Mr. Davey for warmly appreciated extra services in the church, and also that a certain amount of coal be bought each year for the rectory. It was felt that this was beyond the income, provided by the parish.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

A discussion then took place as to the holding of the 75th anniversary of the opening of St. John's church. Among other events it was suggested that the past church wardens, now a large body of representative men, should done together, that the Advisory Committee should consider the possibility of freeing the pews. All the pews are now free, with the exception of the eleven o'clock service. It was felt that this would be a great advantage, and more in accordance with spiritual methods.

CHIME OF BELLS.

The rector next introduced the subject of procuring a chime of bells, and reported five subscriptions totalling $245 toward it, which would cost $1,250 or $1,550. Mr. Alex. Elliott had warmly interested himself in this movement, subscribing $100 and a resolution was introduced and carried, that a committee with Mr. Elliott as convenor, should take the matter up, and if successful in securing the required amount in subscriptions payable 1st of October, the work should be proceeded with, the chime to be procured from England to be installed by Sunday, November 1st. It was felt however, that the success of this enterprise rested not only with the church members, but also citizens outside the congregation, who might desire to have a chime in the city, it being understood that this chime would be used for all public occasions.

The balance of the report will appear to-morrow.

DR. YOUNG'S ACCOUNT AGAIN BEFORE BOARD OF HEALTH

The Board of Health held a regular meeting this morning and transacted considerable business.

Those present were:—Dr. McNulty, chairman; Dr. Young, Dr. Burnham and Mr. J. Edgar.

A letter was read from Dr. Hodgetts, Chief Health Officer of Ontario, regarding pamphlets respecting communicable diseases.—Received.

Mr. D. O'Connell was heard in regard to the claim of Dr. Young for services rendered last year in connection with the smallpox outbreak. He asked the Board of Health to recommend to the City Council that the account be paid as the act authorized the Council to make payments on the recommendation of the Board of Health.

Dr. Young was asked to supply an itemized statement of his account, which will be considered by the Board at the next meeting.

E. J. Hickey was heard and complained of cesspools on Bethune street north of Smith. He was advised to get up a petition for a sewer.

On motion of Dr. Burnham and Dr. Young, the question of the place and times for public vaccination was left with the chairman and the Medical Health Officer.

PRESENTATION OF TROPHIES AT ANNUAL TENNIS DINNER

An Interesting and Enjoyable Evening With the Lawn Tennis Association—A Ladies' Singles Tournament for this Season—Outside Matches to be Arranged

It was a happy gathering numbering forty that attended the first annual dinner of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association, at the Hotel National last evening, and which was a great success in every respect. The initial season of 1909 of the association, saw the game developed in this city as it has never been before. The inter-club and singles tournaments brought out a large number of players, who, with the experience gained by the competitions, will enter again this season with a better knowledge of the game. The beautiful challenge trophy, donated by Mr. E. D. Kerr, was won by the Y.M.C.A. club, and Mr. Kerr last evening occupied the unique position of being called upon to present this cup, and to be himself presented with the association's trophy, as winner of the singles tournament.

As the president, Mr. Harold Cluxton, stated, two more clubs will enter the inter-club competition this season. A single tournament for ladies and outside matches will be new departments of the association, and in taking this step it is felt that it speaks for still greater development of players and the game.

The dainty and appetizing repast prepared by mine host Denison was the subject of very substantial comment, and his kindness in furnishing an attractive menu card in honor of the Association was much appreciated. After all had done full justice to the many good things, the meeting was called to order, and with the popular and energetic president acting as chairman, the following programme was carried out:—

The toast to the King was proposed, and honored by the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. Cluxton next favored the gathering with a vocal solo, and Mr. H. B. Collier, secretary-treasurer of the Association, followed with the reading of his report, which showed a small balance on the right side and the winner of the two trophies as noted above. The report was encouraging, and, as Mr. Collier stated, the game had been developed, and greater success would be met with this season.

Mr. Cluxton in an able and interesting manner reviewed the past history of the game of tennis in the city and commented on the success which had attended the efforts of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association and paid a high tribute to the officers and representatives of the different clubs who had worked hard to promote its interests. After mentioning that outside games would be arranged for this season and that it would be necessary to arrange for a tournament for the ladies, Mr. Cluxton said that he hoped to see a district tournament in this city this fall, and that ultimately Peterborough would become the headquarters for the whole of Eastern Canada, and that a tournament for the championship of Canada would be played off there.

Mr. H. Roberts contributed a song, which was greatly appreciated.

In presenting the Challenge Trophy to the Y.M.C.A., Mr. E. D. Kerr, the donor, made a splendid speech, in which he expressed his pleasure at being present to congratulate the association on its success, and to make the presentation. "Of all the games I have played," said Mr. Kerr, "I know of no other which calls for the same amount of endurance, training and physical and mental effort as does the game of tennis. Tennis is the greatest game of them all." He spoke interestingly of the game, and enthusiastic applause broke out when he asked Dr. McPherson, on behalf of the winning club, to accept the trophy.

It must have been a reminder of past honors for the athlete of distinction, as Mr. Kerr neatly put it, and [illegible] good Fellow."

Dr. McPherson made a graceful reply. He thanked Mr. Kerr for the trophy, Mr. Kerr had always taken a deep interest in the sports of the city. He congratulated the officers on their faithful work and hoped that the coming season would be a greater success.

Mr. H. B. Collier in presenting the association's trophy to Mr. Kerr as champion of the singles tournament, said it was a genuine pleasure for him to do so. Mr. Kerr had held the championship of the city for the past eleven years and he had received but few laurels for the honor.

Mr. Kerr accepted the trophy and during the course of a short speech referred to the splendid competition throughout the tournament and of the plucky and steady game his final opponent, Mr. Rudolf of St. John's Club, had put up.

Mr. W. Coleman contributed a song that was heartily applauded.

First Year's Officers was proposed by Mr. H. G. Burnett and Mr. Wallace Wood responded.

In proposing the toast to the ladies Mr. R. J. Devey advocated a singles tournament for the ladies. The most pleasant hours spent last season, said Mr. Devey, were when the ladies were present.

The toast was responded to, and the election of officers for the coming season followed and resulted as follows:—

Hon. President—Mr. F. D. Kerr.
President—Mr. H. Cluxton.
Vice-President—Mr. H. G. Burnett.
Secretary—Mr. H. B. Collier.
Treasurer—Mr. W. Wood.
Manager of ladies' singles tournament—Mr. R. J. Devey.

A vote of thanks was tendered the entertainers of the evening and those instrumental in the success of the affair after which the gathering dispersed with the singing of God Save the King.

Canada's actual receipts for the fiscal year just closed were $98,662,974. The steamer Oriole of the Muskoka Lakes ran to Bracebridge yesterday.

SPORTING NEWS

JOHNSON MADE QUITE AN IMPRESSION AT BELLEVILLE

Belleville entertained a real world's champion Thursday in the person of Jack Johnson, the colored world's champion pugilist. Shortly after six o'clock last night the big black man came down from the station, accompanied by his wife, Pat Jennings, the local sporting impressario, and other sporting celebrities. The I.O.O.F. band met the party at the upper bridge and played them down street and to the hotel, the streets being crowded with people anxious to see the man who on July 4 next will battle with Jeffries for his title. The party received quite a warm reception and the celebrated "golden smile" of the colored champion was much in evidence. Good nature seemed to stick out all over Johnson.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE

At the Carman last night, Johnson appeared as the star attraction of an athletic entertainment. There was everything considered, a very large attendance, many people being present from outside places. The I.O.O.F. orchestra, in large numbers, led by Prof Denmark, played several tuneful selections. Mr. Wm. Carnew, opened the ball with a neat speech. Belleville sport-lovers, he said, owed a debt of gratitude to Mr. Jennings for giving them a chance to see world's championship boxers and runners without having to go away from home.

Mr. J. Halpany came next with some remarks about pugilistic matters and finished by giving a recitation.

Pat Jennings then made a speech, saying among other things that Johnson had given up an $1,800 engagement in Chicago, in order to keep his Belleville date, for which there was no contract, but only his word.

Next came the star attraction of the evening, Jack Johnson and his sparring partner, Kid Cutler, who went four rounds, some of them a minute and a half in length, others a little longer. Cutler was a chunky young white man, and a good boxer, but he was outmixed and outclassed by Johnson. When the latter shed his bathrobe and faced the audience he surely looked like a fighting machine. Tremendous shoulders and arm muscles. No neck to speak of, the legs of a sprinter, and no superfluous flesh anywhere. That about describes the colored man's appearance. In the bout he had the smaller white man completely at his mercy, blocked all his leads and toyed with him. Johnson's defensive work in the clinches was perfect, and he turned in his famous upper-cut loose a few times, but, of course, with no steam behind the blows. The bout was interesting as showing what Jeffries will have to contend with next July. Of course Jeffries won't shape up like Kid Cutler either. Let us not forget that. But this fact sticks out after one has seen Johnson in action: The man who beats him at the pugilistic game will have to go fast and face a man as full of tricks as a box of monkeys.

At the conclusion of the bout, Johnson was called on for a speech, and responded. He has a smooth voice and his soft Southern drawl and rather refined manner of speaking were listened to with pleasure. He talked like a man of fair education. Naturally he spoke of the coming great event in California. It would, he said, be a match between himself and one of the best men ever seen in the ring. Johnson said he had always battled on the level, and had always tried to be manly and fair. He was glad to be in Belleville. He liked Canada and Canadians, and had always found them square and manly men. Talking about his record, Johnson claimed he had met all the best men, and had done all that the sporting public had asked him to do. He believed the coming battle on July 4th would be one of the greatest in the history of the ring. He hoped it would be a fair contest between man and man, that nothing but honorable methods would prevail and that the best man would win.

The audience generously applauded the big gladiator, and then went home.

At the conclusion of the entertainment a banquet was held at the Windsor hotel, at which Mr. "Jack" Johnson was the guest of honor. Many prominent citizens were present, and a most enjoyable time was spent by all present.

FOOTBALL

A meeting of the Peterborough Association football club will be held in the Y.M.C.A. to-morrow night at eight o'clock. All those wishing to join the club or play the game this season are requested to attend.

First Arrival at Buffalo.

Buffalo, April 12.—Steamer Mary H. Boyce arrived here yesterday afternoon from Detroit, opening navigation for the season. From Dunkirk down she forced her way through soft ice, but off Point Abino she encountered heavy ice and was caught and held fast for 24 hours.

Comet Makes Them Sleepy.

Evansville, Ind., April 12.—Scores of people in this community complain that they are unable to get enough sleep; in fact, in several instances people have slept for 15 or 24 hours and still were sleepy. They attribute this inclination to sleep to Halley's comet.

Bailiff Seized Church.

Ottawa, April 12.—It transpired at the annual vestry meeting of St. Barnabas (Anglican) Church last night that a bailiff had quite recently entered the church and made a seizure for the water rates. He was got rid of by a payment of half the debt due.

Charged With Assault.

Hamilton, April 12.—Frank Anderson, giving his address as 57 North John street, was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of assaulting and robbing Miss Edith Sauer at the head of John street last Friday evening. Anderson was serving a term for a similar offence and was out on parole.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

GOOD WATERING TANK.

Stockman Suggests One of Concrete That is Serviceable and Durable.

One thing necessary on a well regulated farm is a good watering tank for the stock. Many farmers use no judgment and build their tanks of wood, and in a short time they find them almost useless and are compelled to go to the expense of building others, making the proposition a costly one. Now, as this is expensive, why not construct one of concrete? It can be had at small cost and is very durable in all kinds of weather. A well known stockman gives the following information regarding the construction of a round concrete tank: It can be made any size desired, is easily built and most satisfactory, as animals can surround it and drink without troubling one another. To build such a tank one simply sets a stick, or, better, an iron bar or a pipe, in the earth at the center of the place the tank is to be; the part that makes the form round should be wired. This forming piece is like a gate; it is half as long as the tank is to be inside, and its outer end slopes in a curve as the builder wishes to have the shape of the tank. Then sand, earth or clay is piled up about the circle, and the form is swung around, and its edge cuts off the surplus, leaving the form finally as round and smooth as the inside of a bowl. This may be plastered with cement and sand; then concrete is thrown against it to make a wall six inches or eight inches thick, with a heavy reenforcement about the upper edge—a cable three-quarters of an inch in diameter or a rod bent to shape. The whole may be accomplished in a day if all goes well.

A ROUND CONCRETE WATERING TANK.

Making Good Cottage Cheese.

Have the milk at 70 to 80 degrees Measure out pure hydrochloric acid of specific gravity 1.20 at the rate of ten ounces for a hundred pounds of milk. Dilute with ten times its weight of cold water and add to milk gradually, stirring the milk constantly while the acid is being added. Continue the stirring until the curd separates completely, leaving a clear whey entirely free from milkiness. The whey is then removed from the curd and the operation completed, as before. In order to get the proper flavor it will be necessary to mix with the curd some sour, thick milk or cream. The method does not give as satisfactory results as the others described.

Flavor and texture are the most important qualities in cottage cheese. The flavor should be that of mildly sour milk or well ripened cream. There should be an entire absence of all objectionable flavor, such as bitter taste, stable flavor, etc. If the cheese tastes too sour it is usually due to keeping too much whey in the curd. The use of a starter is apt to insure the right kind of flavor. The texture of cottage cheese is largely dependent on the amount of moisture in the cheese. When the percentage of moisture is much below 70 the cheese is harsh, dry and sawdust-like. The right texture of cottage cheese is smooth and free from grittiness.

Proper Way to Veal Calves.

Calves that are to be vealed should receive whole milk for at least two or three weeks. It may seem a little expensive to feed whole milk for so long a period, but we believe that if the calves are to be vealed at all it pays to follow this system rather than attempt to raise them entirely upon skimmilk. The first three or four days the milk from the mother is not fit for other purposes except to use for her calf. If account is kept of all the whole milk used it will be found that it will not amount to a great deal. Gradually changing at the end of the second or third week to skimmilk and permitting the calf to eat all the dry grain and mixing a little blood meal in the skimmilk is probably as good a practice as any to follow.

Bonemeal For Hogs.

Because of the variability of the phosphorus content of different feeds and of different soils and of the water of different localities there is no better way to feed bonemeal than to put it into a trough and set this where the pigs can have free access to it at all times. Bonemeal, however, should not be fed as the only mineral substance. The pig should also have salt, air slaked lime, charcoal and hardwood ashes. These may all be fed the same as specified for bonemeal—namely, separately in a trough or in different parts of the same trough. The pig can then help himself to the desirable quantity of the various ingredients that his metabolism calls for.

Rustling Ability of Milk Goats.

The milk goats, like all goats, can make a living on brushy and hilly land where most all other animals would starve. They are very beneficial to land in cleaning it of weeds, sprouts and brush. They cannot endure low, wet land, but thrive perfectly on rough and hilly land. Those giving milk should be fed on grass, fodder and wheat bran, but no grain of any kind.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, April 11.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stocks Yards West End Market receipts last week were 2600 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 2500 calves, and offerings this morning were 800 cattle, 75 sheep and lambs, 900 hogs and 500 calves.

A feature of the trade continues to be the strong undertone to the market. Cattle prices have scored a further advance of 25c per cwt. since this day week, attributed to active demand for cattle in the Toronto market from American exporters, there being fully one hundred carloads shipped thru here last week for export via United States ports.

Cables from Liverpool on Saturday were stronger and noted a further advance in prices of ¼c per lb., with sales of Canadians at 14⅛c to 14¼c per lb., but advices from London were weaker, and the average price realized for Canadians and Americans was ½c per lb. lower than a week ago.

Sales of some extra choice, heavy steers were made to-day at 7c; choice at 6¾c to 6¾c; good at 6¼c to 6½c; fairly good at 5¾c to 6c; fair at 5½c to 5¾c; medium at 4¾c to 5c, and common at 4c to 4½c per lb. Among the offerings there were some very heavy choice bulls, for which holders were asking as high as 5¾ to 6¼c per lb. Hog prices were steady. The supply was not plentiful, but ample for all requirements, and sales of selected lots from Toronto were made at $10.50, and from east of Toronto at $10 to $10.25. Supplies of calves were small and demand good, and sales were made at from $2 to $5 each. The market for sheep and lambs was very quiet, as few are coming forward. Sheep sold at 6c per lb., and lambs at from $4 to $8 each.

Combining of Materials and Colors a Feature of the Newest Gowns

BY A. T. ASHMORE.

COMBINING different materials is one of the season's styles that has apparently met with most marked approval. There is much that is practical in the idea, for often the material most satisfactory for skirt and coat is quite impossible for the waist, and a thinner fabric for the waist would be impracticable in a skirt. Foulard and serge, cloth and satin make effective combinations. Voile de soie and liberty satin is another popular combination, and the manufacturers have most kindly furnished the same shades in all leading colors, so that the task of selecting just the right shades is not so difficult as might be expected.

Simple and dainty but smart and becoming is one of the models for a voile de soie and liberty satin gown. The upper part of the skirt and the lower part of the waist are of the voile de soie, while the lower part of the skirt and the yoke, upper sleeves and pleat in the front of the waist are of the satin. The waist line is in its normal position, the belt of crushed satin or velvet, finished with a fancy buckle. All the lines of this gown are exceedingly simple, but it is a simplicity that implies perfection, taste and good dressmaking.

Cloth and chiffon are not a new combination of materials, but this year the method by which they are made up is absolutely new. All the cloths used at present are of the softest, lightest weave, and in truth cachemire de soie is generally chosen in preference if the style of gown demands any draped folds, for the draperies must all fall in soft, graceful lines not possible if any too heavy or thick material is chosen. The body of the waist made in chiffon is so much cooler and more comfortable in warm weather, even though it must be worn over a tissue silk perfect fitting waist, that it is only remarkable the fashion did not gain stronger foothold long since. A charming model of a cloth and chiffon gown to made in one of the newest shades of drop rose color. Over the silk lining is a plain skirt of chiffon. The double overskirt of cachemire de soie or cloth is caught up at the left side with a band satin ribbon that starts from under the pointed girdle of satin. The waist of chiffon is in the new cuirass but has sleeve and waist in one. Broad satin bands embroidered in silk the same color as the gown trim skirt and waist, and if all one color is too trying fiber bands of embroidered heavy cream lace are substituted.

Mauve, blue and gray are three other colors chosen for this model, which has also been copied in black with success.

All black gowns are always smart in summer, when the thin transparent materials in black are in fascinating variety. A gown in chiffon combined with cachemire de soie or liberty satin, and most charming results are obtained. Voile de soie is but a trifle heavier than chiffon, but in both materials there are many different qualities, each and all of which combine perfectly with heavier fabrics. Made over white pompadour silk, satin or net or the plain cloth of silver or gold or silver net the most delightfully cool and mysterious effects of coloring can be obtained, so that the all black gown can be varied in many ways. In all black it can be very smart and original simply by combining different materials, while, as before stated, the colored linings add a most unusual and charming color effect. Some women contend the all black gown has a depressing effect upon their spirits. This season they cannot but admit its charm, for not only can the too sombre appearance they object to be relieved by the colored lining, but by a touch of color in the waist or belt, for belts of contrasting color are once again popular.

Elaborate Styles in Favor.

The elaborate and the simple are displayed in sharp contrast this season, but that the elaborate designs are the most popular for the moment cannot be gainsaid, and the woman who rejoices in simple lines and the plainer effects has a hard task to find just what she wants to copy in the latest models that are displayed.

Fortunately there are still remaining conservative tailors who cannot be swerved from their fixed belief in certain regulation styles, that vary surprisingly little from year to year, so that the plain tailor costume is always a good investment, but it must be correct in line and coat and skirt costumes. Sleeves are larger than last season, and for the more elaborate costumes the three-quarter length sleeve in popular, but with the plain costume only the regulation length coat sleeve is considered correct.

The long shawl rever has given way to the turned down velvet collar and either narrow, short revers or no revers at all. Pockets are rather distinctive of the latest fashions and are edged with a piping of velvet to match the collar, while a contrast in the color is very smart. A light apricot serge or cloth is trimmed with velvet collar and pipings of a much darker shade, even a deep red being used, the same idea being carried out in gray or light tan, with darker gray and brown respectively.

The finish of the waist at the waist line demands close attention in the new gowns; the one piece gown still lives, though there are many more waist and skirt gowns made up than there were last year, but always, be it understood, so constructed that the belt hides the joining of the two. While the normal waist line is once again fashionable, long waisted effects are not yet popular and the belts are wide and high on the waist.

Draped satin and silk belts and bodices are for the moment popular. Whether they will so continue cannot be told, for it is always the most becoming that is chosen. Then there is more of a full soft effect fashionable this season; all waists show a slight blouse over the belt, indicating rather than outlining the figure. The soft materials are especially effective in these styles, while the heavier are best for the tighter fitting draped waists.

Are skirts, more fashionable long or short? is a question anxiously asked of Home Fashion. Short for the street, long for the house, is the almost too comprehensive answer to such inquiries. The practical, general wear street gown is short, but not exaggeratedly so; the afternoon reception gown is far quieter made long, but again not of exaggerated length. Foulard, voile de soie and gowns of light materials have short skirts, short enough to just clear the ground, but these are not of the elaborate order suitable for formal afternoon entertainments.

It is claimed by the practical woman that a gown with two skirts, one short and one long, is a wonderful investment. The plan is far more feasible for winter than for summer, but can be carried out in summer materials. Another novel practical scheme is the princess gown of liberty satin, over which are worn different coats of lace, chiffon or voile. As to the last fashion is best carried out when coats or overdresses—for such they really are most often, ranging from 3 inches upward, it can scarcely be claimed as an economical possibility for the summer summer wardrobe, but it is smart for all the same.

PRACTICAL FASHIONS FOR HOME DRESSMAKING

FOULARD GOWN WITH CLOTH JACKET.

FOULARD GOWN WITH CLOTH JACKET.

At the first glance the double skirt as exhibited in the latest fashions presents many difficulties for home dressmaking, but that double skirts are fashionable this season must be admitted, and the problem how to make them must be solved. There must be a perfect fitting drop skirt; this means that the drop skirt must fit smoothly in the front and sides. At the back also there must be no fullness, but there must be sufficient width to prevent the skirt from cutting in below the hips; the inverted pleats at the back will obviate this difficulty. For the tunic overskirt effect there must be a wide band or scant flounce of the material sewed on the drop skirt. This will hang best if not fastened to the hem of the drop skirt but finished by itself; then it is not difficult to make the tunic or overskirt separate.

With the lower cut corset and the lower waist some support to the bust is as a rule necessary to make the waist, unless perfectly boned or fitted, look well, but there are several new brassieres or bust supporters this year that are very well cut and which take the place of a fitted lining. Then it is well worth the trouble for every woman to have made by some dressmaker who can cut well and who knows the customer's lines a perfect fitting lining or corset cover of heavy linen or silk.

COLLEGIATE AMATEURS GAVE ADMIRABLE PRESENTATION

"Little Bob" a Happy Comedy Was Vehicle that Proviced Genuine Entertainment—Different Characterizations Were Excellently Given—Review of Performance

Artistically and financially the presentation of the hilarious comedy, "Mr. Bob," by the pupils of the Collegiate Institute, in the assembly room of the school last evening, was a distinct triumph. The smoothness with which the production was given demonstrated in no uncertain manner that the Collegiate Institute possesses a very high average of amateur talent, and the student body is to be congratulated upon having in its midst such clever young people. The interest taken in the work of the pupils was shown by the huge audience which attended the accommodation of the spacious hall being taxed to its utmost and the enjoyment of those present was unmistakably indicated by the continuous laughter and applause which ran through the audience, and was a constant accompaniment to the performance.

The pupils taking part are to be congratulated first upon their excellent choice of a vehicle for their entertainment, and secondly, upon the splendid manner in which they staged the production. A more suitable playlet for such a purpose could not have been selected. "Mr. Bob" is a delightful little comedy, full of humorous complications and absurd situations, hinged, of course, upon the inevitable basis of mistaken identity, with bright and witty lines, and with no dramatic climaxes that are liable to make too exacting demands upon the ability of young artists. At the same time it affords many opportunities for bright work, and it may be said that last night's cast took full advantage of the openings offered. The result was a very funny and wholly pleasing presentation, the success of which reflects the greatest credit upon those taking part.

Space does not permit of a synopsis of the action, but it is sufficient, perhaps, to say that the story revolves around a series of ridiculous mixups, in which everybody is taken for everybody else, with most amusing results. Things are in a bad tangle for a while, but, eventually, everything is smoothed out and the ending is of the usual happy variety.

The company of seven is to be warmly praised upon the ease and finish with which they presented the little farce. Especially are the members to be commended for the clearness of their enunciation. Usually with embryo dramatic companies the leaden weight of self-consciousness leads the average inexperienced actor to indistinct articulation that is sometimes almost painful in its effect upon the audience, but there was nothing of that in evidence last night. The lines were given clearly and distinctly so that those at the rear of the hall had not the slightest difficulty in following the dialogue. The work of the Philomathean Society, in developing a spirit of self-confidence in its members so that they are at ease before the public was never more clearly demonstrated than by the work of the cast last night. The players seemed to have grasped the purpose and meaning of the lines, and gave an intelligent and artistic characterization of the farce.

Miss Mary White, as "Katherine," appeared perfectly at home in the part, and gave a splendid interpretation, free from the slightest symptom of stage fright. Miss Maisie Armstrong had the role of Miss Bryant, otherwise "Mr. Bob," and her work throughout was finished and clever. Miss Gertrude Tunney, as Aunt Becky, a lady whose strong friendship for felines has much to do with the action of the comedy, was sincere and effective in her methods, and got the most out of the part. Miss Marjorie Munn gave a bright character sketch of Peggy, a stage-struck house maid, whose humorous ambitions were responsible for much amusement. Roy Dixon handled the role of Philip, the young college graduate, with a dashing assurance and confidence that was remarkable, considering that it was his first appearance in such a part. He showed confidence and poise, and his work throughout was of superior calibre. Mr. John Harstone was cast as a law clerk, with the facility to get mistaken for someone else, and this part, a splendid comedy one, was thoroughly looked after by Mr. Harstone. Mr. Alex. Primeau gave a most creditable characterization of the part of Jenkins, the pompous butler, his accent and his acting being alike meritorious.

The production was excellently staged and was seen in two acts, the scene in each case being the same. The stage was effectively and artistically arranged, and the presentation went through without an untoward incident to mar the success of the evening.

The Collegiate Institute orchestra which, by the way, continues to show marked improvement on its every appearance, added to the enjoyment of the occasion by several numbers, and the audience was generous in its applause. The organization, the membership of which is confined solely to pupils of the Collegiate, is a credit to the school.

The Collegiate Institute pupils are indeed to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts, and it was pleasing to see their enterprise recognized and approved of by such a splendid audience.

Mr. and Mrs. Petitt are to be congratulated upon their success in training the scholars. Between the acts Mrs. Petitt was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers.

The cast was as follows:

Miss Rebecca Loke—Miss Gertrude Tunney.
Philip Royson, her nephew—Roy Dickson.
Catherine Rogers, her Niece—Myra White.
Robert Brown, law clerk—John Harstone.
Marion Bryant, "Mr. Bob"—Maisie Armstrong.
Pattie, the maid—Marjorie Munn.
Jenkins, the butler—Alex. Primeau.

WOMEN BARRED

Railway Will Employ No More Female Stenographers

Pittsburg, April 9.—The Baltimore & Ohio railway will in future employ no more women for employment in any capacity. It has been decided that the duties in a railroad office can be handled better by men and boys. The women who are already on the pay rolls, it is stated, will be retained as long as they desire to hold their positions, or so long as they do the work for which they are hired, but once they leave their places will be taken by men.

The new order has been made public through the rejection of several women who applied for positions. They were told that an executive order had gone into effect all over the system prohibiting the future employment of a woman on the road.

It has been roughly estimated that thirty per cent. more work can be gotten from the average young man stenographer than from a girl in the same position, and that the work was more carefully handled. The same thing applies to other departments.

A heavy, dull pain had settled across the small of it and caused me almost constant suffering. I became weak and languid. I was run down generally and had little ambition to move around. Headaches were frequent and often accompanied by spells of dizziness. Spots would dazzle before my eyes, and I would be unable to see. I had tried numerous remedies without getting results. BRILLIANT ADDRESS

The auditorium of Knox Church was filled to the doors last evening on the occasion of a very enjoyable shredded wheat banquet, held on the third anniversary of the church. Supper was served from six o'clock until 8.30, and the genial and courteous waitresses were kept busy attending to the wants of the guests. The menu was a choice one and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Every course provided shredded wheat in some different form and it was shown that it was a very palatable food. The banquet was given by the Canadian Shredded Wheat Co., Limited, and the affair was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the church. After the large gathering had partaken of the excellent spread provided a programme of rare interest was presented. The feature of the evening was the address by Rev. A. Logan Geggie pastor of Parkdale Presbyterian church, Toronto, on "Wit and Humor." Mr. Geggie is an exceedingly interesting speaker, and by his very humorous remarks, kept his audience in a very happy mood.

Mr. Geggie stated in the course of his remarks, that humor held an important place in human nature. He thought a man suffered a great loss who had not the sense of humor. He pointed out what a great faculty it was for a man to possess. He contrasted the gift of humor in persons of various countries. The Scotch, he believed, had the truest sense of humor. It had been gained as the result of the hardest experiences, and was therefore truer than in other countries.

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, rector of St. Luke's church, was also present, and joined in a few remarks of congratulation to the ladies of the church on the success of the evening's entertainment. Rev. W. C. Riddiford and Rev. J. G. Potter conveyed greetings from their respective churches. They also congratulated the church on its attaining the third anniversary. During the evening musical numbers were given by the church orchestra, Miss C. Chiles contributing a solo on the piano. A Scotch selection by the male quartette was also given. An address on "Natural Food" was given by Mr. J. Hewitt, Mr. Hazeldine, of Toronto, assisted in the entertainment.

A vote of thanks was moved to Rev. Mr. Geggie, and to The Shredded Wheat Company, after which the evening was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

A. BLADE & SON'S FINE NEW GREENHOUSES

Splendid Display of New Flowers Under 4500 Feet of Glass—A Modern Equipment.

"The annual miracle has begun, the slender red spine of the tulip and the rounded yellow spatula of the narcissus are gently yet persistently forcing their passage through the clodded earth, and are in process of being changed into the loveliest shades of leafage by the wonderful 'chemistry of sunshine.' Our hope is for a springtime gladdened by beautiful flowers. Do we do wrong then to project faith, which we usually term a quality of understanding, into the vegetable kingdom, and say that the bulbs teach us a lesson in its application.

A visitor to the new greenhouse of Messrs. A. Blade & Son, situated on the corner of Park and Dublin street, will enjoy a delightful hour, inspecting the beautiful show of flowering plants, foliage plants, ferns and palms, as well as the new modern structure and up-to-date methods for the propagation and culture of this class stock.

Everything is at present in fine shape at these greenhouses, and looks promising for a good season's trade. The new crop is coming on splendidly, and the extensive display of rich and varied specimens of flowering and foliage plants comprise collections of the favorite standards and many new and highly cultivated specimens, specially introduced by Blade & Son.

FEATURES OF THE NEW STOCK.

Blade's new crop has been grown from the choicest stock procurable from the most reliable growers, and the result has been most gratifying. Specially worthy of mention is the new variety of asters known as the "Rochester light pink," which has a strong robust growth and branching habit. The ideal flower grows to six inches in diameter when forced to its best. There are also 5,000 geraniums, principally of the John Doyle and S. A. Nutt variety, which make a brilliant showing. Other varieties are in begonias, stocks, tuberoses, canas, petunias, nasturtiums, salvias, balsams, pansies, zinnas, and a fine showing of the new plumose fern. Roses and carnations will occupy a prominent feature as well as many other blooming plants. There are also over 2,000 foliage plants ready for garden growers. Large quantities of early vegetable bedding—out plants in boxes and pots are coming on rapidly to be ready for the kitchen garden, such as celery, tomato, cabbage, cauliflower and onion seedlings.

THE NEW GREENHOUSE PROPERTY.

The property secured by A. Blade & Son for greenhouse purposes consists of two acres of fine land, forming an eligible situation, for floriculture, and runs north of Dublin street and east from Park street. Over 4,500 square feet of glass has been already been put up in the two greenhouses leaving room for further enlargements. A modern system of overhead steam heating has been installed, and patent ventilators, which have proved highly satisfactory.

A suitable office and work room are conveniently situated, and facilities for packing and storing provided. Orders for floral designs, cut flowers, filling hanging baskets, verandah boxes and vases, receive prompt attention and between two and three hundred urns are already in for filling.

Blade & Son wish to remind the public that they are in no way connected with the "West End Greenhouses." Their telephone is 508.

IS LEAVING FOR FORT WILLIAM

Mr. Amos McWilliams Will be Much Missed in the City

Mr. Amos McWilliams leaves to-morrow afternoon for Fort William where a position awaits him. He will be much missed in Peterborough, especially in athletic circles, as he was proficient in many lines of sport. He played with the Peterborough intermediate O. H. A. team about seven years ago, replacing Fred Whitecroft when the latter went to Midland. Two years ago "Mac" played with the Strathconas and the intermediate O.H.A. team and during the hockey season just closed he was a member of the West Ends, runners-up for the city league championship. He is also some baseball player, leading the batting order for the Lindsay team when they won the Midland league championship several years ago. He was also a member of the Charlotte street team that won the Guild league championship for several times in succession.

Mr. McWilliams will have the best wishes of Peterborough citizens for his success at Fort William.

No woman should miss special lecture course on Eugenics by Mr. McCuaig, Young Women's Christian Association, commencing on Wednesday, 4.15 p. m.

CONSERVATIVE MEMBERS HOLD CAUCUS AT OTTAWA

Leader and Older Members of Party Remained in the House and the Young Men Had Free Hand—Borden-Monk Controversy.

Ottawa, April 13.—While Leader Borden, Hon. John Haggart, Mr. Blain, and several others of the senior members of the Opposition sat in the Commons yesterday morning and listened to Hon. Mackenzie King explain his bill for the control of combines and mergers, the other members of the Opposition sat in caucus from 10.30 until 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon and discussed party domestic affairs generally. After nearly three hours of consultation the official announcement was made at the adjournment that the caucus had decided that the reports which have been appearing for the most part in their own press during the past fortnight as to family squabbles and general disorganization were unfounded in fact, and that a unanimous resolution had been passed declaring unswerving loyalty to Mr. Borden.

The uniting of the party by resolution is, however, not regarded generally as marking by any means the end of the present dissensions within the ranks over the questions of leadership and policy. The question of the future relationship of Messrs. Foster and Monk to the party organization is left in abeyance, but it is understood that Mr. Borden is left with a free hand to carry out any reorganization he may deem desirable. His protest against lack of discipline and a united front on matters of party policy has been thus far effective.

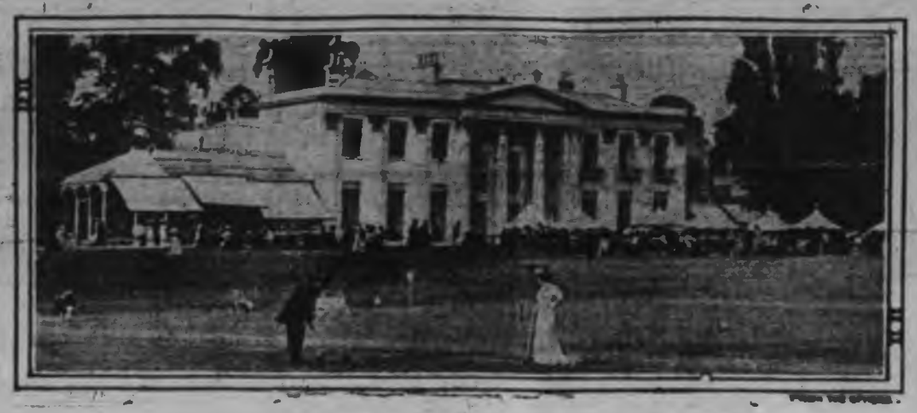
The question of the date of holding the proposed Federal convention was also discussed. The majority of the members seem to favor holding the convention next September or November instead of in June as originally proposed.

Borden to Monk.

Montreal, April 13.—The meeting at the Lafontaine Club last night turned out to be a harmless affair. The movement was started by the Club Monk, the members of which have been wanting for years past to proclaim Mr. Monk the leader of the party in the Dominion. They were induced, however, to hold their meeting in the head-centre of the party, and their wings were clipped.

A resolution was passed authorizing a reception to Mr. Monk when he returns from the south, but no one appeared to know when that would take place.

Charles Beaubien also received a despatch from R. L. Borden, saying that although he and Mr. Monk had differed on the navy bill, they were still warm friends, and he gave an absolute denial to the stories that Monk was attempting to sap his leadership.



THE HURLINGHAM POLO CLUB, LONDON, ENG.

BILL AGAINST COMBINES DISCUSSED IN COMMONS

Investigation and Publicity Are the Main Features of the Labor Minister's Proposed Act, Which Gets Its Second Reading.

Ottawa, April 13.—Hon. Mackenzie King's bill, which aims at controlling combines and mergers which unduly enhance prices, got a second reading in the Commons last night, but not much headway was made in committee because of the demand of Opposition members that the bill should be sent to a special committee, where all interests involved could be heard.

To this the Minister would not agree and just before the House rose a somewhat heated discussion arose over a remark by Mr. King to the effect that, while the Liberal members desired to improve the bill, it looked as though the Opposition was desirous of preventing it becoming law this session. This was denied by several members.

In reply to a question put by Mr. Blain, he said that no good object could be hereby served by sending the bill to a special committee, and if such a course were adopted it could not become law this session.

Hon. John Haggart asked if these combines had been injurious to the public. Mr. King replied that he had no evidence, but in some instances it was the case.

From the attitude of the public towards railways, the people were not opposed to large combinations as such, but the people were looking to the Government to do with the large combinations, as was done with the railway companies by the institution of the Railway Commission.

Mr. King reviewed efforts previously made to deal with the question of combines and mentioned that made by the late Clarke Wallace and committee which, after sitting for two and a half months, had reported on thirteen different combines. The fact that men engaged in these combines had been pursued as criminals under the criminal code had militated against an effective handling of these questions. This bill would create investigation. Better results would be obtained by publicity rather than by penalty.

Dr. Sproule (East Grey) and Uriah Wilson (Lennox) mentioned instances in which complete evidence in the leather and lumber combines had been given to the public, yet nothing was done. In the latter case Mr. Wilson said the unreasonable reply of Mr. Fielding was that he would supply the court if Mr. Wilson would supply the evidence.

Mr. King stated that the cost of the investigation would be met by the Government. The expenses of counsel for both parties would be authorised, as well as all other necessary expense. It was unfair to put the onus of an investigation on any group of people. Unfairness, for instance, had been done to the grocers' guild. Prominent men had been standing before the community for four years as defendants in a criminal prosecution.

E. N. Lewis (West Huron) argued for a permanent board of investigation.

Dr. Clark, the Liberal member for Red Deer, blamed the increased cost of living on protection. In England there was no increased cost; a man got value for his money there. Canada had an increased cost because of the moderate tariff; but the United States had a greatly increased cost because of high protection. He doubted the utility and possibility of the means suggested. The Government by its fiscal policy had made the whole country a huge trust. The Government took $50 from the consumer for every $50 it wanted to spend on the public service. Nothing much was heard of combines in England, where freedom of commerce made them impossible.

The bill was given a second reading, and in committee George Taylor, Mr. Bristol, Mr. Barker and Major Currie urged that the bill be sent to a special committee, the latter saying it had been so agreed between the chief whips. This was denied by both Mr. King and Mr. Pardee.

Major Currie argued that under the terms of the bill, third degree methods could be used on manufacturers and others and criminal proceedings subsequently instituted. As the liberty of the subject was involved, the matter should be considered by a special committee.

James Conmee supported the bill. Business men would be protected by the bill, which calls for a preliminary hearing before a judge of the higher court, he said. The bill looked to him like a timely measure.

Hon. Mackenzie King's resolution, on which the bill is based, declares it expedient that there be an investigation of combines, monopolies, trusts and mergers, which may enhance prices or restrict competition to the detriment of consumers, and to provide for the appointment of boards of investigation. If the bill goes through as drafted the investigation will be very general.

Mr. King, in introducing it, dealt with the cost of living: people had experienced a great rise in prices during the last few years, and they had observed at the same time a great increase in the formation of combines and trusts. The bill was intended to place some restraint on these trusts on behalf of the public, who have helped to make the combines possible.

There were 173 commodities which had increased 26 per cent. in price from 1880 to 1900 and 40 per cent. from 1896 onward. The increase in grain, fodder, animals and meat had been higher than the average, being from 30 to 50 per cent.

He submitted that in the United States at present of the industrial trusts there are: 15 with a capital of over $100,000,000; 33 with a capital of over $50,000,000; 165 with a capital of over $10,000,000; 45 with a capital of over $5,000,000. Of the franchise trusts, 16 have over $100,000,000, and 150 over $5,000,000.

Turning to Canada, Mr. King pointed out that of late years many great mergers have been formed and were in course of formation, simultaneously with the increased cost of living.

EXPOSURE IS FATAL

No Blame is Attached to Mother in Hamilton Infant Tragedy.

Hamilton, April 13.—The jury which enquired into the cause of the death of the infant found by Chief Twiss on April 1, in an outhouse at Bullock's Corners, decided as follows: "That the child was born in the outhouse of Harry Robbins' house, and belonged to Lizzie Corcoran, and died from shock and exposure, no blame being attachable to the mother." Witnesses called at the inquest in Dundas last night were Earl Moxley, who swore that Mrs. Robbins asked him to get her husband on the 'phone at Bertram's works; Mrs. Greitmire, who attended the Corcoran girl after confinement, and Chief Twiss, who gave details of the finding of the body under revolting conditions. Crown Attorney Washington said that perhaps the girl might be considered as amenable to prosecution under the section in the code dealing with negligence of coming mothers to procure proper medical assistance, and collusion to get rid of a child. He described the conduct of Mrs. Robbins, at whose house the child was born, as "brutal and unfeeling," but pointed out that she could not be criminally prosecuted on that account, though she could be if collusion to hide the birth of the child was proved. It is understood that the crown has no intention of dropping the case at this point.

TEMPERANCE BILL IN NOVA SCOTIA

Halifax, N.S., April 13.—The prohibition bill was introduced by the Government in the House of Assembly yesterday afternoon.

The penalty for violation of the act is $50, or one month's imprisonment; for the second offence, $100 or two months; for the third offence, four months' imprisonment without the option of a fine.

Regarding the City of Halifax, after the expiration of the present licenses, the number granted shall not exceed seventy, and after the census of 1911, one license only may be granted for every thousand residents.

NO TRACES OF COOK ON MT. McKINLEY

Fairbanks, Alaska, April 13.—The Fairbanks expedition to Mount McKinley, the highest peak in North America, reached the summit April 3 after a climb of one month from the base, it was announced yesterday. No traces of Dr. Fred. A. Cook's alleged ascent were found.

Four camps were established during the ascent and a trail was blazed all the way to the crest. Up to 12,000 feet the climbing did not present unusual difficulties. For the next 4,000 feet the way led over a steep ice field, which at first seemed to forbid further progress, but through which, upon exploration, it was found possible to locate a path.

The final dash to the top was made from the 16,000 foot camp.

Mount McKinley terminates in twin peaks of equal height, one somewhat rounded and covered with snow, the other composed of bare and wind-swept rocks.

The expedition, which was provided with Dr. Cook's maps and data, endeavored to follow his supposed route, but utterly failed to verify any part of his story of an ascent.

JURY AT COBOURG BRINGS IN MANSLAUGHTER VERDICT

Jury After Nearly Three Hours Agrees on Verdict in Case of George Manuro, the Navvy, Who Killed Two Compatriots in a Drunken Row.

Cobourg, April 13.—At 1.30 this morning the jury in the case of George Manuro, an Italian railway navvy, who shot and killed two fellow-countrymen in a drunken row, returned a verdict of manslaughter.

Retiring first at 10.45 p.m., at 12.30 a.m. they reported to Justice Teetzel that they stood six for murder and six for manslaughter, and were sent back to try and agree on a verdict. Justice Teetzel's address to the jury was a strictly impartial review of the evidence, but after the verdict was given his lordship said he could not agree with it.

After the manslaughter verdict, Manuro, through his counsel, pleaded guilty to other charges of attempt to murder, shooting with intent to kill, and doing bodily harm. Sentence was deferred.

This was the first murder trial in Cobourg since Dr. King was convicted of wife murder, and hanged in 1859. The executioner wore a heavy mask and was never identified, although two or three Cobourg "characters" were one and all suspected for many years.

Manuro and his friend Frank Marano, had been drinking together. A dispute arose and Manuro in frenzied haste rushed for his rifle. One Lombardt held the door of the shack, a shot riddled his arm and struck another navvy, named Cionfione, who was behind him, in the abdomen. The latter was brought to the hospital here and died the day after the tragedy. Frank Marano fell pierced by a rifle ball, mortally wounded and expired soon after in his wife's arms.

Manuro fled from the camp and was arrested at Colborne, about eight miles east of Grafton. He was brought to the hospital here and identified by the dying Cionfione, whom he embraced and kissed.

"Whisky did it," was Manuro's only excuse. He has a wife and family in Italy.

E. E. A. DuVernet, K.C., of Toronto, was crown prosecutor, and Fred D. Boggs of Cobourg defended the prisoner. The evidence was a repetition of that given at the inquest.

Mr. Boggs' able conduct of the case for the defence won him many congratulations, for few believed that Manuro could be saved from the gallows. He pointed out that all the men in the shack had been drinking, and that in an altercation the accused and Marano, the latter had attempted to strike Marano with a shovel. Marano returned to his house while Manuro went for his rifle.

The defence hinged on the contention that it was a single shot that killed both men, and that it had been fired through the door. One man's evidence showed that Manuro had fired a shot while the gang were outside the shack, but that it did no harm. The medical evidence, he pointed out, bore out the theory that it was the one bullet that killed both men. It was admitted that the shot had been fired with intent, but not at Marano.

HE DENOUNCES CO-EDUCATION

Boston, April 13.—In a lecture to women at the Harvard Medical School Prof. C. M. Green declared that co-education is one of the wickedest features of modern schools.

"It is bad from the moral point of view," he said. "I have known some most pitiable results from it. I have also known a great number of cases of women breaking down from the strain of competition with man. It is true that women usually beat the men, but it is too much for them, just the same.

"The American home is almost a thing of the past. Women spend too much time gadding about. They are degenerating into a state of unstable nervous equilibrium. The only remedy is to learn to stay quietly at home, where they belong."

The Daily Review

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 1910.

WHAT HAS CANADA DONE?

Referring to the launching on the Clyde of the ninth British warship of the dreadnought type the Toronto Globe says that so long as the British army is so far inferior in equipment to her nearest powerful neighbors on the continent the best security for peace is that Britain's fleet be undoubtedly strong enough to prevent any hostile force from landing on her shores, and, no matter what the cost may be, it must be met. It adds: "There will be no whining or begging in this kind of preparation, and the world knows by this time that the dominions stand ready to do their share in this branch of imperial defence."

Australia and New Zealand have shown their readiness and dreadnoughts are now being constructed in England for those colonies. But what has Canada done? It has simply arranged to purchase from the British Government two old-fashioned ships that are already out of date.

SOCIAL PURITY

The churches of Canada and the United States are devoting much attention now to the encouragement of purity. There exists a prudish reluctance to even refer to this question although millions of lives have been ruined by ignorance. That the highest of all functions, the power to create a human being, is often debased to beastly and selfish indulgence is a most deplorable and disgusting fact. The evil is not as widespread in Canada as it is in the United States, and some other countries, but that there is reason for the churches to endeavor to educate young Canadians to appreciate the sacredness of the function of procreation there can be no doubt. Nor should it be left to the churches alone. Each man and woman has a responsibility. Too often men who are not themselves guilty of impurity, smile at lewd stories at which they should frown.

Any man who is known to have ruined the life and blasted the soul of a woman to satisfy his lust, should be an outcast from society.

A TRAVELLING FREE TRADER

Sir Henry W. Tuckett, who arrived in New York the other day, said to a reporter: "I am a free trader. The Englishman who talks of protection has never travelled." As a matter of fact, the most prominent advocates of protection in the United Kingdom are Englishmen who have travelled extensively. They find that all the world is protectionist but Britain. They note that other countries are prospering under protection and that the extreme poverty which afflicts England is not found in protectionist countries. In all probability Sir Henry W. Tuckett's remark was due to the trouble he experienced in getting through the New York customs house. Any Englishman who travels experiences this wherever he goes, but the fact that England is a free trade country does not save the travelling Englishman from such troubles. It might be some satisfaction for him to know that an American, Canadian or German traveller would have the same trouble in getting into England.

PEACE AT ANY PRICE

The New York Peace Society has issued a circular entitled "War Expenditure and Peace Expenditure in Contrast." It points out that the average annual cost of the United States army and navy for the past eight years has been $185,400,000. This it calls war expenditure, but as a matter of fact the United States has not been at war during the last eight years. Would it not be more correct to call this peace expenditure?

The United States Government does not intend to go to war. Money is expended on the army and the navy in the hope of preventing war.

The Peace Society points out that fifty manual training schools could be built and equipped with necessary tools and appliances for the cost of a battleship, and that the cost of building a dreadnought and maintaining it for twenty years would be sufficient to give a college education to 14,000 men or women at five hundred dollars per year.

The war spirit was strong in ancient Greece, but it did not prevent the development of art and literature, that are regarded as models of perfection to-day. The modern Greeks are a peaceful people. They are very successful traders and money makers. They pay great attention to education, providing good schools everywhere for the children of all classes, and it is said to be the chief ambition of every Greek money maker to found a college.

This was as true fifteen years ago as it is to-day, but the Greeks, while thinking of commerce and education, made no preparations for war. They thought the money could be spent to so much better advantage in the advancement of education and the promotion of commerce and all the arts of peace. But one day there came a cry from Crete for aid against Turkish oppression. The Greeks looked upon the people of Crete as their own countrymen. They were anxious to help them and made hurried preparations for war. But the Turks had for years been training for war and spending money on war equipment. The Greeks, although undoubtedly superior to the Turks in education, in business capacity and all that goes to make up modern civilization could not compete with them in war because they were unprepared, and they suffered inglorious defeat. Crete still remains under Turkish domination and calls vainly to the Greeks for aid.

The Chinese were a peaceful people for generations and devoted great attention to education. They despised the nations that wasted their money on war expenditure, and their philosophers believed that the Chinese had reached a higher stage of civilization than other nations. The population of China was so immense that it seemed absurd to imagine that they could be conquered by any other people, and just as the New York Peace Society says that the ninety million people of the United States have no need of war training or war equipment, so said the Chinese philosophers regarding the four hundred million people of China. But there came a rude awakening for the Chinese. Foreign nations trained and equipped for war demanded concession until it seemed that the Chinese Government would soon be nothing but a machine for carrying out the orders of foreign governments. Their territory was invaded, their people were slaughtered. They had no remedy. Thus the Chinese learned their lesson, and now they are training vast armies of men.

There is little doubt that if the Japanese had spent no more money on war preparations than the Chinese did Russia would now be supreme in China. Japan and Corea and would menace the peace of the world.

The great expenditure which the New York Peace Society deplores is really the price which Americans pay for peace. The phrase, "peace at any price" may have two meanings. It may mean paying regularly for an army and navy strong enough to prevent war, or it may mean sacrificing all that men hold dear and paying a huge indemnity to a foreign nation rather than fight or prepare to fight.

Many Americans and some Englishmen imagine that the treaty between Japan and the United Kingdom would force the British Government to side against the United States in case of a war between that country and Japan. But the treaty merely stipulates that if two powers unite against Japan Britain shall interfere. If the Americans tackled Japan without asking the assistance of any other power they would have to decide between Japan and the United States.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

The export trade at this market is practically a thing of the past. Sometimes a few bulls and a few of the heaviest of the loads of butchers' steers and heifers are bought by dealers for the buyers at the Union Yards at about the same prices as are quoted for that market.

Butchers.

George Rowatree bought 13 carloads of fat cattle for the Harris Abattoir, some lots of which were of as good quality as the best exporters. Mr. Rowatree paid for butchers' steers and heifers $5.40 to $6.60, for cattle weighing 900 to 1300 lbs.; for those weighing 1150 to 1300 lbs., $6.00 to $7.15. Mr. Rowatree got the choicest load of exporters seen on any market this year, weighing 1430 lbs., from Alex. White, cattle dealer, who is noted for handling the best to be had. These cattle were fed by John Cameron of Fergus, Ont., who is noted for feeding and finishing cattle properly. They were sold at the Junction yards, price being private.

Farm Was Not as Represented.

St. Catharines, April 12.—Because a fruit orchard turned out so poorly that her husband hanged himself from one of its trees, Mrs. Samuel Clemens has recovered judgment of $3,905.15 and costs from Robt. Crompton, the former owner. At the trial here, prominent fruit men testified that the farm was not worth much, as the land was not adapted for fruit-growing.

Peach Crop Safe.

St. Catharines, April 12.—Monday night and last night, this district experienced several degrees of frost, but the buds are not far enough advanced to be easily damaged. Cool weather of the past week has kept them back and it is almost impossible for frost to reach the buds, which have not yet opened. It is not till the buds are open that danger is felt.

The Cataract Power Company will make a house to house canvas in Hamilton to probe any complaints.

AFFIRMATIVE WON BY ONE POINT

At Debate During Meeting of Smith Farmers' Club

The Central Smith Farmers' Club held an interesting and profitable meeting on Tuesday evening, with the president in the chair, and with an attendance of seventy-five. Included in an enjoyable programme was a debate, "Resolved that it is more profitable to feed the products of the farm than to sell them." The affirmative was supported by Messrs. W. Scott, C. E. Morin and H. Archer and the negative by Messrs. Ernest Scott, Alex. McGregor and Russel Darling. The judges were Miss Marten, Mr. H. C. Duff and Mr. F. Scott, and the decision was given to the affirmative by one point.

Mr. H. C. Duff also gave an address which was listened to attentively by his audience.

ZION FARMERS' CLUB HELD DEBATE

Resolved that it is more Profitable to Feed Grain Than to Sell it

The last open meeting of the Zion Farmers' Club was held on Thursday evening, April 7th. Mr. H. C. Duff gave a very interesting and instructive address on "How to Cultivate the Soil."

Mr. Noble Milburn gave a humorous reading which was much appreciated and Mr. Adams gave a vocal solo. This was followed by Miss Scott's instrumental solo, which was much appreciated.

Mr. Neal delighted the audience with a vocal solo.

The principal feature of the evening, however, was a debate, "Resolved, that it is more profitable to feed grain than to sell it." The contest was well and hardly fought, the affirmative being taken by Mr. Charles Brown and Mr. Bert Allen, the negative by Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Stubbs, all the speakers bringing out and proving their points remarkably well.

The judges, Mr. Walter Garbutt, Mr. Scott and Mr. H. C. Duff, who after some minutes discussion, decided that it was a draw.

The ladies then served refreshments and the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Gas Distended His Stomach

"My last wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well-known boot and shoe traveler of Hartford, "that everyone with a bad stomach may learn as I did, before it's too late, that Nerviline is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was in mighty bad shape, my digestion was all wrong, and every night I would waken with a start and find my heart jumping like a threshing machine. This was caused by gas on my stomach pressing against my heart. When I started to use Nerviline I got better mighty fast. It is certainly a grand remedy for the traveling man, keeps your stomach in order, cures cramps, prevents lumbago or rheumatism, breaks up chest colds and sore throat—in fact there hasn't been an ache or pain inside or outside for the past two years that I haven't cured with Nerviline. Do you wonder I recommend it?"

BASIL KING,

Copyright, 1909, by Harper & Brothers.

There was a minute's hesitation, during which Wiltshire flicked the ashes

"I've looked in on you to offer you some advice."

from the end of his cigar with his little finger. He seemed to be quite absorbed in that operation, while Winship waited in not unnatural curiosity.

"I believe," Wiltshire said at last, "that there's been some little misunderstanding between you and my friend, Mr. Paul Trafford."

Winship's manner changed at once. His hard mouth became harder, and he sat rigidly upright in his chair, fixing Wiltshire with the stare of his brilliant eyes.

"On the contrary," he said quietly, "your friend, Mr. Paul Trafford, and I understand each other very well."

The slightly ironical tone gave an additional prick to the duke's mild temper.

"Now, don't be an ass, Winship," he said impatiently. "Mr. Trafford has been extremely magnanimous to you, and you've been behaving like an imbecile. Any man of the world would tell you that."

"Are you in his confidence, duke?"

"I am to the extent of knowing what he would be willing to do for you."

"And his reason for wishing to do it?"

"That, I understand, is one which does him credit. He has learned that in certain transactions with your family some years ago the loss entailed on you is greater than it should have been. He is eager now to make the loss good. That's all."

"I wonder if that's his way of putting it or yours?"

"That has nothing to do with it."

"No; it hasn't. It's merely a matter of curiosity on my part, because it's rather neat. Your friend, Mr. Paul Trafford, has been a long time learning the fact of which you speak. His mind must have been recently opened to knowledge. Perhaps," Winship added, laying his hand on a pile of numbers of the New York Magazine that were within reach—"perhaps he got some of his information here."

"Rot!" Wiltshire exclaimed contemptuously. "If you're going to be guided by stuff like that"—

"No, no, not at all. There's very little here that I didn't learn with my catechism. My sister Marah would be an excellent historian of that great man's life. She's followed his career and treasured his sayings and marked his doings down as Boswell never did with Johnson. I grew up to the knowledge of it all as I did to the art of painting."

"That's very natural. Your sister is a woman who has suffered much. She has her own point of view, from which you couldn't move her. But I shouldn't think a man like you would go by any opinion but his own."

"I don't. In all that my sister feels toward your friend, Mr. Trafford, I entirely agree with her."

"But on slightly different grounds, I presume."

There was something so significant in the duke's tone that Winship looked at him a minute before replying.

"Possibly," he admitted at last. "I'm not sure that I follow you, but"—

"Oh, yes, you do, Winship! You follow me well enough. Don't let us have any beating about the bush. The matter is too serious for that. I may say that I'm here in the interests of all the parties concerned. Have I your permission to speak right out as an old friend and perhaps one of your best friends?"

"Certainly, duke, but if your object is to get me to accept money" —

"That's my first object, but not the most important one. I must say that for a man like you to refuse a sum that would raise him to a position of affluence seems to me insane. As I understand, it's money to which you put forth a claim."

"No, no, duke. May I correct you? The system by which your friend, Mr. Paul Trafford, ruined my family was a perfectly legal one, leaving us no claim at all. His plan of attack is always to dodge behind the law whenever any one attempts to defend himself or to hit back. Where there are no laws to shelter him he buys legislatures to pass them. It's a very safe method and stops effectually anything like what you call a claim unless it be a moral one."

"Then let's say a moral one. That's the second point I want to make. The whole matter is removing itself to moral grounds to a greater degree than you may be likely to think probable. Trafford's not a bad sort at heart. He's far from being the cold, calculating monster the fellows in that magazine would try to make him out. To my mind he's one of your characteristic American primitives, possessed by the fury of making money, as earlier primitives were possessed by the fury of battle. And, just as with them the zest lay not so much in the conquest as in the fight, so with him it's not so much in the money as in the game of getting it. Now that he's had enough of the sport, now that the money is piled up around him, other primitive impulses are beginning to awaken. I wonder if you can guess."

"I needn't guess. I know. It was never an unusual thing for the robber baron to be seized with remorse."

"That's it. You've hit it. Now, I say, Winship, why should you from a mere sense of pride block the path to a blind man feeling his way to doing what's right?"

"And not make his repentance as easy for him as possible?" Winship added. "That's what you mean, isn't it?"

"Something of the sort," Wiltshire admitted.

"Then I may say at once, duke, that I've no intention of making anything easy for your friend, Mr. Paul Trafford, that I can render hard. It's impossible for a man like you, whose life has been cushioned from his cradle, to enter into the feelings of people like ourselves, who during long years have been the victims of a great and wanton wrong."

Winship spoke quietly and drew two or three puffs from his cigar before he went on again.

"I can recall the time when, as a boy of eight or ten, I first heard the name of Trafford whispered in our household. From the way in which it was spoken there came to be, in my imagination, something evil and ominous in the very sound. It grew to be the theme of all my parents' conversation and never failed to inspire anxiety, anger and fear. I don't suppose you know anything about the misery a young lad goes through as he watches his elders battling with some great trouble which he can't understand. The thing is all the more terrible from its impalpability and vagueness. I don't exaggerate in the least when I say that it robbed me of all the happy, careless ease of mind which means so much to any young thing's normal development. I had no boyhood. Paul Trafford crushed it out of me. He ground us all into powder, as you know very well. We all had to suffer, but in some respects I suffered most, though no one took note of it. I was the lad who had to weep behind the walls, while the women went forth to fight. That humiliation is unimaginable to you, who have probably never known an hour's indignity."

"That's all you know about it," Wiltshire threw in, with a touch of bitterness.

"Well, to cut it short," Winship pursued, "I vowed from my boyhood to hale Paul Trafford into some court where there would be a surer justice than any meted out by man. It's a curious fact that, while I never saw my way, I never lost the conviction that some day I should find it. And I've done so. I've stumbled into it, or, rather, I've been led into it by the one hand on earth that has power to inflict on him the very chastisement of heaven."

"You must mean his daughter's."

"I do mean hers. I've found all the justice I wanted in the fact that she knows him as he is."

"Don't you think it was knowledge that might have been spared her?"

"There can be no way of sparing Paul Trafford's daughter as long as the sins of the father continue to be visited on the child. That's a law which nature never relaxes. If there had been any way of escape for her, I of all men should have been bound to find it."

"Why you of all men?" Wiltshire asked, with an effort to maintain his calmness of tone.

"Because I love her," Winship cried fiercely, "because I'm the one man who can save her, because her one chance of any kind of happiness lies in marrying me."

The duke grew white. His hand trembled so that after trying to raise his cigar to his lips he threw it away. He knew that he must not lose his self control.

"I dare say it isn't unnatural for you to feel like that, Winship," he said, with an attempt at speaking kindly. "And if you do care for Miss Trafford the way is open for you to make her happy as it is. You could take the money her father offers you."

"Never! She knows as well as I that it's impossible. What the law has given him he shall keep. If I touched a penny of it, I should feel as guilty as himself. She knows that. I've told her. She didn't understand it at the minute, but I'm convinced she does today. How could she expect me to take it when I've given up everything—given up my love, given up her—in order to keep my honor? But, no; I haven't given her up. The time will come when her love will bring her back to me. She loves me, duke, as I love her with that kind of love which is for once and always. She gave me up to stay with him. I honor her for it and love her the more. But we're young. We can afford to wait. There will be a day when she will be free to cast that cursed money from her and come to me without it, as she would have come already if it hadn't been for him. She loves me, duke," he repeated, speaking rapidly and with gestures. "She loves me. I know she will never change or love another. You know her. You know how pure and holy and true she is. I can wait for her, for, however long the time may be, she'll come to me. I tell you all this, duke, because I want you to understand why I don't take the money. She herself would condemn me for it now. She'll come to me one day without it, and"—

"For God's sake, stop!" Wiltshire cried hoarsely. "Paula is to marry me next week."

He sat rigid and white in his chair, his fingers twitching nervously. Winship, leaning from his own seat, gazed at him with blazing eyes.

"Paula is to— Oh, no, duke, no!"

"Yes." Wiltshire whispered, just above his breath, as though the admission had in it something of the terrible.

"Great God!" Winship muttered to himself and sank back limply in his chair.

Minutes passed without sound or motion on either side. Dusk was gathering in the long studio. The high north light began to take on a faint tinge of red, caught from the winter sunset. The two men sat in such dead silence that the mild tinkle of the doorbell startled them. Each sprang to his feet and stood listening as if in expectation.

"Excuse me," Winship said at last. "I'm alone here. I must answer it."

"In any case I ought to go," the duke returned. He followed Winship toward the door with the intention of making his escape when the newcomer was admitted. But he stopped again at the sound of Winship's voice.

"Paula!"

Winship stood with the door open, as if unwilling to let her pass.

"I had to come, Roger," she answered from the threshold. "Don't be angry. Don't blame me. I've some thing to tell you. I didn't want you to hear it from any one else but myself. Oh, Roger, let me come in! I had to see you just this once more. It's only to say goodby."

"Hush!" Winship whispered.

But it was too late. Paula was already in the room and face to face with Wiltshire.

CHAPTER XXI.

THERE was no hesitation on Paula's part. She went directly to Wiltshire and held out her hand. "I didn't know you were here, duke," she said without embarrassment. "I came here to tell Mr. Winship something I wanted him to learn from me, myself. Perhaps if you're not in a hurry you could come back for me."

"If your carriage is here," Wiltshire returned as calmly as he could, "I think I won't come back. Alice is to arrive today, and I told her to expect me at the Hotel Bristol about 5."

"Then you'll bring her to dinner, won't you? She wrote me she'd come if she wasn't too tired from the journey."

"That's it," Wiltshire muttered. "We shall meet this evening. Goodby, Winship. Au revoir, Paula."

He shook hands with both and departed with the dignified air of a man who sees nothing unusual in the situation. When the door closed behind him Winship seized Paula's hands and almost dragged her to the light.

"Paula, you've been ill!" he cried. "What have they been doing to you?"

She released herself and drew away from him.

"No, Roger, I haven't been ill. I only think that—perhaps—I'm—I'm—dying."

"My God!" he muttered to himself. "They'll pay for this!"

He tried to take her in his arms, but again she stepped back from him.

"No, Roger, don't. We're all alone here, aren't we? Isn't Marah in?"

"Marah is out. We're all alone."

"Then I must stay only a minute," she hurried on. "I came to tell you—to tell you— Oh, Roger, I don't know how to say it! It seems like a blasphemy now that I'm face to face with you again. It's like a crime. I who love you so that I can make no pretense at not doing it—I'm going to marry some one else."

"They'll pay for this!"

"Then it's true, Paula?"

"Yes, it's true, Roger. Did he tell you?"

"Oh, it isn't true! It can't be true. You won't do it. Say you won't do it."

"I must, Roger. I have to do it for papa's sake. There are other reasons too. Everything is forcing me into it. I don't know what else to do. I'm like a lost person. And I love you, Roger. I shall always love you. No marriage will keep me from doing that."

"Then your marriage will be a crime, Paula, as you say. You must reflect. You must ask yourself if it's just toward him."

"Yes. I think it's quite just. He knows I don't love him as I might do."

"But have you told him that you love some one else?"

"He never asked me. He said he wouldn't ask me anything."

"You must tell him, Paula. You must tell him that you love me. He must hear it from yourself."

"Oh, Roger, what's the use? It would only make new complications, and I'm so worn out with those that exist already. I've told you that I think I must be dying, and I believe it. I don't seem to have the force to live. There's nothing the matter with me really, only it's all been so hard for me. You know I haven't much strength of character, and so in the effort to stand alone I've just sunk down. I've come to the point where I'd rather they did just as they will with me than struggle any more."

"Oh, Paula, you mustn't feel like that when I love you! You'd be strong if you had my arms to uphold you."

"Yes," she smiled. "I'd be strong then. But, you see, it can't be."

"Why can't it be? Why should you be sacrificed? Why should we both be sacrificed? You're offering yourself up in an effort that will never bring happiness to any one. Leave it all behind you and come to me. Come to me, as I asked you to come that day in June. You could go to England with Lady Alice Holroyd. She knows our story, and we have her sympathy. I'd follow you, and we could be married there."

SUFFERED FROM VIOLENT CATHARTICS

The Warning of Mr. Geo. C. Fox Is One That Should Be Heeded by All.

Few men on the road are better known than genial George Fox, whose friends throughout the West are legion. In the following letter he expresses gratitude for signal services rendered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. He goes on to say: "Until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and experienced their wonderful mildness and curative power, I estimated the value of every pill by its activity. Talking about this to a well-known physician I met on the train the other day, he explained there are different kinds of drugs that act upon the bowels, the most active being known as drastic. Except in extreme cases where the life of the patient depends upon speedy evacuation of the bowels, pills should never be drastic. Purgatives cause catarrh of the bowels and inflammation; their dose must be increased, causing even more harm. With such a clear explanation I could see why Dr. Hamilton's Pills are curative and not irritating, why they are mild, yet most searching.

"From my experience I recommend everyone that takes pills to give up the old-fashioned harsh, purging pill, and, instead, to use Dr. Hamilton's. They cure headache, biliousness, constipation, bad stomach, and keep the system in perfect condition."

NASAL CATARRH

Wm. Madill Sells the Great Remedy That Cured B. W. Squires

Here is a very simple yet wholly sincere statement of a Norwood, Ont., man who was cured by using Hyomei—the no cure no pay remedy for catarrh, asthma, hay fever, croup, coughs and colds.

"I feel that I can conscientiously recommend Hyomei for the reason that I had suffered for years with catarrh and nothing gave me the same relief as Hyomei. There was a constant husk-ness in my throat, pains across my eyes were almost constant and at times there was much difficulty in breathing. The glands were swollen, causing a horseness and stiffness in my neck. I cannot speak too highly of Hyomei and there is nothing that will give quicker relief for catarrh."—B. W. Squires, Norwood, Ont.

Thousands of just such letters are in existence, and thousands more would be but for the desire to avoid publicity.

If you have catarrh, beatire yourself, and drive it out of your system. Kill the germs. You can do that easily if you use Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me.)

It is a dry, antiseptic vapor very pleasant to use, that when inhaled, quickly relieves all forms of catarrhal inflammation, stops snuffles, hawking and blowing. The price for a complete outfit, including inhaler, is only $1.00, at Wm. Madill's.

You can't expect the blood to be pure and rich when you are bilious and your stomach is upset.

MR. JOLLIFFE TO SING HERE

Popular Vocalist Will Appear at Grand Opera House on May 6th-An Important Event

Peterborough people will be delighted to hear that a recital is to be given in this city at an early date by Mr. Norman Jolliffe, a former resident of this city, who has made a name for himself among the vocalists of the continent. The Grand Opera house has been secured for the recital, which will be given on Friday evening, May 6th. Mr. Jolliffe will be assisted by another high class artist, whose name will be announced in the course of a few days. The programme will be one of the best ever given in the city, and an audience of large proportions will no doubt greet Mr. Jolliffe on his return to his "home town."

Mr. Jolliffe has been studying in New York for the past two years and has been meeting with much success. He is soloist for one of the largest churches in that city—the Church of the Puritans—and has been engaged to remain another year. During Easter week he sang "Olivet to Calvary," in New York, the "Redemption," in Brooklyn, and also filled an important engagement in Philadelphia

Further announcement regarding the recital will be made in the near future. It will be the most important event of the year.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Dorenwend of Toronto is visiting this town, and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the Hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face, and consequently tone up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at Oriental Hotel on Friday, April 22nd.

PROPOSITION HAS PRACTICALLY BEEN ACCEPTED BY CO.

Mayor Morrow has received a letter from Mr. Frederic Nicholls, general manager of the Canadian General Electric Company, stating that the company has accepted the proposition of the Peterborough Water Commissioners in regard to the surplus power at the waterworks dam, subject to the approval of their engineer.

It now looks as if the extensions to the company's works would, without a doubt, be built at Peterborough, and as Mr. Nicholls has stated, that once the question as to whether the extensions would be made at Peterborough or Toronto was decided the work would start at once, it is expected that the erection of the new buildings here will be gone on with at once.

A special meeting of the City Council has been called for to-night at 8.30 o'clock to deal with the letter from Mr. Nicholls. The water commissioners will be present at the meeting.

If the deal is closed with the Canadian General Electric Company, the by-law, which was to be submitted to the ratepayers in May to raise $70,000 to develop the surplus power at the new dam, will be withdrawn as the company is to do all the work of development.

INTERESTING RELICS FOR VICTORIA MUSEUM

The Victoria Museum, at East Nicholls park, will be opened again within a few days. The following historical relics have been deposited in the museum by Mr. W. R. Morris:—A military uniform worn by an ancestor of Mr. Morris in 1776, the time of great military activity in Canada, being the year of the American Revolution. The tunic is of the fashion known as the "Coatee," or swallow-tail, of scarlet cloth, with black velvet on white cloth facings, and frogged with gold lace. On the right shoulder is a gilt epaulette. The buttons are heavy gilt, they and the epaulette bearing the regimental insignia, "V.I.B. Quebec Embodied Militia." The breeches are plain blue black cloth. The uniform, considering its age, 134 years, is in excellent preservation. Mr. Morris also deposited a very fine specimen of stone axe of Indian origin, and an artillery cartridge box of antique pattern. These articles are a valuable addition to the museum, and the management beg to express their sincere thanks

SEX PERVERSION IS THE GREATEST SOURCE OF CRIME

That sex perversion is a more prolific source of crime than any other cause was the opinion unhesitatingly expressed at the George street Methodist church last night by Rev. J. Aspindale McCuaig in his discourse on "Sex and Crime." The speaker said he had deduced this conclusion from his special study of the problem.

This statement was not at variance with the biblical saying that the love of money was the root of all evil. But it must be understood that it was not the money itself that was the root of all evil. But the desire to get it for what it would buy was the attraction that led people to make money by illicit means.

In looking over the public records we would probably say that drunkenness was the main cause. Alcohol bound a man's judgment, but the fact remains that the crime had its birth in human passion, and the sex passion—the one that the least was said about—was the commonest cause of crime. The flood, the destruction of Sodom and Gommorah, God's people being carried into captivity, and terrible personal penalties were all visitations of God for the outrages of the sex passion. And if we took the newspapers we would see that the sex passion was the main cause of crime.

The speaker referred to the horrible crimes committed as a result of sex perversion, and to bear out his contention produced newspaper clippings of a single day from one of the largest American dailies.

Mr. McCuaig dwelt at length on the purpose of God in giving sex to the human being. This was for the building of the home and the propogation of mankind.

CHIMES FOR 57TH BAND

Original Novelty Number for Summer Programmes-Turkish Cymbals Will be Added to Traps

The band has some very attractive music for its programmes at Victoria Park this summer. Many new novelties from the New York publishing houses have been added to the band's library, as well as some standard and semi-classical numbers.

The selections of the band will be rendered very interesting by the employment of chimes, such as used by the Coldstream Guards and other regimental and concert bands. A fine set of chimes have been ordered from London, England, and will arrive shortly. Turkish cymballs will also be added to the band's effects this summer. The cymballs are especially valuable in Oriental pieces, and are also used to advantage in other numbers.

WHEN WILL LAST BE HEARD OF THE GIPSY VISITORS ?

Number of them Concerned in Law Suit at Montreal—Father of Gipsy Bride Says She Stole $1000 and Wants Her to Give Up Husband

It appears as if it were going to be a long time before the last was heard of the gypsies who paid Peterborough a call last summer. In getting into law suits they have a corner on the market and their love affairs seem to be about as tangled as the dog by-law. The latest to be heard of the wanderers comes from Montreal, and a despatch to the Review from Ottawa is to the effect that they are the same gypsies who were at Peterborough and Ottawa last summer. A Montreal despatch says:—

Montreal April 11.—On the charge of stealing $1,000 from her father, Mrs. Stevens, to use the English name of the gypsy bride of Isra Kovaneska, will be returned to Nepean, Carleton county, Ont. William H. Hamilton, high constable for that county, arrived in the city today armed with a warrant for her arrest. She will be accompanied by her young husband. Her father, Stanley McGill, chief of the gipsy tribe, with headquarters in the State of New York, who arrived here Saturday, says that when his daughter eloped with Stevens she took away $1,000 from the treasury of the tribe. As she was his oldest daughter she was entrusted with the funds and had no difficulty in obtaining the money. She left $600 behind her.

The alleged theft and the elopement took place in Nepean last November, just previous to the camps going into winter quarters. During the summer the McGill and the Kovaneska tribes had camped in proximity. Just before the departure for winter quarters the young people were missed. Chief McGill instituted a search at once, but only succeeded last week in locating the young people. They were then at Rockfield, near Lachine, where the Kovaneska tribe had passed the winter. Chief McGill told his daughter that if she were willing to return home with him he would drop all charges against her, and she would be freed, otherwise he would prosecute. She scornfully repudiated his offer and went back to her cell. A telegram from her mother was read to the young woman from her father. It was as follows:—"Bring daughter home at once if willing to come; and if not willing to come give her five years in jail."

Chief McGill says under no circumstances will he allow his daughter to return to the Kovaneska tribe.

Young Kovaneska, who will some day be chief in his own tribe, says the thousand dollars is only a pretext to get her back.

ANNUAL VESTRY MEETING OF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Below will be found the balance of the report of the adjourned vestry meeting of St. John's church, held Monday evening.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement then reported, through Mr. Aylmer and Mr. Smith, who had made a vigorous canvas. They expected to reach most of the men of the congregation, and that the missionary subscriptions would be greatly increased. The duplex week envelopes for the support of missions will be immediately introduced. Rev. Canon Davidson, the rector, reported, that the number of communicants made during the year on Sundays had increased from 3345 to 3554. The number was 3317 in 1909, 3345 in 1909 and 3554 in 1910. The Easter day communicants had been 400 in Easter, 1907, 441 in 1908, 437 in 1909 and 445 this Easter. He desired very much that the weekly early service should be participated in even more largely than it was. The present attendance of 40 communicants could be raised, say to 100. The effect would be most striking upon the congregation.

During the year there had been 37 baptisms, 24 confirmations, 18 marriages and 13 burials. These figures are rather smaller than usual. During the year no less than 40 sermons have been preached by visiting clergy, including some of the leaders in the church. Although this involved some difficulty in making arrangements, the policy would be continued. Negotiations had been going on with six clergy with reference to taking an assistant curate's work, but had resulted unsatisfactorily on account of the high standard called for by the congregation. He believed that in response to strong efforts made, the congregational character of the church services had improved during the year. The rector paid a warm tribute to the retiring warden, Mr. Mills, who, during the two-year term of office, had proved himself to be one of the most efficient officers the church had ever had. In his efforts for the church's good he had had the faithful support of Mr. A. E. Coulthard. In this connection, and especially this year, he thought had gone out to other wardens who had faithfully served St. John's church in their important offices.

Few congregations have had a higher standard set and maintained by successive wardens. St. John's church was one of the old land marks of Peterborough, created in the infancy of the town, when the population was 500, and this was interesting to all citizens. A church hallowed with memories of seventy-five years and the names and forms of many who, their work done, rest in Paradise, are still in communion with us or left in our day to carry on the great work of glorifying God, and for the welfare of the souls and bodies of God's people.

At the vestry meeting of St. John's church on Monday night, Dr. Burnham was appointed St. John's representative on the Board of the Hall Trust Fund. Lay delegates to the Synod will be Messrs. Jos. Mills, J. H. McClellan and Dr. Burnham.

MORTGAGE IN FLAMES

Parchment Burned at the Y. W.C.A.—An Interesting Event

A mortgage no longer hangs over the building of the Peterborough Young Women's Christian Association. It was consigned to the fire last night mid the ranks of those faithful workers, who have labored so hard to free the institution from debt. The burning of the mortgage was made the occasion of an interesting gathering and a large number were in attendance. Mayor Morrow occupied the chair and after the singing of "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," gave a brief address of an appropriate nature. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. J. G. Potter, after which the following programme was given:

Violin solo—Dr. Park.
Vocal—Miss Davies.
Sketch of associational work—Mrs. Stevenson.
Burning of mortgage — Mrs. W. Walsh and Miss Nicholls.
Doxology.
Presentation of flowers to Mrs. Walsh and Miss Nicholls by young ladies of the association.
Addresses by Mr. Shook, representative of Y.M.C.A., and Mr. W. H. Hill.
Vocal solo—Mrs. Hall.
Instrumental piano solo—Miss Jean Hill.
Closing, God Save the King, benediction.

Senator Cox was unable to be present, but sent a cheque for $200.

At the conclusion of the programme refreshments were served and a social time spent.

The history of the local Y.W.C.A., which was prepared and read by Mrs. Stevenson will be published to-morrow.

GOSSIPING CONDEMNED BY RECTOR

At St. Luke's church on Sunday evening Rev. Dr. Langfeldt preached a forcible sermon on the tendency of people, instead of minding their own affairs, to meddle with other people's business. He depicted the village gossip going from house to house, dropping here and there insinuations for the purpose of destroying a person's reputation and character, the readiness with which people will accept and believe evil reports regarding their fellow men, and the reluctance with which they will accept anything good that might be credited to their fellow beings, in spite of their professing Christianity. As Christ rebuked Saint Peter, when inquiring after the future destiny of Saint John, by telling him to look after his own duties, so the Christian people of to-day should attend to the performance of their duties in their relation to God, instead of looking at others and criticizing them, for by so doing they might lose their own way to salvation.

The tendency of the present day is an indulgence in scandal, and those who profess to be on the highway to salvation appear to be the most given to scandal mongering.

REVIEW PRINTING COMPANY

THE SOCIETY COLUMN.

It Was Not a Pleasant Column to Edit a Few Years Ago.

There is no more attractive part of a newspaper than the society column, nor any more useful to those whom it is intended to serve. Prejudice against the publication of items formerly considered an offensive intrusion upon private affairs now hardly lingers in the most conservative quarters. A record in the public prints of the comings and goings of society people is held to be almost as essential as the publication of the races, or the high and low on the stock market, and reports of the festivities of society appeal to at least a very large minority. It is generally understood that in gathering this class of news the workers assigned to that branch are rather likely to be embarrassed with volunteer aid. But when the daily press of Canada first began to include society matter in its columns the public attitude was far different.

A young newspaperman in an eastern town, who has since graduated into the ranks of professional politicians, many years ago conceived that a chronicle of the more important happenings in local society would add a piquant flavor to the columns of his paper, and while the idea was still fermenting in his ambitious brain, he heard that a literary light from Boston had recently visited a retired concert soprano of his own town. The newspaperman immediately called upon the lady and made known his object.

"I understand, Mrs. P.," he began, "you had some people in last evening to meet Dr. ——, of Boston. People are much interested in the circumstances of the doctor's visit, and perhaps you will not mind telling me, for my paper, what form of entertainment you adopted for the doctor and your friends."

"Certainly not, Mr. C.," said the lady, "nothing could have been simpler. We arranged our chairs about the fireplace thus, and, and talked."

"Yes, Mrs. P.," said the reporter, "and after that?"

"And after that, Mr. C., we went and stood on our heads in the corner."

"What, ladies and all, Mrs. P.?"

"Ladies and all, Mr. C."

And the inauguration of the society column was temporarily deferred.

Another Canadian Story Writer.

Though he does not belong to the Canadian Society of Authors, there is in Toronto a most industrious short story writer who has of late won genuine recognition among magazine editors who like to purchase light and breezy tales. He is Mr. Charles Langton Clarke, who for a decade has been telegraph editor of The Mail and Empire, Toronto, and as a writer of fiction he followed Dr. Osler's declaration that no man should write a book until he was over forty. Some years ago Mr. Clarke commenced writing boys' stories for The Argosy, a publication of the Munsey Company. They were so successful that the Munsey concern has now first call on his contributions, and has resold some of his stories in England. Latterly Mr. Clarke has taken up the writing of humorous sketches of domestic life in a medium-sized city dealing chiefly with the ups and downs of Mr. Scales and Mr. Butterworth, two married men who take part in the simple life of a city which, though unnamed, strongly resembles Toronto. The Cavalier, one of the newer of the Munsey publications, is now running a series of these stories. In the March number appears a story in which Mr. Clarke has some mild fun with the choral singing craze. His Mr. Scales becomes infected with the idea that he has a voice which should be cultivated, and his adventures in attaining this end furnish good fun. Mr. Clarke tells his stories largely in dialogue, after the manner of W. W. Jacobs, and the repartee of his characters is at all times droll and expressive. Before he gets through with the Scales and Butterworth families, Mr. Clarke, who is also known as a most facile writer of vers d'occasion, will have had a good deal of fun with Canadian civilization.

Bluebeards—the Latest.

Will blue boards succeed blackboards in the public school? This is a question soon to come before the Toronto trustees. Inspector Hughes has always claimed the former are much easier for the eyes than the latter, and lately numerous complaints have been received by the trustees from parents that the sight of their children is impaired. This is substantiated to a large extent by the number of children who wear glasses. Some time ago slates came under the ban of the inspector, owing to the bad effects of the eyes from the striking contrast of white on black. White scribbling books were also changed to grey to avoid the same trouble, while numerous minor alterations were made to ease the eyes. So it now appears it is up to the blackboard to vacate in favor of blue.

Reduce Taxation.

There have been heavy deficits in the United States Treasury for several years. For the present year the receipts will be a great many millions short of the expenditures. The president and his cabinet are endeavoring to discover the direction in which new taxes can be levied. They should follow the example of Canada and reduce instead of increasing taxation. Such a device would be a very simple way of both increasing the revenue and striking a blow at the trusts which are growing fat at the expense of the people. We have tried it in Canada and can speak from experience.—Victoria Daily Times.

Great Is Ontario's Wealth.

The silver output of Ontario last year was over $12,350,000, the largest in the history of the province. Our total mineral production for the same period was $90,000,000. And the mining industry in this province is still in its infancy.—Citizen, Ottawa.

Tuberculosis in Children.

Based on the census of 1900, it is estimated by the National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis that nearly 100,000 children now in school will die of tuberculosis before they are eighteen years of age or that about 6,400 die annually from this disease. Estimating that on an average each child who dies of tuberculosis has had six years of schooling, the aggregate loss to the country in wasted education each year amounts to $1,152,000. According to investigations made in New York, Boston and Stockholm, the percentage of children who are afflicted with tuberculosis is much larger than the death rate would indicate.

American Capital in Canada.

It is estimated that there are now between 150 and 200 American factories or branches of American factories in Canada, fifty of these in Toronto and twenty in Hamilton, and between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 of American capital invested in industrial enterprises in the Dominion. This transfer of industries and of capital is found to continue, assisted by the Canadian tariff and the opportunities for investment which the Dominion now affords. Retaliatory measures approaching commercial nonintercourse may check the movement, but only for a time and only partially.—London Times.

Smoked Out the Bears.

Jose Valdez, the crack shot of Santa Fe, N. M., recently discovered a cave twenty miles from Santa Fe that showed unmistakable signs of being the winter habitat of bears. He started a fire at the mouth of the cave and smoked out the bears. There were just thirteen of them in the cave, and as they came out one by one Valdez killed them, the job occupying less than one hour.—Argonaut.

THE RED FOX'S TRICKS

THE LITTLE FELLOW SEEMS TO OVERCOME ALL TROUBLES.

In Spite of All the Evils That Beset Him the Red Fox Thrives and Manages to Get Along Almost Anywhere—He Is a Fine Mouse-Catcher and Is of Great Service to the Farmer.

Too well known to need description; the joy of the hunter; hated by the farmer, yet one of his best friends; hunted, trapped, and poisoned by experts everywhere, the red fox holds his own in every section of the country. In fact he appears to thrive and increase best under the most difficult conditions.

Have you ever during the spring months visited a fox den where a mother fox and family reside? If not, one of nature's treats has been missed. In crossing a piece of woods one fine spring afternoon I was attracted to a place by a most peculiar noise. Moving forward with extreme caution, I approached the brow of a high hill on the banks of the Nottawasaga River, an ideal spot for a fox den. The afternoon sun shone warm on the hillside and I approached carefully. But the disturbance ceased when I arrived at the spot. What appeared to be a well-worn path down the hill caused me to remain quiet and await results. Suddenly a tawny, yellow little animal appeared and disappeared several times. At last he was followed by a half dozen more young foxes. Then the row started once more, and down the hill on their path went rolling, tumbling, and growling, a bundle of young rogues. At the bottom they would break away and rush up the hill a distance, then disappear into a hole only to appear higher up or lower down the hill from some underground passage, and repeat the tumbling act. A sharp cry in a thicket close by told me I had been seen by mother fox, and the little fellows were gone in a flash. All was still, but from a couple of holes there could be seen a moment later a small pointed nose and sharp eyes curious to know the danger. The moment I moved from my position I was seen and all vanished. Examining the den I found a number of holes for fully fifty feet up the hill. The path had been made by the young foxes, and no doubt was an ideal playground. At the foot of the hill was a much larger entrance to the den. At the mouth of this entrance was a perfect litter of refuse, among which I noticed wings of ducks, turkeys, geese, chickens, crows, grouse, and other small birds, also feet of small pigs and lambs, fur of hares, woodchucks, and muskrats, as well as refuse from a slaughter house fully two miles distant. This fox den was about one-quarter of a mile from the buildings of a farmer of my acquaintance. I called at his place and made inquiry regarding missing fowl, etc., and was assured by all the family that their fowl, were never molested by foxes, and that these marauders always went some distance to steal fowl. Inquiry revealed the fact that farmers two and three miles distant were contributing their share of fowl toward the keep of the fox family.

However, in the course of a few months these losses would be fully repaid. Foxes are great mousers. During the twilight hours, morning and evening, they may be seen in the grain fields hunting small rodent that would make farming almost impossible were it not for the tireless energy of the foxes in hunting and destroying them. No doubt this great supply of food during the summer and autumn months accounts for the large numbers of foxes always to be found in farming districts.

Boating with a friend one evening on the Nottawasaga River, we were watching a couple of flocks of young wild ducks which with the mother ducks swam toward us. This action on the part of the ducks surprised us as we had always noticed young ducklings make to the shore or hide in weeds. My friend noticed an animal swimming in the water; we went after it, a few strokes of our paddles brought us close enough to see it was a red fox that scrambled up the bank into the dense growth of ferns. At the same moment we saw another fox standing in the weeds watching the ducks and ourselves. Then was revealed to us another of the fox's cunning tricks. One fox had gone into the water and was endeavoring to drive the mother ducks and helpless young to the shore where his confederate was ready to pounce upon them. We allowed our boat to drift down stream some distance. The ducks followed us for a time, then went past us and disappeared down stream. The foxes appeared on the banks again, took a short look at us and went their way. My friend's only comment was: "The rogues! I wonder would they have divided the spoil?"

On another occasion I joined a party of four to go fishing on the river at a point near the Georgian Bay. Rain had fallen heavily during the early morning hours, settling the dust on the sand cliffs along the river, thousands of cliff swallows were flying around and in and out of their nests in holes along the top of sand cliffs. Our attention was drawn to over a dozen of those nests that had been dug out and destroyed since the rain of the morning. Going on shore we found dozens of fresh fox tracks leading up the banks to the perpendicular face of cliff. At this point the fox was still about nine feet below the nests of the swallows, and here was where he showed his cunning by commencing to scratch the sand down making a small mound, thus raising himself up and at the same time undermining the nests. The contents no doubt they devoured with relish.—Mark Robinson in Saturday Night.

LOVE ON A BATTLESHIP

By Foxcroft Davis

A breezy story in which it is shown that Mars and Cupid can make a combination not entirely barren of comedy. Being one of the series of "Tales of the China Seas," written for these pages by Foxcroft Davis.

"I kicked him off and told him to choke his luff."

"WOMEN," said Mr. Hunks, gravely changing his quid, "are tricky. The very best of 'em is trickier'n a circus mule."

This remark was made to little Ford, the midshipman, while the battle ship was outside Port Dalny, awaiting her chance to get in between Horse Anchorage and Panter Point. Dalny being a great commercial port in Manchuria, merchant vessels have the right of entry, and at that very moment a couple of big barks were dodging recklessly in front of the battle ship. Fogs prevail in the beginning of summer and the early autumn, tide waves are troublesome, there the wind can blow from all four quarters at once, and unless the lofty peak of Mount Sampson can be clearly made out a ship may tear her bottom out on entering Port Dalny as easily as at any port in the world.

However, Mr. Hunks being of a cool and composed nature and little Ford having the disregard of danger common in a twenty-year-old midshipman who is not on watch, were calmly chatting as they leaned over the rail together. They watched the town, or rather the three towns, of Dalny grow nearer in the misty June afternoon, and the tall chimney of the factory in the commercial town of Dalny peering out occasionally in the fitful light.

On the bridge Captain Fortescue and Bolton, the executive officer, and Smith, the navigator, were taking the ship in, treading gingerly and swearing freely at the big barks that were dancing back and forth, whipped by the southwest gale. Dalny, however, is not an interesting spot, and Ford was keener to hear the views of Mr. Hunks, the carpenter, on women in general, than he was to get up to the naval anchorage.

"You see, sir," continued Mr. Hunks, "a man is just like a ship. He can be armored above the water line and he may be able to make twenty-three knots under forced draught, and he may have 12-inch guns to defend himself with, but then comes along some damned little torpedo boat and sticks a knife into his vitals under water and he's gone, just like this battle ship would be gone if she had a couple of torpedoes planted in her keelson. I've known men as took every precaution against gittin' married and kep' their torpedo nets outboard, so to speak, and then after all some little woman would come sneakin' up and marry him when he wasn't lookin'."

Mr. Hunks was so affected by this depressing view of man's helplessness before woman that he sighed profoundly and cut another quid.

"I think," said little Ford, blushing deeply, "that the ladies are awfully nice—especially Miss Dora Bruce-Kennet."

"Right you are, sir," saidly responded Mr. Hunks. "They're an infernal sight too nice. I've been up here in Port Dalny three times in the last three months on the 'uburb, before me and you got promoted to this here battle ship, and I met a lady—a widow lady—as done for me with neatness and despatch."

"You don't say so, Mr. Hunks!" cried little Ford, standing on one leg in his delight.

"Sh——sh, Mr. Ford. For the Lord's sake don't give me away," pleaded Mr. Hunks. "I'll just tell you about it. She's a English widow lady, but she married a German. She keeps a mighty nice boarding house here in Dalny, mostly for the skippers of the merchant vessels. I met her at a dance given by the Warehousemen's Association, and I was dead stuck on her from the minute I set eyes on her. She's a tight little craft, Mr. Ford, and dances fit to beat the band."

The battle ship was still poking in slowly, while the two barks seemed challenging her to butt into them. Captain Fortescue, on the bridge, with the glass glued to his eye, and the navigator, busily figuring with his pencil, were using every variety of swear word known in the navy. Mr. Stubbs, the chief quartermaster, who had just come to the battle ship, but whose reputation had preceded him, was at the wheel, and, as invariable in such circumstances, was damning everything Russian and Chinese and the visible universe and the configuration of Horse Anchorage in particular. All the same, in spite of barks and winds and tides and fogs, the battle ship was going straight.

The Lady in the Case.

"What's the lady's name, Mr. Hunks?" asked Ford, deeply interested in Hunks' tale.

"Mme. Katzellenbogen; that is to say, cat's elbow, but she's commonly called just plain Mme. Katz. Life ain't long enough for the whole name."

"Has she any children, Mr. Hunks?" asked little Ford.

Mr. Hunks at this cleared his throat and gazed thoughtfully around the horison.

"I think, Mr. Ford," he said, "there ain't no trouble in gettin' in this harbor if you just know how to do it. There's Mount Sampson over yonder, and Stubbs is at the wheel. He can pick his way anywhere without no chart for soundin's nor nothin' of the sort. I never see such a man at the wheel as Stubbs. These here young quartermasters and young warrant officers in general, they've got too much edducation now. They're entirely too smart and they dress too well, and reads and writes to excess, and don't do no swearin' nor drinkin' worth mentionin'. But all the same there ain't a captain in the service as could get Stubbs that wouldn't rather have him than the star quartermaster turned out at the naval training station at Newport, Rhode Island, U. S. A."

"And I heard Captain Fortescue say to Mr. Bolton that he had rather have you as his carpenter than any 'chips' in the service. He said your natural abilities and your experience were worth more even than modern training, and he thinks a great deal of modern training, too. But did you say the widow had any children, Mr. Hunks?"

Mr. Hunks shuffled uneasily and hitched up his trousers in a manner scorned by modern warrant officers.

"Well, yes, Mr. Ford. She has—a few"——

"How many, Mr. Hunks?"

"Well, Mr. Ford, Mme. Katz is a womanly woman—she's a motherly woman. She's got nine as promisin' young ones as ever I see, and all under fourteen years of age."

At this little Ford started visibly.

"But, you see," continued Mr. Hunks earnestly and totally forgetful of Mount Sampson, "that's a solid recommendation to a woman. She ain't got no time to run about when she's got nine children and a boarding house for skippers and warrant officers to look after. And the way she disciplines them children is a caution. I think she wallops 'em all every Saturday afternoon just to maintain discipline."

"But I thought you said you met her at a dance at the time?"

"Oh, yes," answered Mr. Hunks cheerfully. "You see, she's got a system. You can't manage nine children without a system. She's got a kind of set watch bill for 'em, and she's just as reg'lar in her duties as the paymaster on pay day. Every Saturday afternoon she wales 'em all round, from Teddy, the fourteen-year-old boy, down to Carl and Hans, the four-year-old twins. Then by way of rest and re-creation she goes to the weekly hops given in Warehouse Number Four and dances with her boarders and does 'em up in about ten minutes. She did me up in seventy-two seconds. The last time we was here I popped the question at pointblank range and she told me she'd give me my answer when I came back to Dalny, knowing as the ship was comin' this way in June. You see, there's some little details to settle first."

"The nine children, I suppose?" little Ford hazarded.

"Oh, Lord, no, Mr. Ford! them ain't no little details. You can trust Mme. Katz to take care of them nine children, but Mme. Katz"——

Here Mr. Hunks grew deeply embarrassed.

"Mme. Katz, she's a widow all right—that is to say, her husband left her because he said he got tired of supportin' nine children, and Mme. Katz told him to go to the devil and she would support 'em herself, and she's done it—and done it well, too. Then Mme. Katz told me that she warn't quite certain whether Katz was shammin' dead or not; he was such a sham anyway that after he had caused it to be known he was dead and buried likely as not he would come walkin' in some day, but she was goin' to look into the matter, and if Katz was really dead, as he alleged, she would become Mrs. Hunks. I've had a good many affairs du cur, Mr. Ford, but this one is reg'lar and official and I've enlisted for the war."

The Doubts of Little Ford.

Little Ford doubted whether the occasion were one for congratulations; nevertheless he warmly grasped Mr. Hunks' hand, and, the order being given for everybody to stand by to come to anchor, the conversation ended abruptly.

The battle ship was to remain at Dalny for a week, then go up the river to spend another week at Port Arthur and return. There were half a dozen war ships of various nations at the naval anchorage, among them the battle ship's old friend the big German cruiser Cecile. She was preceded by H. M. third class cruiser Seahorse, which took up a berth on one side of her and promptly got into a professional squabble about etiquette with the Russian port admiral. This required the presence of the Malampas, flagship of the British squadron, to settle. The Malampas walked into the port the next morning looking as innocent as the cat that has eaten the canary and anchored on the other side of the Cecile.

The Cecile thereupon determined to play a trick upon the two British ships, and the next afternoon just as the port admiral was leaving his official residence Captain Baron von Radowitz appeared and made his official farewell. He was in receipt of a despatch from his government which might require him to leave Dalny at a moment's notice and he wished to have all the official preliminaries attended to then. The Russian port admiral laughed in his sleeve and looked at Captain Baron von Radowitz, who grinned openly, and then the port admiral authorized him to depart at any moment he chose.

There was no occasion to fly the blue peter; every German officer, sailor and marine was already aboard the Cecile, also three sailors visiting from the American battle ship. Their liberty expired at nine o'clock that night, when they had to answer their names or answer to the master at arms whenever they should appear. At eight o'clock, in the midst of a black fog, the Melampas, watching the Cecile, suddenly saw her lights moving out toward the fixed light on the extremity of South San Shan Tau. Neither the Melampas nor the Seahorse had more than half steam up, and in spite of the frantic shoveling of coal into the stoke holes, steam does not get up in fifteen minutes. By that time the Cecile with extraordinary speed had disappeared in the darkness of the night.

Samuel Robinson, William Jones and a Lascar, borne on the ship's roster as Bottle of Beer, were reported as absent without leave. But luckily for Samuel Robinson, William Jones and Bottle of Beer, it was known that they had gone on the German ship which had left so suddenly and they could be acquitted in advance of any desire to make an independent cruise in the Cecile.

The annoyance of Captain Fortescue, the battle ship's commander, was extreme and lasted during the remaining days of the battle ship's stay at Dalny. Mr. Hunks spent as much of his time ashore as his duties would permit and coming back overflowed with emotion and enthusiasm concerning Madame Katz to little Ford and Stubbs, the chief quartermaster. He even took Mr. Stubbs ashore to call, where they remained to supper at Madame Katz's invitation.

Little Ford, who was deeply interested in the love affair, questioned Mr. Stubbs upon what impression Madame Katz had made upon him.

"The very best, Mr. Ford," responded Stubbs. "That woman is a prayerful, pious woman. When Hunks introduced me, there she was settin' on the veranda with three skippers and a couple of young warrant officers, every one of them practically on their knees before her, although they were settin' in chairs in a row. You never would have known there was a chick nor a child in the house; everything as quiet as a prayer meeting. She's a nice looking woman about forty years old (a mighty nice age for a woman) and the snappingest black eyes I ever see. She was dressed in a neat red gown with a lace collar. When Hunks introduced me he mentioned as I was a God fearing man when I was on shore, and she shook hands with me and said there weren't enough God fearing men in this wicked world. Then I found out she had read the last number of the Missionary Herald and knew just what was going on in the missionary field in China.

Easy to Pray.

"When we went in to supper she requested me to ask a blessing, and I did. I meant to make it short, but when I saw that grub I made a prayer. I just couldn't help it. It was as good grub as ever I whacked my jaws on and walloped my tongue over. If I wasn't myself a consecrated bachelor I'd go after that widow and be a father to them nine children. But it ain't right to go privateering, which is little short of piracy, so I ain't meddled with Hunks, and told him so, but I give him my blessing and told him how all things works together for them as loves the Lord, and I thinks it's kind of encouraging to Hunks. There's men in this ship that laughs at Hunks for wanting to marry a widow with nine children, but I knew a admiral once as was retired early and he said he was lonesome and wanted companionship and he married a widow with eight children and ain't never been lonesome since. So I have bid Hunks God-speed and I don't think the widow is playing with Hunks neither."

Just as Mr. Hunks had other matters to engage him besides his duties, so had Captain Fortescue, a man with an ineradicable impulse to hit back. The Cecile had carried off three of his men and he awaited her return with a view of getting even. Fate befriended him. The Cecile came in one June midday just as the battle ship was getting ready to leave at five o'clock in the afternoon. By the time the Cecile's anchor had kissed the mud a launch put off with Samuel Robinson, William Jones and Bottle of Beer and a very handsome letter of apology from Captain Baron von Radowitz. He exonerated the men from all blame and was very severe upon his own master-at-arms.

Captain Fortescue replied with a stiff note. The Cecile had gone up to the dock when Stubbs, who was a personal friend of Captain Fortescue, although separated by an official gulf, went to the cabin and had a private interview with Captain Fortescue. As a result he kept his eye on the German cruiser. About three o'clock he noticed a squad of men going ashore. Then, after another hurried interview with Captain Fortescue, Stubbs put off in the launch with three other warrant officers—four in all.

The official part of Dalny is after all a small place, and a man or three men can be very easily found if desired. The launch waited an hour, and at the end of that time the four warrant officers of the battle ship appeared on the pier. They were escorting three men in naval uniform, and all of them, to use Mr. Stubbs' illustration, were three sheets in the wind and the other one a flapping. In fact, they could not have got to the landing stage or in the launch without assistance. The launch ran off to the battle ship and Mr. Stubbs and his three satellites assisted the three supernumeraries aboard, and then Mr. Stubbs went to report, not in the captain's cabin, but in his sleeping cabin with the door shut and the conversation carried on in whispers.

"I got 'em, sir," whispered Mr. Stubbs. "Three of the band. One of them is the finest fiddler I ever heard in my life, sir. It seems that the German Captain went ashore somewhere about here and heard the feller fiddlin', and as they was short one man in the band he asked the man, whose first name is Carl and ain't got no last name that I could find out. If he would like to enlist. The Germans, sir, think as much of having a good band on the ship as they think of having a good engine room force. So Carl said he would enlist, and besides his pay as musician the Captain has him in his cabin to play solos and sich when he has company, and so do the ward room officers, and they give him tips, and the feller can fairly make the fiddle talk. Well, sir, when we went ashore we looked into a liquor place, and there we saw these fellers. Carl was fiddling and drinking beer at the same time like a horse at a drinking trough. We gave him more beer, and so we did the other two musicians, and we invited 'em aboard ship, telling 'em that they could make our band look like thirty cents when they started up blowing and fingering. They weren't in no condition to object, so we escorted 'em here and gave 'em some more beer. They have passed the joking stage and reached the weeping stage now, and they will be sleeping in about ten minutes."

One Good Fiddler.

"Captain Baron von Radowitz will be short three of his musicians, and his pet fiddler among them," chuckled Captain Fortescue. "Take good care of them, Stubbs, and give them all the beer they want, and sling them to sleep if they won't go to sleep any other way."

Mr. Stubbs departed and so did the battle ship, shortly after steaming out into the great river toward Port Arthur. Mr. Hunks, like most men, at being torn from their Dulcineas, was very sad and extremely short and difficult to please with his subordinates. Not even the delights of Port Arthur, a pleasant place for a naval ship, were equal to cheering him up.

The battle ship remained at Port Arthur three days, and Captain Fortescue gave strict orders that the three German musicians who had come aboard without authority should be closely watched, so that they should not desert.

On the second morning, however, the master at arms had the unpleasant report to make that Carl, the expert fiddler, who had got over his sleeping fit, had disappeared.

The facts, as known to the master at arms, were that Mr. Hunks had gone ashore in a boat with Carl, and the master at arms, supposing Carl had been given liberty, made no inquiry. Mr. Hunks had returned, but no Carl. Mr. Hunks was requested to attend the Captain immediately in the cabin, and gave the following account:—That the market boat going ashore, he, Mr. Hunks, had concluded to go in it. He was followed into the boat by Carl, whom he understood to be, not a prisoner, but the involuntary guest of the battle ship. Mr. Hunks' mind being upon certain native eating houses on the Tiger's Tail, he paid no attention whatever to Carl and supposed that he was going ashore by permission, and did not know to the contrary until he was interrogated by the master at arms.

This was most unsatisfactory to Captain Fortescue, who made no bones of saying so. The Captain was very much annoyed that he should be balked of the pleasure of returning the three men to the Cecile with a note couched in exactly the same terms with which Captain Baron von Radowitz had addressed him. However, there was no help for it, so the next morning, in the midst of a heavy fog, the battle ship turned and picked her way out of the harbor, sounding her underway fog whistle while the gun boomed from the dockyard in answer.

Once outside, however, the fog lifted, the sun shone and the battle ship shook herself and went racing down the river once more to Port Dalny.

Mr. Hunks' spirits rose visibly as they neared Port Dalny, where dwelt the widow Katz.

On a brilliant June morning the battle ship arrived at Port Dalny and took up her old berth. Mr. Hunks was not by nature effusive, but, as Mr. Stubbs said to little Ford:—

"I've sailed with Hunks off and on for thirty year, and I've seen him make a durned fool of himself two or three times with the ladies, but he's done it worse with this here widow than ever I see before. Howsomedever, she's worth it if any woman is. I have swore a great big swear never to get married, but the widow Katz could do for me like she done for Hunks if she wanted to, but she likes Hunks. There ain't no sort of doubt about it, and he likes her and her nine children, too, and I ain't no pirate."

That evening Mr. Hunks was seen getting into the launch which left the ship at seven o'clock for those officers who wished to go ashore and be hilarious until the nine o'clock boat returned. Mr. Hunks wore his special full dress uniform. In the boat he deposited a bird cage as big as a chicken coop, which contained a couple of green parrots that chattered and screamed violently as they were transferred to the launch. He had one of the ship's market baskets filled with flowers, fruits and vegetables brought from Port Arthur.

After these were taken aboard the launch Mr. Hunks himself took charge of two of the biggest and most ferocious monkeys any one aboard the battle ship had ever seen. Their fore legs as well as their hind legs were tied, and they were carefully swathed in blankets. Their screaming and chattering almost drowned that of the parrots and raised such a commotion that the men of the Cecile, anchored close by, ran to the rail and thought a mutiny was taking place aboard the American battle ship. Mr. Hunks, however, sat in the forward part of the launch with smiling composure. He had with him a sailor to assist in transporting this assortment of bijouterie.

"There goes Hunks," said Stubbs, enviously, to little Ford, who was standing by the rail watching. "All them things is presents for the widow Katz and to amuse the children, and Hunks is a good lookin' feller, for all he's fifty-four years old, and has been in civil life. Well, the widow won't be likely to resist them parrots. They're the hardest swearers that could be found in Port Arthur, and the man charged a extry guinea apiece for 'em on that account. Even if the parrots fail to charm, that basket of choice vegetables bought at ship's prices will do for her. Hunks is going to the dance to-night, and I reckon he'll come back engaged to the widow."

Little Ford listened to these confidences with the deepest interest. He suspected that there was a keen rivalry between Mr. Hunks and Mr. Stubbs, and although he respected Mr. Stubbs he loved Mr. Hunks and rather wished him to come out ahead in the tourney of love.

The story of Mr. Hunks' love affair and the deep and concealed rivalry of Stubbs had got abroad in the ship and was even known in the wardroom and had penetrated to the cabin. In the steerage, after the ship's boys were gone out and the midshipmen were smoking, the matter was canvassed and the betting became lively. Mr. Hunks was a hot favorite and the betting was two to one on him, as follows:—First, that Mr. Hunks would get ahead of Mr. Stubbs, and, second, that Mr. Hunks would be married to the widow Katz before the ship left Port Dalny that day week.

The holders of these odds were naturally deeply interested in Mr. Hunks' visit ashore, and those who did not have shore leave watched anxiously for his return. Mr. Hunks did not appear until midnight, when a native boat brought him out and he climbed aboard. His arrival was noted by little Ford, who had ten dollars up on the question of Mr. Hunks' love affair and was on the watch to interview him as soon as he came aboard.

But Mr. Hunks made straight for his room, locked himself in and was not visible until his duties called him on deck next morning. One look, however, at his face revealed that something had gone wrong and his subordinates were made to feel it. All day little Ford watched for an opportunity to confer with Mr. Hunks, but although normally nothing was easier, on that day it seemed impossible for Mr. Hunks to find time for anything except threats and menaces to his subordinates. Little Ford, who was anxious about his ten dollars, made inquiries of Stubbs, but Stubbs knew no more than did little Ford, except to say:—

"All I know, Mr. Ford, is that Hunks has been giving hell to everybody under him aboard this ship ever since six o'clock this morning."

This was very depressing to Mr. Ford, who disliked the idea of borrowing ten dollars from Redward, to whom he would owe that amount in case Mr. Hunks had not pulled it off with the widow Katz, as it was expressed in the steerage. At last, in the evening after dinner when the officers were smoking on deck, little Ford become so uneasy about his ten dollars that he nerved himself to go and speak to Mr. Hunks. Mr. Hunks was leaning over the forward rail looking moodily at the Cecile, which lay a short distance off.

It was a bright, pure June evening, with a clear sky and a placid sea. On shore the sounds of toil had ceased and the tranquility of the evening prevailed. The Cecile lay at anchor, her big black hull and military masts sharply outlined against the dark blue sky, in which the sunset glow still lingered. From the cruiser's deck came the sweet echo of music, for, naturally, she had the crack band in those waters. As the music floated with penetrating sweetness across the blue water Mr. Hunks appeared to grow more and more melancholy, as shown by his attitude.

Little Ford, going up to him, touched him gently on the arm, and said:—

"I say, Mr. Hunks, how do you stand with the widow?"

Mr. Hunks turned a haggard and disappointed eye upon little Ford.

"I stand, sir, like a Chinese coolie does with the King of England," he answered gloomily. "I've had a good many jolts before this with women, but they were merry jests compared with that I got from the widow Katz, and it's all my own doing, too."

"I wish, Mr. Hunks," said little Ford bashfully, after a moment's pause, "you'd tell me about it. You see, in the steerage we've got some money up on it, and it's very important, you know, that we should find out positively about it."

"It's a damned sight more important to me, Mr. Ford," replied Mr. Hunks, with a wan smile. "I'll tell you all about it. It kind of helps a man to tell his sorrows to a sympathizing friend."

Little Ford and Mr. Hunks then went and sat on a couple of camp stools and were immediately joined by the chief quartermaster, who drew up another camp stool and listened, as did little Ford, with profound sympathy to Mr. Hunks' tale of woe.

"Well, Mr. Ford and Stubbs," said Mr. Hunks, "I always had a tender heart not only for women, but for men, too."

"The fellers under you ain't found it out yet," interrupted Mr. Stubbs, striking a match on the seat of his trousers and lighting his pipe.

"Anyhow," said Mr. Hunks with a mournful smile, "I have a too tender heart. You know, I felt sorry for them three musicians we took up to Port Arthur, especially for that Carl, the crack fiddler. And I got to talking to him, and he told me he had a wife and nine children somewhere in these parts and that he knew they'd all be wild about him and would think he had deserted 'em. It seemed to me there was a kind of parallel between Carl's case and mine. I had a sweetheart with nine children, and it would have gone mighty hard with me if she had supposed that I was going to French it and leave her like that. So when we was at Port Arthur, Carl told me that he was mighty anxious to get back to Dalny and to his ship; that he made a good bit of money by playing his highfalutin' things in the captain's cabin and the ward room.

"Them Germans loves music almost as much as they does beer, so I mentioned to him, casual like, that he warn't a prisoner and when the boat went ashore if he could get into it without Cap'n Fortescue seeing him he hadn't broke no law of God or man. Then I mentioned, incidental, that I was going ashore at seven o'clock that evening, and if he walked into the launch bold and nobody asked him any questions I certainly wouldn't ask him any. So Carl took a notion to do that thing.

"I told him he could take the steamer back to Dalny and the feller said that was easier said nor done, because he didn't have money enough to take him back. Then I went down in my pocket and I handed out five round gold English sovereigns and told him, after paying his expenses to Dalny, to use the rest of the money for the nine children. Carl burst into tears on my breast; that feller cried like a baby when I gave him them five gold sovereigns and said his wife would call down blessings on my head and would remember me in her prayers night and morning as long as she lived.

"Well, sir, it worked beautiful, and Carl got ashore and made the steamer. I kinder felt a glow, thinking to myself when I got down to Port Dalny I'd tell the widow Katz what I'd done and thought Carl would pay the money back, but I'd refuse to take it from him. The rest of the time we was at Port Arthur I spent collecting them curios to take down to Mme. Katz to amuse her and the children. Them monkeys cost me a little fortune and like to eat me up besides. If I hadn't tied their legs fore and aft they'd have chawed me up like a pecan nut. And as for them parrots, they made such a noise forward, screaming all night, that the men complained to the master at arms, and it was as much as I could do to keep them parrots until we got to Port Dalny. Well, sir, I took the whole kit and kerboodle ashore last night."

"We saw you," said Stubbs, deeply interested, "and I said to Mr. Ford, I said, them parrots with all their bad language would do for the widow, and I believed you would be married before the ship left Port Dalny."

Money Versus Love.

"So I thought, too," answered Mr. Hunks, with tears in his voice. "I paid a couple of Chinese to carry the basket with the flowers and fruits and vegetables, and the bird cage with the parrots in it, up to the house, and I myself held the monkeys. It wasn't safe to trust 'em with anybody else. I thought to myself when I got to the house and walked up on the veranda, I'd see all them merchant skippers settin' around, and maybe some of the warrant officers from the Cecile, and then Mme. Katz would spread all over me right before 'em, and I own up it give me a glow around here."

Mr. Hunks sentimentally rubbed his chest on the left side.

"When I got in sight of the house there on the veranda sure enough was four skippers and a couple of warrant officers from the Cecile and two Russians from the garrison, and Mme. Katz herself, in a yellow frock, with a big red ribbon bow in her hair and not a child in sight. It's a kinder mystery to me how that woman keeps them children out of the way. But what was the most surprising was that Carl—what's-his-name, the chief fiddler—was lying in a hammock. I walks up on the veranda steps and saluted the widow and was just about to present the monkeys when she threw her arms around my neck and kissed me. I declare, Mr. Ford and Stubbs, I never had such feelings in my life, not even the time I was blowed up in the tug and was rescued after I'd been in the water three hours. All the men settin' round grinned, and I thought they was dying of envy. I returned the salute, Mr. Ford and Stubbs, gun for gun, and was polite, and then up jumps Carl out of the hammock and begins to hug and kiss me too and call me his benefactor. That was more than I could stand. I kicked him off and told him to choke his luff, but he didn't choke his luff." Here Mr. Hunks took out his handkerchief and openly wiped his eyes.

Stubbs laid a heavy hand on Mr. Hunks' shoulder.

"I see it all, Hunks," said he; "you was an innocent and unconscious pirate."

"That's just what I was, Stubbs," said Mr. Hunks, swallowing and clearing his throat. "Mme. Katz was no more a widow than you are a widow or Mr. Ford is a widow. Come to think of it, she never told me her husband was dead. She just said he had disappeared three years before, but she had forgotten to mention that he had come back, and there she had made a damned fool of me before all them merchant skippers. I wouldn't mind it so much if they weren't in the merchant service, and every warrant officer in Dalny is laughing in his sleeve at 'poor Hunks.'"

Little Ford, reflecting on all the money he had put on Mr. Hunks, felt almost as doleful as that unfortunate carpenter, and said so.

"I'll have to pay up," he remarked sadly, "I backed you, Mr. Hunks, straight through and through, and now it's all up."

A painful silence succeeded, Mr. Hunks with his eyes fixed on the Cecile, from which the music by the band still flooded the air with soft melody. Suddenly Mr. Hunks jumped to his feet and shouted, "Drat that music, I say!" and sat down again.

After a long pause the chief quartermaster asked Hunks in a tone of deep sympathy:—

"How much do you reckon, Hunks, the widow cost you on the whole?"

"Twenty-seven pounds in good English money," promptly responded Mr. Hunks, "and that ain't counting the £5 I gave Carl nor the money I spent on the nine children. If I get out of this affair under £50 I'll be doing well, but I tell you this, and call you, Mr. Ford, to witness, that if ever I looks at any woman again I ask as an especial favor that you will have me surveyed by the board of medical officers and declared crazy and sent to the Government Hospital for the Insane at Washington, D. C. I ain't fit to be trusted ashore. I ain't fit to be trusted with my own money where widows is concerned."

Then Stubbs, who was universally reckoned a good shipmate, put his arm on Mr. Hunks' shoulder.

"Hunks," he said, "I tell you the truth. If it hadn't happened to you it would have happened to me, though I don't know as I would have given the fiddler £5 to return to his wife and nine children without asking him what particular lady with nine children he referred to. But I own up I was the stuck on Mme. Katz that I'd have give her all the monkeys and parrots to be found in these parts if she had smiled on me. I'd have gone to the paymaster and got all the money he'd let me have to spend on them children. To see that woman dance around at the hops in that yellow dress you speak of was worth a month's pay. Your loss, Hunks, is my gain."

Thereafter the friendship between the chief quartermaster and Mr. Hunks, which had always been strong, grew yet closer, and little Ford had to borrow the money from Redward, his chum, in order to pay the same Redward, to whom he had lost the bet on Mr. Hunks.

TEMPLE OF FAME GIVEN AT NORWOOD

Highly Creditable Entertainment Given by Ladies of the Methodist Church

Special to the Review.

Norwood, April 12.—The ladies of the Methodist church have been busily occupied for several weeks past in preparing the popular entertainment "The Temple of Fame," which was presented on Friday night last to a large and delighted audience in the town hall, Norwood. The manner in which each partic pant performed her part was, to say the least, a surprise to those who were privileged to witness the production. Many were heard to say that each seemed to vie with the other to see which could excell. The costumes were well chosen, and gotten up to truly depict the different characters represented. The performance occupied a little over two hours, and was gone through without one single hitch. Great credit is due the committee who had the training of the cast in hand. The proceeds of the entertainment amounted to nearly $150, and the committee had about $113 after all expenses were paid, to apply on the decoration of the church, which was finished a short time ago.

LENT, 1910.

At last 'tis Lent, and now content
Comes o'er us, calm and sweet,
For while it last we all may fast
And stint ourselves on meat.

No more we may three times a day
Devour chop, roast or steak.
By might and main we must abstain
And of less flesh partake.

In other years we've fought with tears
Such rules and laws severe,
But now we yield, our joy revealed
With ill dissembled cheer.

For, oh, each steak that we forsake
To munch instead a crust
In one less sale which fact we hail,
That might enrich the trust.

Each time a chop or roast we drop
We've struck the trust a blow.
For forty days we've many ways
To fill the trust with woe.

So fill the dish with humble fish
And at the butcher jeer.
Oh, what content if only Lent
Could last the whole glad year!

A Perplexing Problem.

I found the great inventor straddling by his work bench. His massive brow was crinkled and guarled and told me he was concentrating his wonderful thought upon some mystifying problem. Before I could arouse him from his state of profound meditation I found it necessary to drop a sledge-hammer on the floor and to yell at him in my loudest tone. But when he looked up and recognized me his absorbed manner changed instantly and he greeted me with most refreshing affability.

I asked him if he were still worrying over his wireless telegraphic invention.

"Oh, my, no!" he answered me. "I completed that and got it off my mind a week ago. The wireless device I am now trying to evolve is infinitely more perplexing."

I asked him what his intended device was.

"A wireless fly screen," he told me.—Chicago News.

No Relief.

Indignant Passenger (to railway manager)—Here, I say! I got a cinder in my eye from one of your engines, and it cost me $10 for a doctor to get it out and dress the eye. Now, what do you propose to do in the matter?

Railway Manager—Nothing, my dear sir, nothing. We have no use for the cinder, and you are perfectly welcome to it. No doubt, strictly speaking, you did go off with our property—the cinder, of course, was not yours—but we do not care to make a fuss about such a small matter. Pray do not give the incident a moment's thought.—New York Journal.

Young Folks

GAME OF INITIALS.

Fun With Pencil and Paper That Tests the Ingenuity.

A pencil and paper game for a stormy day is the initial game. Write your initials at the top of a paper and hand it on to the next person. Then a set of questions are read, and the answer must begin with the initials on the paper. Between the questions the papers are passed on, so that every one tries one's skill at the same initials.

We will suppose that some child's name is Ruth Pitman, so that her initials are R. P. Suppose the first question is, "How does she look?" The answer might be "Really perfect" or "Rather pretty."

The next question is, "What is her favorite color?" and the answer might be "Reddish purple" or "Rose pink." Another question is, "What is her favorite dish?" and might be answered "Raspberry pudding," or "Roasted pineapple," or "Red plums," or even "Raw potatoes." "What is her favorite amusement?" can be a question. Why, that might be answered by anything from "Reading poetry" to "Roasting peanuts." "What is her greatest accomplishment?" "Riding ponies" or "Raising pansies."

"What is her greatest fault?" "Recurrent peevishness."

"What is her greatest virtue?" "Remarkable patience."

You see, this Ruth Pitman might be surprised to find what a versatile person she was, and you will find that you have made all sorts of funny and surprising combinations when the papers are finally read aloud at the end of the game.

Br'er Rabbit and the Foxes.

"I'll stop those tramps sitting about my grounds," said Mr. Rabbit.

"It's very kind of Mr. Rabbit to put these nice chairs under a tree for us. We are very comfortable," said the wicked pair.

Just then Mr. Rabbit cut the string holding the tree down, so Fox and his friend got a rise in the world.

A Feat of Magic.

Take a large apple and cut a few pieces in the shape of candle ends, round at the bottom and flat at the top—in fact, as much like a piece of candle as possible. Now cut some slips from a sweet almond as near as you can to resemble a wick and stick them into the imitation candle. Light them for an instant to make the tops black, blow them out, and they are ready for the trick. One of two should be artfully placed in a snuffer tray or candlestick. You then inform your friends that during your "travels in the Russian empire" you learned, like the Russians, to be fond of candles, at the same time lighting your artificial candles (the almonds will readily take fire and flame for a few seconds), pop them into your mouth and swallow them one after the other.

A Pen and Ink Trick.

With a pen and ink make a streak on your hand along the line from the index to the little finger. You ask some one in the company to cover your hand with a hat, which you make him hold, and while he holds it you bend your hand as if to close it. You open it immediately and invite him to take the hat away, and a cross is made.

Strange Things.

A letter tells,
And a dollar bells,
And bells the Hyslop day,
But no plumber plumbs,
And no summer summs,
The dictionaries say.
A waiter waits,
And a skater skates,
So it seems a little queer
That no crater crates
And no trifler trifls,
As far as one can hear.

ARE ANGRY OVER QUEBEC'S PROPOSED PULP EMBARGO

Announcement That Province Will Prohibit Exportation of Pulpwood to the United States Has Evoked Surprise and Regret in Washington.

Washington, D.C., April 14.—The announcement that the Province of Quebec would almost immediately prohibit the exportation of pulpwood to the United States is received here with surprise and regret.

At the State Department it was said that the prospect of close commercial relations and of a trade treaty with the Dominion were thought to be sufficiently encouraging to deter any of the provinces from imposing prohibitory restrictions at this time. Such summary action as is proposed, it is felt, would interfere seriously with the realization of the suggested trade treaty, and might in a measure nullify the good that was accomplished by the closer friendly relations into which the two Governments have recently been brought.

The proposed increase of stumpage dues and license fees for the sake of insuring increased revenue is not questioned, but the action to prohibit the exportation of pulpwood is regarded in some quarters as closely approaching an unfriendly act.

During the tariff negotiations in Ottawa, and subsequently at Albany and Washington, there was some discussion of the wood pulp situation, but that matter is understood to have been left to be further discussed in connection with the proposed reciprocity treaty between the United States and the Dominion, the initial steps in which, it was believed, would be taken next month.

That the decision of the Quebec authorities is designed to benefit Canadian labor is the general belief of the Washington officials. Ultimately they think, it will result in the establishment of pulp factories in the province.

However, the amount of pulpwood coming from the Quebec crown lands is not very considerable. Last year the total importation of the U. S. from Quebec was 1,000,000 cords, of which 130,000 were cut from crown lands. The order-in-council soon to be issued will not affect the exportation of timber from private lands.

There are 6,000 quarter miles of crown lands in the Province of Quebec, of which American interests—the International Paper Co. and the Berlin Mills Co. — lease or rent more than half. An adjudication of their rights under the new order of things will be a question for the State Department to take up.

Quebec Will Stand Firm.

Montreal, April 14.—A special from Quebec says, regarding a report from Washington that President Taft may impose retaliatory duties on the Province of Quebec, because of the Government's determination to prohibit the export of unmanufactured pulp wood, that it is understood that the Government is fully prepared for any such action.

"The lumber interests of the province are being protected by us," said a prominent official of the Government, "and they must be prepared to meet a higher duty on pulp. I do not think the people of the United States would favor any increased duty on pulp and paper from Canada."

The new law prohibiting the exportation of pulp wood will apply only to pulp wood cut on and after May 1 next, so that all that has been cut during the past winter can be sent to its destination.

Premier Gouin had officially announced in the Legislature that it had been decided to prohibit the exportation of all pulpwood cut on crown lands before it was manufactured in Canada; secondly, to increase the stumpage dues by 60 per cent., and, thirdly, to increase the ground rent per square mile from $3 to $5.

MISS MAUDE ADAMS AS SHE WILL LOOK IN THE ROLE OF CHANTECLER.

GEORGE BRADBURY'S CHARGES AGAINST SUPT. F. PEDLEY

Member for Selkirk, Man., Says That Official in Indian Affairs Department Was a Party to a System of Bribery by Which Indians Were Lured Into Selling Their Lands for a Third of Their Value.

Ottawa, April 14. Geo. Bradbury, M.P. for Selkirk, made an extraordinary charge Tuesday night in the Commons against Frank Pedley, superintendent of Indian Affairs, he accusing him of being a party to bribing the St. Peter's Indians of Manitoba to surrender their lands.

The Indians had been robbed by speculators under the very eyes of the Indian agent. They got only a third of the value of their land, which was sold by the speculators for seven or eight times what they gave for it. Whether the Minister was conscious of it or not, the whole transaction was so arranged that a magnificent area of land should fall into the hands of William Frank of Winnipeg. He met Frank on the train near Ottawa, he said, when Frank said to him: "I am going to buy these lands; you ought to come in with me."

Fred. Heep, a Selkirk lawyer; G. Tracey and an American named Funk bought the co-operation of the chief and councillors in carrying on negotiations with the rest of the Indians. Some of these Indians never saw the patents for their lands, the chief and councillors had been bribed, money was advanced to others with their patents and security, and Tracey got many of them to sign alleged receipts for hay which turned out to be powers of attorney. The fact that the surrender was asked for by S. J. Jackson, ex-M.P. for Selkirk, on the eve of a general election, showed that the favor was being obtained for certain parties.

He had asked the Minister for an investigation, Mr. Bradbury said, but Mr. Oliver refused, though sending Mr. Williams, the law clerk of the Department, to make private enquiries. He might as well have sent this innocent young man to Hong Kong to canvass Chinese.

Not one-eighth of the band knew that these men were trying to secure their homes and to this day many were unaware that their homes did not belong to them.

He accused Superintendent Pedley of having bribed the Indians at the voting place, Chief Justice Howells of Manitoba being present. Mr. Bradbury alleged that Mr. Pedley said when the Indians were disinclined to surrender: "I have $5,000 in my satchel. If you vote for this surrender to-night I will divide this among you. If you don't vote, I will go away and you will get no money."

Mr. Bradbury quoted from a letter to the Minister from Mr. Pedley, in which he stated that not all of the money had been spent.

Mr. Bradbury spoke for over four hours, and at 12.55 o'clock yesterday morning Frank Oliver moved the adjournment.

Before the orders of the day were called in the House yesterday morning Messrs. Armstrong and Ross (West Middlesex) called the attention of the Minister of the Interior to complaints which had been made during the past few days of alleged arbitrary and impudent treatment by American immigrant officials of Canadian citizens seeking entry to the United States on trains crossing the boundary at Sarnia and Windsor.

Hon. Mr. Oliver said that the arrangement of having immigrant officials inspect passengers on trains on either side of the boundary prior to crossing was a matter of convenience, so as not to delay traffic unnecessarily. There had been cases where it had been found that American officials had been overzealous, but in every case where complaint had been made the matter had been referred to the authorities at Washington and a satisfactory reply had always been received.

Mr. Claude Macdonnel of Toronto also drew the attention of the Minister to what he considered to be the hardships imposed on immigrants landing from British and European points in being turned back because they were not complying with the requirements of the new regulations necessitating each immigrant to have a minimum sum of money in his possession before landing. Many of these, said Mr. Macdonnel, had not been aware of the requirements before they sailed, and he thought greater care should be taken to have them forewarned.

Mr. Oliver said that the immigration regulations as passed by Parliament had been widely advertised in Europe a year ago and all the steamship companies were fully advised of the requirements. If the law was on the statute books the Government was bound to enforce it. There must necessarily be hardships in some cases, but he did not see how this could be avoided if the law was not to be entirely a dead letter.

WITNESSES WERE PAID

Thaw's Lawyer Wants to Collect the Money Used to Smooth Case.

New York, April 14. Clifford H. Hartridge, one of the attorneys who defended Harry Thaw in his first trial for the murder of Stanford White, failed yesterday in his effort to collect from Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, the prisoner's mother, a balance of $92,000 for counsel fees and disbursements which he claimed to be due him. He already has had $32,000.

More than that, Judge Holt made the sensational statement that an enquiry was called for regarding the professional conduct of Hartridge and to determine whether ground existed for a perjury prosecution.

Hartridge had recounted numerous payments he claimed to have made to women of the tenderloin and others in smoothing out certain stories concerning Thaw.

Judge Holt declared that if Hartridge had paid money to women who might have been witnesses at the Thaw trial, it was a case for the grand jury.

In a letter to The Weekly Sun, Goldwin Smith says, concerning his recent injury: "However, Dr. Grant at all events, may be congratulated on the triumph of his medical skill over one of the worst cases which come under the cognizance of medicine."

TWO YOUTHS FOUND DEAD IN BED

Pittsburg, Pa., April 14.—Two sons of Philip Badali, a wealthy Italian of Wilkinsburg, were found dead in bed early yesterday. The youths, one 18 and the other 16 years of age, were victims of poison, according to the coroner's office, either administered by some one or taken by mistake for medicine.

When Badali learned of the death of his two boys, he fell in a faint, declaring wildly that the deaths were due to his enemies, to whom he had refused to pay money.

Two years ago Badali's summer home was burned. For months after the incendiary blaze, police guarded the Badali home day and night. Letters have been received by the family demanding money for the past six months.

LABOR PARTY HAS MAJORITY IN BOTH HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT

Heavy Polling and Keen Excitement Marks Fight in Which Premier Deakin Goes Down to Defeat Before Ex-Premier Fisher.

Sydney, Australia, April 14.—Elections for members of Parliament were held throughout Australia yesterday. Returns already received assure a working majority for the Labor party in both Houses. The voting was heavy.

Intense interest was taken because for the first time a coalition party, headed by Premier Deakin, opposed the Labor party, under the leadership of ex-Premier Fisher.

A very noteworthy feature of the campaign in every state has been the absence of any feeling of what might be called an anti-imperial nature. This applies not only to the members of the Ministerial Fusian Party, but to the Labor party's candidates, who constitute the opposition. Such questions as preference to Great Britain, adequate naval and military defence in co-operation and co-ordination with the forces of the rest of the Empire, are accepted whole-heartedly by both parties.

The position of the Ministerialists was greatly strengthened by the adhesion of the state Ministers to the financial agreement which Mr. Deakin submitted to a plebiscite for ratification. In the ordinary course of events the state Cabinets, as such, would not interfere in the Federal election.

In his concluding election address, Mr. Deakin referred to the financial agreement as being the fusionists' main plank, and which he defended as being fair both to the states and the Commonwealth. He pointed out that it provided £1,700,000 during the current year for Federal needs, which otherwise would cause a huge deficit. He also defended the embodiment of the agreement in the constitution, contending that that was the only way in which they could make the states secure against an arbitrary alteration of the agreement by a casual Parliamentary majority.

He then attacked the Labor program, which he said introduced unification by starving the state finances, by seizing through the medium of the land tax the sources of state taxation, and by centralizing the control of industrial legislation throughout Australia.

The whole Commonwealth is showing the signs of abounding prosperity enjoyed by the chief producing industries. A bumper harvest has been reaped, and is now being shipped to Great Britain, the fruit and butter export industries have had a good season, and the wool clip has not only been a heavy one, but has fetched excellent prices in the auction room.

CHILD VICTIMS OF THE WHITE SLAVE DEALERS

New York, April 14.—With the arraignment of six men in a Brooklyn Police Court yesterday, and with warrants out for twenty others, one of the biggest raids on dealers in "white slaves" ever made in New York, is in progress. Eight girls are to testify against the prisoners. One of them is only nine years old; the oldest 15. They all had been lured to a moving picture show, and then taken to a house.

DOGS AND CATS ARE INCINERATED

EX-JUDGE DOHERTY IS SECOND LEAD

Ottawa, April 14.—It was decided yesterday by the Conservative members, in caucus, to postpone the proposed convention indefinitely.

R. L. Borden was not in the House yesterday morning, as he is not well. It was remarked upon as significant that, in his absence, Mr. Doherty of Montreal filled his place instead of the usual old-time deputy leader, in asking for a short postponement of consideration of the navy bill, which was agreed to.

$51,000 For a Statue.

New York, April 14.—At the sale of the Yerkes art collection, Houdon's life-size bronze figure of "Diana" was knocked down to Duveen for $51,000. MORE SETTLERS FOR DOMINION

London, April 14.—Four hundred and fifty Salvation Army immigrants will sail for Canada to-day. Many of these immigrants possess sums up to $500 and over. With last week's batch of 300 it is estimated that the total capital represented will be $150,000. The 100,000 emigrants who are expected to go to Canada during 1910 will probably represent nearly $25,000,000 in cash. Hundreds are now paying $15 extra passage money via New York because they are unable to travel direct to Canada.

Service said he drank the poison by mistake, thinking the bottle contained a tonic. He is an engineer on the G.T.R.

The cargo is one of the most costly that has ever been in the harbor, as it is stated that the 250,000 bushels are worth in the neighborhood of $600,000. Since the cargo was loaded the grain has risen in price and some thousands of the above sum is included in the increased value of the material since it was loaded into the boat last fall.

STRENGTH OF MR. BORDEN

A Conservative caucus at Ottawa has pronounced strongly in favor of Mr. Robert L. Borden as leader of the party. The recent discussion about the Conservative leadership has revealed the strength of public sentiment in favor of Mr. Borden. There can be no doubt now that he is the choice of the great majority of Conservatives, and any Conservative convention would greet him with overwhelming appause. There is a reason to believe that the belief in him extends beyond the limits of the Conservative party and that many Liberals now regard him as the most trustworthy and capable man in Dominion politics. A discussion that seemed at first to indicate weakness and disintegration in the party is likely to end in such general recognition of Mr. Borden's strength in the country that the Conservative members in Parliament will be more ready than ever before to be influenced by his judgment on the various questions that come before the House.

KINGS COMBINE BILL

That something should be done to regulate trusts and combines there can be no doubt, but whether Hon. Mackenzie King's bill will be effective is not so certain. The proposal to refer it to a special committee of the House for consideration seems reasonable. Parliament would not be bound to accept the conclusions of the committee, but some suggestions might be made which would strengthen the bill.

While it is wise to take precautions to prevent trusts and combines from unduly enhancing prices great care must be taken not to so harass and embarrass capitalists as to drive them from the country or prevent the investment of capital.

In the debate in Parliament on the bill, Dr. Clark, a free trader of Red Deer, Alberta, opposed it on the ground that the remedy for trusts and combines was the abolition of the protective tariff. He alleged that there were no trusts and combines in free trade England.

As a matter of fact there are more trusts and combines in England than in Canada in proportion to population.

CANADIAN AND AUSTRALIAN GROWTH

Professor Gregory, of Melbourne University, in a brochure on the Australian Commonwealth, says that it has taken Canada two and a half centuries to reach the population that Australia has secured in less than one.

Undoubtedly Australia grew more rapidly for a time than Canada did. However, the important fact of the present is that Canada is now growing more rapidly than Australia or any other country in the world.

The provinces which now make up the Dominion of Canada lie alongside the United States from ocean to ocean. For many years they had no protective tariff, while the United States gave thorough protection to home industries. The result was that great manufacturing towns developed throughout the United States, while the provinces of British North America remained stagnant. The young people of these provinces, finding no employment at home, emigrated to the United States. The last census of the United States showed that there were over a million Canadians in that country. If the descendants of Canadians as well as Canadians were counted, it would probably be found that there were as many in the United States as in Canada.

If the Australian provinces, while practising free trade, had had contiguous to them a great nation enjoying the highest kind of protection the population of the provinces would have been depleted.

For a number of years Canada has had a protective tariff and rapid progress has been made since it was adopted. If our tariff had been higher our progress would have been greater, as many millions of dollars worth of goods made in factories of the United States for Canadian consumption would have been made in Canada.

ST. LAWRENCE POWER

The Review referred the other day to the fact that the Ontario Government is assisting the western counties to get cheap electric power from Niagara, and asked: "What is it doing for Eastern Ontario?" The Ottawa Free Press says in reference to this:—

"Yet when Hon. G. P. Graham and other Liberals supporting the St. Lawrence Power Transmission company's bill in the Commons asked the same question they were accused of assailing the policy of the Ontario Government. Will the Review now be counted as one of the enemies of the Ontario Government?"

The handing over of the St. Lawrence water power to an American monopoly will not help the Ontario Government to supply cheap power to Eastern Ontario. If the St. Lawrence power can be developed without injury to navigation it should be under Government control. The Ontario Government went into the Niagara power business at the demand of the municipalities because it was found that private power corporations charged exorbitant rates.

If the Dominion Government would take charge of the development of St. Lawrence power, having due regard for the necessities of navigation, the Ontario Government would willingly assume the responsibility of distributing it to municipalities in Eastern Ontario.

The Winnipeg Free Press is earnestly advocating the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway, while the Toronto Globe is strongly opposing it. Which of these two Liberal newspapers will win is uncertain, but the Government has made such promises to the people of the Northwest that any refusal now to go on with the project would cause some indignation in the prairie provinces. The Globe points out that there is no proof that the railway would be of any use as the Hudson straits are blocked with ice the greater part of the year.

EVERY DAY BRINGS A FRESH PROOF

That Dodd's Kidney Pills Are a Boon to Suffering Women

Mrs. Rousseau tells how they cured her after three years of almost ceaseless pain.

Hilton burg, Ont., April 12.—(Special.)—Every day furnishes fresh proof that the women of Canada can be cured of ailments which have hitherto seemed to be a part of the inheritance of the sex by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. And this place has a living proof in the person of Mrs. William Rousseau, of 37 Merton street.

"For over three years," Mrs. Rousseau states, "I was very ill. My troubles were painful. I suffered very much with my back. My head ached almost continuously and I scarcely knew what it was to be free from pain. I was very weak and run down. Occasionally my hands would swell up, and this, too, gave me a great deal of annoyance and discomfort. I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and very soon commenced to improve. Three boxes cured me completely."

HALL'S BRIDGE

Special to the Review.

Hall's Bridge, April 12.—The farmers are busy putting in the crops and say that a few days' rain is needed very badly. A light snow storm passed over this section on Monday morning.

Navigation is likely to open early this spring, the first on these waters this season being Macdonald's tow boat. A number of men have been fixing and repairing it in readiness for the coming season's work.

ON THE VERGE OF BREAKDOWN

Thousands are just on the edge of the crater—just ready to topple in the crater of ill-health and nervous breakdown. Such was the case with Mr. E. E. Follett, a well-known figure in all business social circles of Grand Rapids.

"I had not been well for a year or more. I had lost in weight and could not pick up. I tired of my work—it seemed like drudgery—no pleasure in it like there used to be. When I got thin, I seemed to have little blood and my hands and feet were clammy and cold. To make matters worse I grew nervous—got irritable and worried over mere trifles. I tried dieting and various medicines, but profited by none of them. I was on the verge of a breakdown when my druggist recommended 'Ferrozone.' It wasn't very long before I felt it was a true blood and nerve builder. I was encouraged so much after the third box that I got six boxes more. In seven weeks I gained six pounds and was looking the picture of health. Ferrozone has made a new man of me."

Ferrozone Builds Up Gives Strength

There is no tonic so quick and sure to build you up as Ferrozone—just one or two tablets to take at meal time, try it. Fifty cents a box, six for $2.50, all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

READY FOR THE LOG DRIVES AT APSLEY

Special to the Review.

Apsley, April 11.—Mrs. A. W. Pattison and children, and Mrs. William Snelgrove were guests at "Riverdene" on Wednesday last.

Mr. A. W. Pattison has sold his factory to Mr. Norman James, who will make cheese during the coming season. Mr. Pattison, we understand, intends going west.

The "Canadian Band" has been audible for some time past, which is a very unusual thing for so early in the season.

The farmers are busy ploughing, and a few have done some seeding.

Miss Nicola, of Omemee, has been engaged to teach in No. 1, Anstruther, and resumed her duties after the Easter vacation.

Some of our people were out canoeing on Eel's Creek during the past week.

The Peterborough Lumber Company were settling accounts on Wednesday last with those who have been taking out timber during the winter.

Miss Edna McIlmoyle visited the Misses Downing on Sunday last.

Sucker fishing has been indulged in extensively during the past week by many of our citizens.

The Peterborough Lumber Company started operations on their drive of logs last week.

When you hear the waters roaring
In the spring,
And see the ice a-flowing down the stream,
Then 'tis time to get you ready for
The drive of logs so heavy,
That comes sailing down the rapids
With a swing!

When the little man goes driving up
The road,
With countenance serene and yet so
Cold,
And the foremen follow after with no
More time for laughter,
Then 'tis time to leave the home of Your abode.

If a river driver's life you wish to Follow
You must keep your boots well calked
Right through the leather,
To be able to stand on the logs as
On the land,
Lest you get a watery dip up to the Collar.

As from log to log quailing down
You go,
With the water now so fast, and now
So slow,
Never try to act too smart or you'll
Surely miss the mark,
Then with peavy down to the bottom
You will go.

The mosquitoes they will bite you in
The spring,
The black flies they are always on
The wing,
But dodge them if you can, fight
them bravely, like a man,
When the drive is through you're happy as a king.

Paul Hourd, a well-to-do farmer of East Farnham, has been missing since Monday, and foul play is feared.

AN UP-TO-DATE STOVE

Do you realize there is no longer any reason why you should use a coal range? Oil is cheaper than coal; it is lighter and easier to handle, and gives an intense heat. Provided you have the right stove, oil is more economical, cleaner and less trouble. Have you seen the

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

The accompanying illustration gives you only a rough idea of its appearance. You really can't appreciate it until you either use it yourself, or talk to someone who has used it. It does everything that a coal range will do—except heat the room. The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove will do anything, from heating a kettle of water to cooking a course dinner, but it won't heat a room. It doesn't "smell," it doesn't smoke. It can't get out of order. Light it and it is ready. Turn it down and it is out. Only a woman who knows the trouble of carrying coal and cooking in a hot kitchen can appreciate what it means to have a clean, perfect stove that will cook anything, boil, bake or roast, and yet won't heat the kitchen. How is it done? The flame is controlled in turquoise-blue enamel chimneys, and directed against the bottom of pot, pan, kettle or oven, and only there. The flame operates exactly where it is needed —and nowhere else. With this stove your kitchen is cool.

The nickel finish with the bright blue of the chimneys makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

"No, no, Roger. I couldn't do anything like that. Don't hope for it. I couldn't do anything in flight or secrecy."

"You must be reasonable, Paula, my darling. This isn't a matter where one can follow the rules of a book of etiquette. It's a case of life and death—of your life and your death. There's no other question here than that of saving you."

"Nothing can save me, Roger. The situation is such as to leave me no way of escape. If I were to do what you suggest, it would kill my father."

"But you mustn't let him kill you."

"He doesn't mean to. He hasn't a thought but for my happiness. You remember how he yielded in everything last spring. If you could only have accepted his offer"—

"Suppose I did it now, Paula. Would that help you? Would it make you any happier?"

"I couldn't let you do it now. I know things now that I didn't know then. I see that you were right. I see that you couldn't take the money. I'm glad you didn't accept it, even for my sake. But I have to keep it. I can't separate myself from my father to secure either your happiness or mine. It's especially my duty to be loyal to him now, when so many others are condemning him."

She moved away from the window and dropped into a chair.

"I'll sit down a minute," she murmured. "I'm not very strong, and I'm easily tired."

"Let me get you some tea," he begged. "I can do it quite quickly, even though I'm alone here."

"No, don't do that. I've only a minute to stay. Perhaps I shouldn't have come at all. But I couldn't face—what I have to do next week—without seeing you once again. I shall feel stronger now and more resigned."

"It's monstrous, Paula," Winship broke out bitterly. "You must not throw away your life."

"Roger, dear," she said softly, "don't let us talk any more about it. Take a chair and sit near me. There—not quite so near—there. Now let me look about this dear room. You know I haven't been in it since the day your mother joined our hands together That's her chair," she continued, gazing around the darkening room. "There's Marah's table, with her paints and brushes. There's your easel and the lay figures and the old piano. Ah, how familiar it all is! I was so happy during the weeks I used to come here. You didn't know what bliss it was to me to sit before you, to hear you talk and watch you work. I didn't know it myself then. I was anxious and fearful already, wondering how it was to end. But now, as I look back, I can see that that was the good time. Why couldn't I have been some girl student like those I see at the Art club, whom you might have loved, who might have loved you, with no great, vexed question between us? How happy I should have been if I'd been poor! That's what nature meant me for. I've often wondered why I could never feel as if wealth were a matter of course to me, like so many girls I know who would think it strange if they didn't have all the money they want to spend. I suppose it's because I'm like the people I'm descended from. I've been reading about them in those dreadful articles every one is quoting. Jennie O'Mara, my grandmother, was a servant. They say I resemble her; that I have her eyes. You see. I'm nothing but a simple girl of the people, without either the instincts or the antecedents of greatness, and yet I'm to be the richest woman in the world. How strange it is and how wrong! That's one reason why I'm marrying the duke, Roger, dear. As his wife I shall be able to slip out of all this without attracting any notice to myself. Even papa needn't know it, so the duke says."

"Paula, don't say that again," Winship pleaded. "You can't marry Wiltshire. It's out of all reason and possibility. I'll go to your father. I'll take anything"—

She rose quietly and slipped toward him through the dusk. She laid her hands on his shoulders and looked down into his eyes.

"I came, Roger, for help and strength. You've given them to me. Just to see you, to hear your voice and to know that you love me still have made me braver. But if I stay any longer you'll take your help away. So I must go."

"No, no," he protested, "not yet, not yet."

He seized her hands and pressed them to his lips. When he released them she stooped and kissed him.

"Goodby, goodby," she murmured and glided toward the door.

CHAPTER XXII.

LADY ALICE HOLROYD, dressed still in her traveling gown, sat drinking tea and munching toast in Wiltshire's sitting room at the Hotel Bristol. Her air was abstracted, and as she ate her gaze was fixed absently on one spot in the carpet.

"I mustn't overdo it," she mused, "and, above all, I must be sympathetic. It would spoil everything if he thought I had objections on my own account."

So when her brother entered she rose and kissed him cordially.

"You see, I've come!" she exclaimed. "I couldn't wait another day after getting such news as that."

Wiltshire threw his hat and overcoat on one armchair and sank wearily into another.

"So you've come to congratulate me?" he said in a tone of which the slightly suggested irony did not escape her.

"I've come to wish that you may be very happy, Ludovic."

"Ah! Why the distinction?"

"I'm not aware that I make any distinction. If I do it's because your happiness is the first of all considerations to me."

"Give me some tea," he requested with the air of a man who is very tired.

"Your happiness is my first and only consideration," she continued as she prepared the tea. "It's very natural that it should be. Of course you know as well as I do that I used to have other hopes for you, but that's neither here nor there when once you have made your choice. Your wife would be my sister, even if you picked her out of a music hall."

"Well, I haven't gone as far as that."

"I'm only an old maid, Ludovic," she went on, passing him his cup. "I'm an Englishwoman, a countrywoman and an aristocrat. I've got all the traditions, limitations and prejudices of my class. I'm neither modern nor democratic nor cosmopolitan. But all that is nothing to me the minute you've found the woman you love—and who loves you."

She pronounced the last four words in a natural tone and without the slightest emphasis, but Wiltshire gulped down all his tea at once and passed her back the cup.

"No one would ever accuse me of being a sentimentalist," she pursued as she filled the cup again, "but I've lived long enough and seen enough of the world to know that love—mutual love—is the only thing. Nothing else counts—neither wealth nor descent nor family pride nor anything. So I say again, Ludovic, that if you love her and if she loves you there's no question about it but that you've done the best thing possible. It's a pity that there should be all this publicity about her family history, but I give you my word, Ludovic, that nothing of the sort shall weigh against her with me—as long as she loves you."

"Thanks," Wiltshire murmured.

"And how is the dear thing?" Lady Alice inquired in another tone.

"I think you may find her changed. She isn't very well."

"Ah!"

"You'll see for yourself. We are going to dine with them this evening."

"What do you mean by changed? You don't suppose she has anything on her mind, do you?"

"On her mind? What should she have?"

He glanced up at her sharply, but he turned his own eyes quickly away before the scrutiny in hers. He had the uncomfortable suspicion that she knew more of his affairs than he did himself. He remembered that Winship had stayed with her at Edenbridge not long ago and might easily have taken her into his confidence.

"Oh, I don't know," Lady Alice responded vaguely. "Girls often have ideas which they'll allow to consume them away before they'll speak of them, and especially nice girls like Paula."

"I'm afraid I don't understand you," Wiltshire said, affecting a tone of indifference. "I think I'll go and dress now. I hope they've given you comfortable rooms. We ought to leave at 8."

But, having passed into his room, he did not dress. He sent his man away and once more threw himself wearily into an armchair, where he sat pondering.

Yes; it was clear that Alice knew something that had been kept from him. Her repetition of the clauses "if she loves you," "as long as she loves you," which had seemed to him a few minutes ago like a stab delivered unconsciously, now came to him like a note of intentional warning. Alice knew what Winship knew, what Paula knew, what Trafford knew, what every one knew but himself—that Paula did not love him. She was marrying him because she could not see what else to do. There had indeed never been any secret about that. It was the ground on which he had approached her. He had caught her in the snare of her troubles and bribed her by the promise of deliverance. He had nothing to complain of. She had never owned to loving him otherwise than in a way. He knew now what the way was. He should never have had any doubt about it. It was the way she had already acknowledged that day at Monaco. It was in another way than that that she loved Roger Winship.

As the name crossed Wiltshire's mind he buried his face in his hands and groaned. The lifelong humiliation against which manhood and pride had enabled him to erect some kind of barrier swept over him now with the whole force of its bitter flood. He was the man so cursed with physical insignificance that no woman could love him for himself. He had been wounded by the fact even when he had been half indifferent. He had noticed often enough that the proud beauties who had let him see that they were willing to bear his name and wear his coronet shrank from his personal contact. But this was the crowning instance of all. Paula did love him in a way—that is, she honored and esteemed him. She trusted him with the secrets which, he believed, she would never confide to any one else on earth. She was ready to marry him, not out of ambition nor from any worldly motive whatever. And yet even she as she came to him held out despairing hands to a Roger Winship, a pauper, a nobody, a man who could give her no proud place in the world nor indeed anything but himself.

Then as the first bitterness of his reflections passed away there came the thought. Why not be content with what he could get? Since life offered him only half a loaf, was it not better to take it than to go hungry? It was out of the question for Paula to marry Roger Winship in any circumstances in which she could be placed. Then why not make the best of the situation by marrying her himself? The conditions would not be ideal for any one concerned, but he would take care that they involved no actual misery. Of whatever suffering there might be to bear he would accept the lion's share as his own. That would be better—anything would be better—than to give her up.

It was cold comfort, but he had no other. Such as it was it gave him the courage to dress and go with Lady Alice to dine with Paula and her father. It supported him through the ordeal of the evening and helped him to conceal his pain as he watched Paula's jaded efforts to infuse into her regard for him something which was not there.

It was when he was driving back to the hotel with his sister that the current of his thoughts changed again.

"Well, how did she seem to you?" he asked, with evident anxiety.

Lady Alice did not reply.

"Did she strike you as being—after I saw you last?"

Lady Alice looked out of the carriage window and still kept silence.

"Why don't you answer?" he persisted.

"Because I'm trying to think of what to say."

"You mean of what will give me the least pain."

"Yes, Ludovic."

"I don't think you need mind about that—now. I appreciate your hesitation, but it's more or less needless. You know things that I don't, and yet I do know more than you may suppose."

"That's rather enigmatical."

"No, it isn't. It means only that I've learned so much that you needn't be afraid to tell me everything."

"What makes you think that I have anything to tell?"

"Roger Winship spent two nights with you at Edenbridge."

"Well?"

"I don't imagine that you discussed pictures all the time."

"We didn't."

"No. He took you into his confidence and told you about himself—and—and—Paula."

Lady Alice seemed lost in the contemplation of the lights and carriages as they crossed the Place de l'Etoile.

"Aren't you going to speak?" Wiltshire went on.

"What's the good of speaking, Ludovic? If Roger Winship said anything to me, it's best to bury it in silence You and Paula are to be married next week, and so"—

"The good of speaking lies in the fact that I need to know. Circumstances that touch me most closely are familiar to you, to Winship, to Trafford, to Paula—in short, to every one but myself. There's no one to whom I can turn for the information so naturally as to you."

"But, Ludovic," she cried in tones of astonishment, "I should think you'd see it."

"See what?"

Lady Alice had to brace herself before she replied. It was no easy thing to deal at her brother the blow which must inflict on him a lifelong pain. She had to remind herself again that he was the head of the house of Holroyd and must at all costs be true to the history and traditions of his race. Paula Trafford might be charming in herself, but no Holroyd could look upon the marriage as other than a family disaster. "The daughter of a notorious, low born Yankee freebooter," their uncle, Lord George, had called her when the engagement was announced to him, and, much as Lady Alice liked Paula for her own sake, she could not deny that the designation was just. It was a case in which Ludovic had to be saved from himself; but, even so, Lady Alice argued, she would have had the weakness to spare him if Paula had only loved him.

"See what?" she exclaimed, echoing her brother's words. "See that the girl is dying on her feet because"—

"Because," he broke in, "she's going to marry me!"

"Not quite that, Ludovic, but because she isn't going to marry Roger Winship."

"You don't know!" he cried desperately. "You've only his word for it."

"I haven't only his word; I've hers. I know what happened and what's happening."

"What do you mean—what's happening?"

"I've told you. She's fading out of life. You must all be blind not to see it."

"And—what happened?"

"You make me say it, Ludovic, mind you! I would have kept it from you if I could. Last spring, about the time you came back from the Cape, Paula became engaged to Roger Winship The father consented, and they might have been married only that Roger wouldn't accept nor let her accept any of the Trafford money. Then it was all broken off, naturally enough. There! Now you know all there is to know You'll hate me as long as you live for telling you; but, you see, you've made me."

"She's going to marry me!"

"You've done quite right," he murmured from the depths of his corner of the carriage. "It would have been better if I had known it before."

As they rolled on the rest of their way in silence Lady Alice reflected sadly on the amount of heroism it sometimes takes to be loyal to one's membership in a great, historic family

CHAPTER XXIII.

EARLY in the next forenoon Wiltshire was ushered into Trafford's office. He entered with an apology for the untimely hour, but Trafford stopped him with the assertion that had he not come he himself would have gone forth to seek the duke at his hotel.

"The fact is, Wiltshire, that I'm worried about her. This morning she's going around the house like a ghost. It's no use blinding ourselves to the fact that she's very ill."

Trafford leaned heavily on his desk and fingered the paperweights nervously.

"What do you suppose is the matter with her?" Wiltshire asked, with some slight hesitation.

"I had Robin to see her. I didn't tell you that."

"Well, what does he say?"

"Oh, he made up some cock and bull story, as doctors always do when they're afraid to confess their ignorance. Said he thought she was suffering from some secret grief. I told him that wasn't possible."

"Are you sure it isn't, Trafford?"

"How could it be?"

"I think I could tell you."

"You?"

Trafford raised his head with sudden attention.

"Yes, I. Doesn't it strike you that between us you and I are—killing her?"

Trafford stared at Wiltshire a long half minute before answering.

"How?" he asked laconically.

LEGISLATION NECESSARY

In Connection With Submitting By-law to Protestant Ratepayers for House of Refuge

Some progress is being made on the proposition to erect a house of refuge for the aged Protestant poor of the city. The special committee to whom the matter has been assigned, met last night and discussed the question. Mr. J. B. McWilliams and Dr. Halliday were in attendance, representing the trustees of the Protestant Home.

In view of the fact that the Catholics have already made provision for the care of their own poor, a by-law to raise money for a Protestant house of refuge will be voted on by the Protestant ratepayers only, and they will have to provide for its maintenance as well. Mr. McWilliams pointed out that legislation would have to be secured to permit of the city taxing the community separately for the erection and upkeep of a Protestant house of refuge. It would be of no use submitting a by-law to the people without first getting the Provincial Government's sanction of the project. He advised that Premier Whitney be corresponded with without delay. From what he could learn, the Hall Poor Trust Fund trustees were not in a position to co-operate in this movement. They were held down hard and fast by regulations that would not permit of any joint action with the committee.

It was decided that it would do no harm for the committee to discuss the situation with the Hall Poor Trust members, and a meeting for the purpose will be called for next Tuesday evening, if convenient for all parties concerned. A committee will then be arranged to go to Toronto and interview the premier on the subject.

WAS STRUCK BY ENGINE AND INSTANTLY KILLED

Frances O'Brien, the Two Year Old Daughter of Mr. John O'Brien Met a Terrible Death at Railway Crossing — Was Running After Her Two Brothers.

A distressing accident in which Frances O'Brien, the two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien, who reside in North Monaghan, met her death, occurred last evening about 5.30 o'clock, at the Grand Trunk railway crossing, situated to the south of the Roman Catholic cemetery on the Monaghan road.

The child had left her home, which is a short distance south of the track, in pursuit of two older brothers, and unheeding the cries of her sister, who noticed the fast approaching train, hastened on her way. As she made to cross the track the engine struck her and hurled her a distance of thirty feet and against a fence. Death was instantaneous and the little body was terribly mangled. The train was brought to a stop for about ten minutes and then continued on the way to the station.

Friends attracted to the spot did all in their power to console the stricken parents and family, and Mrs. Card, a neighbor, carried the remains to the home, which has had on several past occasions been called upon to bear other afflictions. Some time ago, the family was burned out and almost at the same time one of the children died. Two years ago the eldest son, Harry, was killed at Hamilton in a railway accident.

Coroner Gray was notified and accompanied by Dr. McPherson, went to the scene of the accident. After being acquainted with the particulars of the sad occurrence, the coroner decided that it was a purely accidental one.

The crossing at which the little girl met her death, it is claimed, is a very dangerous one.

To the bereaved parents and family of eight children will be extended sincere sympathy. The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at nine o'clock to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

HYDRAULIC POWER COMPANY TO LOWER WATER ON MONDAY

The Peterborough Hydraulic Company lowered the water in the river the first of this week in order that the contractors might be able to proceed with the new Smith street bridge, but there was such a howl from the power users that the water had to be raised again. Since then, however, an arrangement has been made with the Quaker Oats Company, to change their shift, which will reduce to a large extent the amount of power used. This will enable the Hydraulic Company to lower the water without seriously inconveniencing other power users. Mr. Larmonth informed the Review to-day that the water in the river would be lowered next Monday. It is understood that Conroy Bros., the contractors, are making arrangements to prosecute the work night and day when the water is lowered. Lights will be installed for the night shift.

Ald. Turner, chairman of the Power Committee, referred to the trouble at the meeting of the council last night. He said that when the water was lowered this week many of the power users had called him up on the telephone and wanted to know what was wrong with the power.

Apparently Mr. Larmonth had referred the angry power users to Ald. Turner when they called up the company.

Ald. Turner stated that such firms as G. Walter Green, the Peterborough Cereal Co., the Central Milling Co., and the Brinton Carpet Co. had called him up and complained that they could not operate their machinery properly when the electric power was reduced. They wanted to know who was going to pay for the loss.

"Between the dog by-law and the power trouble you must be having a nice time," said Ald. Phelan.

The aldermen decided not to interfere in the negotiations between the contractors of the new bridge and the Hydraulic Company, in order that the corporation may not be responsible for any loss sustained by either party.

THE MADRIGAL CLUB WERE GUESTS AT CONSERVATORY

Presentations to Mr. and Mrs. Gliddon and Miss Carrie Reesor—Miss Choate Congratulated for Her Brilliant Work in Earl Grey Competition.

The Conservatory Madrigal Club were the guests of Mrs. Gliddon at a delightful reception at the Conservatory last night. A happy feature of the evening and one that came as a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Gliddon was handsome presentations to them by members of the club. Mrs. Gliddon was given a beautiful Dresden silk parasol and Mr. Gliddon a very fine gold mounted umbrella. An address in which the most cordial friendship and appreciation were expressed was read by Mr. W. McIlroy and the presentations were made by Mrs. C. McClelland.

Peterborough, April 13, 1910.

Mr. and Mrs. Gliddon—

On behalf of the members of the Madrigal Club, I convey to you, this evening, the thanks of that body of singers, and good fellows all, for the many kindnesses shown by both of you during recent rehearsals, concerts in Peterborough, and trip to Toronto, in connection with the Earl Grey amateur competition, where we all had such an enjoyable outing.

We all appreciate the hard work entailed in training a body of singers, gotten together for the first time, to an efficiency, which would warrant their going to such a competition as the Earl Grey contest, but I am sure that I voice the opinion of the members of the Madrigal Club, and many others outside the club, when I say that while the club did not capture the prize in their class at Toronto, yet their singing was a credit to the Conservatory, Mr. Gliddon, and a splendid advertisement for the city of Peterborough, in a musical sense. And that is just what the city of Peterborough requires.

It is therefore, my very great pleasure, this evening, to present to you both, for the Madrigal Club, a slight remembrance of our most pleasant experience, and I ask you, Mrs. Gliddon, to accept this bag and sunshade and to you Mr. Gliddon, this umbrella.

And we hope that next fall you will again call the Madrigal Club together, and keep up the good work, which has begun under such enjoyable, enthusiastic and successful conditions.

Signed on behalf of the Madrigal Club,

WM. McILROY,
MRS. McCLELLAND.

Mr. Gliddon expressed his sincere gratitude for the thoughtfulness and kindness of the club in thus honoring Mrs. Gliddon and himself and assured them that it always had been a real pleasure to be connected with the Madrigal Club so general was the good feeling and the club also had worked faithfully and intelligently.

Advantage had been taken of the occasion to arrange for a presentation to Miss Carrie Reesor, a popular and talented member of the Conservatory staff, who is leaving for her home in Markham in a few days. On behalf of the Conservatory staff and her pupils she was presented with a beautiful jewel case, Mr. Gliddon making the presentation. He spoke in high appreciation of her work as a member of the Conservatory staff and remarked that she had always been very popular and much esteemed.

Messrs. F. D. Kerr, John Green and W. H. Cluxton spoke very highly of the splendid attainments of Miss Choate as a violinist and congratulated her on her remarkably good performance of her solo number in the Earl Grey competition.

About seventy-five guests were present and an interesting impromtu programme was given. An enjoyable informal dance was also held and dainty refreshments were served.

THE Y.W.C.A. AND ITS WORK

At the gathering in connection with the burning of the mortgage at the Y.W.C.A. on Tuesday night Mrs. Arthur Stevenson read the following interesting sketch of the work of the Young Women's Christian Association, with special reference to the Peterborough branch:—

It is but 55 years since Lady Kinnaird, at a dinner party in London, expressed her desire to, in some way, provide homes for business girls. Lord Shaftesbury came to the assistance of Lady Kinnaird, and in that year, 1855, a boarding home for business women was opened in London.

In 1865, only 45 years ago, the first central association for work was opened in London. In 1884 these two branches of work were united, and thus was begun the great Christian sisterhood of the world, which we know as the Y.W.C.A., having a membership of over 600,000 women, and having as their motto, "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

This movement spread rapidly. Associations sprang up in many parts of the world, and in 1895 the "World's Committee" was formed, which united associations in 30 different countries. It was then a question as to what language the motto of the association should be in, and the Hebrew language was chosen as being that in which the words were originally written.

In Canada at the present day we have 22 city associations, with 8 city branches and a membership of 5,000. Twenty associations have boarding homes in connection (with them. There are also 28 college associations, reaching some 3,000 women students. Over 1,000 are enrolled in the Bible classes, and $1,200 given annually to missions.

It is fifteen years since it was first proposed that we should have a branch of the association in Peterborough, and it will be a surprise to many when they learn that two young men, whose names are not even on record, should have given the initative to this movement. They were members of the Y.M.C.A. and they realized how equally important it was that women, as well as men, should have the advantage of such an institution within their reach. These young men each pledged themselves to contribute one dollar a month towards the expenses, so it was not by might nor by power, but by the spirit of the Lord of Hosts that this work was begun.

Mr. Colville, who was secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at that time, 1891, called a meeting of the ladies sixteen of whom came to the meeting, and the outcome of it was that in the year following a branch of the Y.W.C.A. was organized in Peterborough.

But two of those ladies are with us to-day, and they are Mrs. Walsh and Miss Nicholls.

A couple of rooms were secured which served for a short time, but the work grew space, and better accommodation was found necessary. A boarding home was opened on Brock street, and, through the instrumentality of the Hon. Senator Cox, more commodious rooms were opened on George street for the public work. The demand for still better accommodation became so urgent that in January, 1904, Senator Cox offered to subscribe one-quarter of any amount given by the citizens of Peterborough.

In a very short time $20,100 were promised, and in May, 1904, the contract for the uilding was let at $30,000.00. On September 7th of the same year the corner stone was laid by the late Mrs. Cox, in whose memory the gymnasium was afterward equipped. The building, being completed, it was decided on April 23rd, 1905, and formerly opened for work on April 25th.

Sum required for building	$32,220.00
Paid up to date	21,581.00
Leaving a deficit of	$10,639.00

This deficit, together with some other expenses, made it necessary to place a mortgage of $12,000.00 on the building.

Since the day when this mortgage was executed, Mrs. Walsh has never ceased her untiring efforts to wipe it out, with what results we here see:

In Feb., 1906, it was reduced to	$10,000.00
In October, 1909, to	7,500.00
By Nov., 1909, it had dwindled to	4,000.00

And now we have been called together to-night to witness its total extinction.

It is, as I have said, 18 years since association work in Peterborough was first begun, and each year has found its sphere of influence larger than before. The financial report of 1897 shows receipts and expenditures amounting to only $324.00, while in 1909 they amounted to $2,137.00, and will this year be still increased. The great increase in our work and the fact that the association building is free from debt, makes us feel that we are now the possessors of a great public trust. This fact cannot but inspire us with feelings of awe and responsibility, as well as great thankfulness that the Lord of Hosts has deemed us worthy.

We must now turn our faces towards the great future. We see our fair city with its churches, schools and factories, and we realize that the network of this association must embrace them all.

It must ever work for greater Christian unity, for the advancement of education both in the home and in the working world. It must stand for good literature, and for refined and cultured entertainments. Its activities must so extend that its influence may be felt in every department of woman's work, and must influence this to such an extent that it cannot be other than a recognized "witness for Christ."

OBITUARY

The many friends of Margaret M. Wilson, wife of John Wood, Birtle, Manitoba, will be sorry to hear of her death, which took place at her residence, at an early hour on Thursday morning, March 31st. The deceased was the youngest daughter of the late Alex. Wilson, a resident of this city for many years, and sister of James Wilson, Otonabee, and Miss O. Wilson, Birtle, Man. Deceased leaves to mourn her death a sorrowing husband, a son and three daughters.

T. H. SEARL, LINDSAY.

Lindsay, April 13.—Death came with great suddenness to a well known and highly respected resident of the town of Lindsay this morning in the person of Thomas Henry Searl.

The deceased gentleman, who resided at the corner of George and Duke streets, had been in splendid health, notwithstanding his advanced age—70 years—and retired last evening in his usual excellent spirits. This morning he rose from his bed and, after dressing, left his room to light the fire, but death overtook him instantaneously.

The late Mr. Searl was born in England, and came to this country some forty or fifty years ago. He was employed by the G.T.R. for 31 years. He moved from Cannington to Lindsay nine years ago and up to the time of his death conducted a confectionary store on William street. He was a member of Peaceful Dove Lodge, I.O.O.F., Cannington, being a member of that organization forty years. In religion the deceased was a member of the Queen St. Methodist church.

The late Mr. Searl is survived by his sorrowing wife, one daughter, Mrs. R. F. Thomas, and a son, Mr. Bert Searl, of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon under I.O.O.F. auspices at 2.30 o'clock to Riverside cemetery. Service at the house at 2 o'clock.

MISTAKE VENUS FOR COMET

Don't mistake Venus for Halley's comet. This morning Rev. Dr. Marsh said that from reports a great many believed they had seen Halley's comet in the early morning, when they had, as a matter of fact, seen Venus which is very conspicuous in the early hours. Although it is expected that shortly the comet will be visible to the naked eye, it is not yet.

LAID AT REST

The funeral of the late Mr. E. A. Frowde took place to-day from the family residence, 409 Walton street, to Little Lake cemetery. As previously mentioned in these columns, Mr. Frowde was suddenly taken ill at Edmonton a little over a week ago. The suddenness of his death at the age of only 28, in the midst of a useful career, has provoked widespread sympathy.

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Henderson, pastor of Charlotte St. Methodist church. The floral tributes were both beautiful and numerous. Among the offerings received were the following: Sheaf, Ladies' Auxiliary Welland Y.M.C.A.; large heart, directors Edmonton Y.M.C.A.; wreath, staff Edmonton Y.M.C.A.; wreath, Mr. Chas. THE FUNERAL OF W. S. CURRY

The funeral of the late William Stuart Curry took place yesterday afternoon at 1.30 from the family residence, Charlotte street, to the Lakefield cemetery. The Rev. J. G. Potter, pastor of St. Andrew's church, conducted the services at the house and grave. Mr. Curry was a devoted member of the church, and all along encouraged his family to take an active interest in the various departments of church life and work. The esteem in which Mr. Curry and his family are held was fully shown by the unusually large number of floral tributes sent to the home. Among tributes sent from societies were the following:—The staff of the G.T.R., Peterborough; L.O.L. No. 50, St. Andrew's Young Men's Guild, Daughters of Erin, young ladies' Mission Band, Christian Endeavor, and Sabbath School Association.

Mr. Curry was born in Huntington Co., Penn., U.S.A., Nov. 2nd, 1828, and was 81 years of age. All his faculties remained unimpaired until near the end and he seemed to be a man well preserved. He is survived by his wife, also by a sister, Mrs. Margaret Cochrane, Pittsburg; and by his children—James S. Curry, Springfield, Ill.; Mrs. N. T. THE CAUSES OF DIVORCE WILL BE DEALT WITH

At the Last Meeting of the Purity Campaign in Park Street Baptist Church To-night—"The Voice of God" Was Subject Last Night.

A large congregation assembled in St. Paul's Presbyterian church last night, when the Rev. J. A. McCuaig, who this week is conducting a purity campaign among the churches of the city, preached on "The Voice of God," from the text, John 10, 4: "They know his voice."

After briefly defining and establishing the terms of the text, and setting forth the proposition that God has means of communicating and does communicate Himself to His people, Mr. McCuaig declared this fact to be one of the fundamental truths of the Christian faith. The assurance of it does not rest upon any single passage of scripture, but upon the great principles underlying the whole revelation of God. All the records bear testimony to it. "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son." The relationship of father to child that exists between God and man, by its very nature, affirms this truth. Such communication must be possible or the whole relationship is void of meaning. The principle is again affirmed in the abundant promises of God. "I will counsel thee with mine eye upon thee."

The manner of God's speaking to men was graphically discussed, showing how sometimes by deep impressions on the mind, in regard to which we have no natural explanation, it was apparent that God had spoken. Philip had such an impression calling him to go into the wilderness. He could not shake it off, so went out in in blind obedience, with the result that "the light of God in the heart of a black man went over the desert to Africa."

The natural, every-day manner of God's communicating with man, however, was shown to be on well established lines and principles; "The meek shall He guide in judgment." The conditions of absolute meekness is the condition in which God can impress the mind, guide the thoughts, bring to remembrance and lead to conviction assurance and judgment. This condition could be immediately attained and enjoyed by any man who knows God, by simply going apart and being alone with God, concentrating the mind upon Him and saying: 'Father!' 'Father!' 'Father!' till the full consciousness of God's nearness and fatherly love becomes the only impression on the mind. This condition was essentially the condition of meekness, and in it God could speak and make His voice heard. In this condition He could influence the mind, bringing anything "to remembrance and taking of the things of God and showing them unto us."

The results that flow, from waiting upon God and hearing Him speak were impressively emphasized. There would come into the heart of that man the very 'joy of the Lord.' His life and speech and very face would show the glory of it. The greatest testimony the church could give to the world was the indwelling "joy of the Lord" wrought by that same communion with God that made the face of Moses to shine. "The joy of the Lord is the strength of His people."

The last general meeting of the campaign in the interest of social purity, which has created such widespread interest this week, will be held in the Park street Baptist church to-night, when Mr. McCuaig will lecture on "The Causes of Divorce."

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR TO BE TAKEN OVER LIFT LOCK

Lieutenant-Governor Gibson will be taken over the lift lock when he visits Peterborough on Saturday. Mr. J. H. McClelalr, superintendent of the Trent canal, has offered the city council one of the Government boats in which to take the distinguished visitor over the famous lock and the offer was accepted at the meeting of the council last night. According to the programme now arranged, the mayor and a majority of the members of the city council will meet Lieut.-Col. Gibson at the C.P.R. station on the arrival of the 11.26 train. From the station they will go to Wolfe st. wharf, where the "Bob Hall" will be boarded and the trip over the lift lock made. The party will be met by cabs at the lift lock and driven to the city. The Lieutenant-Governor will be in charge of the civic representatives till one o'clock.

In the afternoon the Lieutenant-Governor will lay the corner stone of the new Knox church.

ONE HUNDRED VIEWS WILL ILLUSTRATE HIS LECTURE

The local centre of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada has arranged for another treat for its members and the general public, and when Dr. Machell lectures at the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday evening, April 19th, a large audience will be present to hear him tell of the travels and experiences of Lieut. Shackleton and himself in expeditions to the South Polar Seas. Dr. Machell was a surgeon on the Nimrod, and his lecture will be illustrated by one hundred lantern views, made especially for the Royal Astronomical Society. Dr. Machell, who was formerly of Perth, Ont., is a pleasing and entertaining speaker, and handles his subject in a manner that holds the attention of the audience.

No admission will be charged. While in the city Drs. Machell will be the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick.

TO OBSERVE A MOTHERS' DAY

A movement has been started in Canada, following the introduction of it in the United States, for the observance of one Sunday in the year to be known as "Mothers' Day." In a folder issued by the Canadian Home Journal, of Toronto, the movement is outlined as follows:

Object.—To honor "the best mother who ever lived."—your mother.

Time.—The second Sunday in May every year.

Place.—In every city, town or home in America.

Do Something.—Send mother a box of flowers or a letter. Wear a white flower in her memory.

Mothers' Day Movement was started by Anna Jarvis in Philadelphia in 1908. It has spread through the entire country and for the first time in Canada was celebrated in London last May.

MOTHERS' DAY FEATURES.

Honor.—The one who loved you first and always—your mother.

Tribute.—Loving remembrance of your mother—or her memory—through some distant act of kindness, visit or letter.

Floral Badge.—Wear a white flower—emblem of purity and fidelity—on Mothers' Day. If possible send one to others as a message of sympathy or brotherhood. Remember the sick or unfortunate in hospitals.

Emblem.—While any white flower may be worn, the white carnation is the Mothers' Day special flower. Its whiteness stands for purity; its form, beauty; its fragrance, love; its wide field of growth, charity; its lasting qualities, faithfulness—all a true mothers' attributes.

Observance.—Mothers' Day may be observed through special sermons, exercises or addresses in honor of "Our Mothers," and by the wearing and distribution of the white flower in connection with such occasion. Generous provision should be made for getting to the special services, the aged and other "shut-ins."

For All.—Mothers' Day is for every creed, class, race and country. It is not denominational or inter-denominational. Social, fraternal, civil, military and religious organizations; official, professional and business classes are all asked to pay homage to mothers through the wearing of the white flower, and observance of the spirit of the day.

MOTHERS' DAY A SUCCESS.

Publishers.—Can give publicity, publish editorials and make announcements of the object of the movement, interest their local ministers, teachers and mayor or council.

Ministers—Preach a sermon on "Mother" on Mothers' Day. Announce it from the pulpit one Sunday in advance. Give the widest possible publicity in every church or meeting.

Teachers—Have white flowers placed in the pulpit. Interest the scholars that they may spread the movement through the homes.

Citizens.—Encourage children to have a greater love and respect for their mothers. Tell everyone that you meet that you will wear a white flower on Sunday, May 8th, and ask them to do the same in honor of their mother.

Sunday Schools—On Mothers' Day special exercises should be held having a reference to mothers. Children should send flowers to the aged, and those prevented from attending church on that day.

Remember the date, the second Sunday in May every year.

BUSY YEAR FOR CANADIAN DAIRYMEN PREDICTED

That this will be an excellent season for dairying in Canada is the opinion of Mr. G. G. Publow, superintendent of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School, at Kingston. Mr. Publow, who was in the city yesterday to address the annual meeting of the Cheese and Butter Makers' Association of Peterborough district, said the prospects were decidedly encouraging.

He didn't think that the exports would be any larger than last year, but said there was every reason to believe that there would be a greater domestic demand for dairy products, and it must be borne in mind that last year was an excellent one.

Leonard A. Vandermuede, of London, was run down by a runaway team attached to a lorry and narrowly escaped death.

BIG DEMAND FOR HORSES

Shippers Buying Heavily for Western Canada Sales

Mr. Percy Pearson, the well-known Toronto horse buyer, who is in the city at present, says that every horse buyer of judgment in Eastern Canada is making money this year. Mr. Pearson has been buying on an extensive scale in Peterborough and vicinity and has made some large shipments.

"There is a heavy demand for horses for the west," he stated to the Review "and big sales for western shipment are being made by Burns and Sheppard, Toronto."

MUSKRAT SKINS ARE COMING IN

Wm. Lech and Sons Have Already Bought Eight Thousand—Price Has Increased

The skins of this season's catch of muskrats are being brought in to the city for sale to the local buyers. The price paid is double that of last season, and those fortunate in securing a good supply of skins find it a paying proposition. The Rice Lake Indians and those at Chemong Indian village each year, bring to the city a large supply and shipments from other places also reach here.

Wm. Lech and Sons have already bought eight thousand skins and this number, stored in a downstairs apartment of the store, represents, in cash, a considerable amount.

It is not expected that the firm's purchase will this year be as large as that of three years ago, when 20,000 skins were secured.

SHAMROCKS CAPTURE FIRST BALL GAME OF THE SEASON

The Review's special reporter of the understudy league has contributed the following account of the defeat of the West Ends by the doughty Shamrocks—

The first game of the season was played on Wednesday at Boswell's field, between the West Ends and the Shamrocks, the latter winning. It was an exciting seven-innings game, with every player working faithfully. It opened with the West Ends to bat, with Ahern shouldering the willow. He made a short hit to the third baseman, who threw it high to O'Brien on first, allowing the runner to reach second safely. The next batter was Joe Carew, who fanned out. Murty, who now faced the heavy pitcher, Hayes, looked pale, but got to first on four balls, with Ahern laughing on third. Lawrence was out on a pop fly to short-stop. Harry Carew now came to the rescue and placed a hit over the short-stop's head, allowing Ahern to come in, and leaving Murty on second. Walker, the next batter, fanned out.

The first to bat for the Shams was Hayes, who hit for second. The next three went out on flies and grounders.

The West Ends also retired in order.

The Shamrocks now began to get serious and Kelly Sheehy knocked one for first, Smith sacrificing him to second, and Michael Sheehy rushing him to third, and he himself standing on first. Hayes boldly faced the pitcher. He fanned, but the catcher missed the last one, allowing Kelly Sheehy to come in and M. Sheehy to third. The next two went out. Perhaps it is surprising, but it must be said that the two sides went out in order for three innings.

Cupolo now came to the bat for the poor old West Enders, but fanned out.

Joe Carew came to bat next. "Hit a good one, kid," yelled many voices. And he did, he made a two bagger amidst the cheers of his sympathizing comrades. Lawrence fanned out and Harry Carew followed his example.

Now it was the Shams turn to say, "Hit it for a home run," but Hayes fanned again, but then Murty missed the last ball pitched and the ball went far behind him allowing Hayes to come home again. Michael Sheehy hit a good one for second and came home on a good hit of O'Brien's. The next three, the Shams are sorry to say, got out.

A sensational play was made by O'Brien getting a high fly and two grounders, putting three out in succession. The Shams did not take their last battings.

WORK NEVER STOPS.

Methods of Four Big Banks in the Wall Street District.

Four big banks in the Wall street district resemble the great gold mines of the west in one striking feature. They have three eight-hour shifts of tollers, and the work never stops. One set takes up the routine where the other leaves off. All night long, Sundays and holidays, a staff of men in each of these banks is busy opening thousands of letters, sorting and listing innumerable checks and drafts that represent fabulous sums of money and getting them ready for the day force, which is the only one the public comes in contact with or ever hears about. If this work was not carried on incessantly the bank would soon be overwhelmed with a mountainous accumulation of detail.

Two shifts—the "scouting force," as they call themselves—work between 5 o'clock in the afternoon and 9 the next morning. Each bank has a big drawer in the general postoffice. Messengers clear this of its letters every hour all night long. Three thousand letters a day is the average mail of one of these large banks. Two-thirds of it comes in during the night. These letters in the case of one of the biggest of these banks contain from 35,000 to 40,000 checks and drafts. At times these inclosures represent as much as $30,000,000. Rarely does the total fall below $20,000,000.

The letters are opened as fast as they are received, the checks are counted and the total verified with the footings of the lists. The letters are then stamped, which shows that they have been "proven in," as the banks call it. After that they are turned over to the clerks who send out the formal acknowledgments of the remittances they contain. The various checks are assorted according to the numbers of the books in which they are to be entered and otherwise, the sight drafts are grouped according to the routes of the bank's messengers, and all is made ready for turning the night's accumulation over to the day force, so it may be handled by it as expeditiously as possible.

Each of these shifts of night workers at the banks consists of from twelve to twenty men. Some banks get along with but one extra set of clerks at night. These come on duty at midnight and leave at 8 a. m. This plan of working all night long in order to keep up with the tremendous amount of business that comes in by mail was inaugurated about five years ago. The first bank that tried it found that so much valuable daytime was saved that one institution after another took it up until now there are four that have these three eight-hour shifts of clerks and several more who work only a part of the night.—Harper's Weekly.

Ironing Out the Germs.

Ironing linen has a greater effect than is commonly believed. As the temperature of the iron may greatly exceed 200 degrees F., it has been suggested that the process of ironing may suffice to sterilize surgical dressings and hence be of valuable service, especially in rural districts and elsewhere, in the absence of disinfecting ovens and sterilizers. Nearly all microbes can be killed by a sufficiently long application of a temperature of 158 degrees F., but a temperature of 266 degrees F. is required to kill certain spores of bacteria and to produce absolutely complete sterilization. It has been proved by experiment that it is possible to disinfect clothing very satisfactorily by ironing. Clothing which has been worn by children affected by various contagious diseases and which contained bacteria of pus, diphtheria and the like was sprinkled and ironed. It was then rubbed on plates of gelatin prepared for the culture of bacteria, but not a single colony was developed.

CARING FOR HORSES.

When Conditioning For Spring Feed and Groom Them Well.

An expert horse breeder says when conditioning horses for spring work the right kind of start and the "know how" are required, the same as in doing anything else properly. If the horses have been allowed the run of a stalk field or straw stack they are not in good physical condition to immediately start at heavy work. With such conditions it is necessary to begin at once to restore an animal physically by giving at first a small amount of grain and gradually increasing the amount as he becomes accustomed to it.

It should require at least three weeks to get a horse accustomed to consuming a liberal grain feed. One feed of hay may be given each day to replace the straw or corn stover. It is not well to deprive the horse of his daily exercise, as increased feeding without exercise is likely to cause deranged digestion. For best results exercise is almost as essential as the feed.

The old coat of hair should be shed quickly as possible after cold weather has passed, and this can be hastened by stabling the animal at night with a good dry bed upon which to sleep and grooming, blanketing and feeding a small amount of oilmeal each day.

If the long hair is allowed to remain the horse will perspire freely when at work, which is exhausting, and he is very apt to catch cold.

Some farmers resort to clipping their horses, which is better than leaving the long hair on, but clipping is not desirable as the natural means of removing it. Grooming should not be neglected in either case, since the excretory glands should be kept open.

As the time approaches for the heavy work to begin the horses should be hitched for a short time each day and the amount of work gradually increased as they become hardened. It is necessary to not only harden the muscles of the horse, but to harden the shoulders to the collar as well.

There are a variety of feeds, all of which are well suited to the needs of the horses and will give satisfactory results when judiciously used. Oats and timothy hay is considered a standard feed for working horses.

Timothy is not very palatable. Horses are not likely to gorge themselves with it, and oats, having a large, coarse hulls, are bulky, and as a result they become more thoroughly mixed with saliva during the process of mastication, and when they enter the stomach are more readily acted upon by the digestive juices. Because of this fact a horse is less subject to deranged digestion and colic caused by careless or improper feeding.

Good, pure water is important, and this the horses should have in plentiful supply at all times.

Dried Blood Meal For Pigs and Calves.

Dried blood meal is a very valuable feed for calves. It not only supplies them with an abundance of protein, which is very necessary to all growing animals, but it acts as a regulator of the calf's digestion. It is also a valuable feed for hogs.

Feeding Young Stock.

The best way to fatten young stock to secure a maximum profit is to feed them well from the start. Whether it be young cattle or lambs, they should be liberally fed from the beginning of the feeding period.

THE VETERINARY

Where the hogs are fed large amounts of sloppy food a little baking soda added occasionally will tend to prevent any undue acidity of the stomach.

How to Cure Stringhalt.

Stringhalt spoils a horse for market. To cure a horse of this trouble use some alcohol once per day on his stifle joint and just above it and hand rub well.

For Hard Worked Horses.

One of the best remedies for sore backs and harness galls on horses is two teaspoonfuls of ground white oak bark and two quarts of water. Pour this water (hot) over the bark and let it stand until cool. Then strain and bottle for use. Bathe sores in this solution.

Catarrhal Bad Breath

Corrected Quickly by the Use of Catarrhozone

Catarrh is an inflammation. Where there is inflammation there is always more or less offensive secretion. Inflammation may be of the very active sort, but it is often of the slow kind, and this is the particular form in which the breath is rendered offensive and the presence of the sufferer becomes an offence to every person of delicate sensibility.

Bad breath is in itself sufficient to urge you to correct it, because one dislikes to be unpleasant to their friends, but this form of catarrh is dangerous because it supplies a hotbed for the development of Consumption or of other diseases of the throat and lungs.

Bad breath is an evidence that the microbes have found a good resting place and are carrying on their evil inroads into the health of the body.

Catarrhozone acts at once and destroys these minute organisms, but it does more—it heals the inflamed surfaces in which they found a nesting place and consequently removes both cause and effects of their action.

If we only highly estimated the value of prevention and used Catarrhozone at the beginning of a cold or just before it becomes well seated, the deadly ravages of Consumption would be stayed and the terrible agonies of sufferers of Asthma or Bronchitis completely abolished.

There is no remedy as effective for bad breath, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., as Catarrhozone. Besides being healing and soothing it is germ destroying. Nothing ever offered to the public can compare with it in its promptness, efficiency, and permanency of action, and you can buy it from any dealer in medicine throughout the Dominion of Canada, 25c, 50c, and $1.00 sizes. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Smoke Detector.

A Scotchman, John Lowden, has invented a "smoke nitrometer," which, it is thought, may be of use in prosecuting cases of "smoke nuisance." It consists of a tube with a single eyepiece and two object openings. One of these is clear, but the other contains a revolving diaphragm, in which are set five circles, one of clear glass and the other four of tinted glasses corresponding with the standard tints of a scientific "smoke chart." In examining smoke defiled air the diaphragm is turned until the tinted glass chuckles in darkness with the air seen through the clear aperture. The various glasses are systematically numbered, so that a glance suffices to show the degree of defilement of the air.

The Quality of Butter.

The quality of the butter depends to a great degree upon the food and drink of the cow. She should have clean, pure water and wholesome food. Much care should be taken in the selection of the ration. The individual cow has much to do in this regard. But with respect to the part that is played in handling the product of the cow too much carelessness is evident in the processes of buttermaking. After churning is finished the butter and milk mixture should remain quiet for about ten minutes in order to let the butter come to the surface. A cup of cold water will hasten the process. An old recipe says: The butter should be carefully skimmed off into a wooden bowl half full of water. The water should be repeatedly changed until it shows no indication of milkiness. It is important that the butter should not be pressed or worked during the process of removing the milk from the butter. After this the butter may be pressed into a mass and salt to the extent of one-fortieth its weight worked into it. The water should be well pressed out, but the less worked the more perfectly its granular character is maintained.

THE WORKING MIND OF ROBERT WALKER

IT Earns Him $75,000 a Year as the Youngest of Railroad Presidents and He Illustrates the Value of Specialized Mental Method in Business and the Big Opportunities To-Day for Young Men to Fill Big Positions.

NEW YORK, Saturday.

FROM college in 1896 to the presidency of a transcontinental railroad in 1910, from a young lawyer's income to a salary of $75,000 a year—that is a remarkable advancement, extraordinary even in these days of sudden, swift promotion of young men from comparative obscurity into the limelighted tops of big corporations.

On January 12 of this year, at a directors' meeting in Chicago, Robert Walker, lawyer, only thirty-five years old, and recently connected with the offices of Paul D. Cravath, was elected president, general counsel and chairman of the Executive and Finance committees of the Rock Island Company, the holding concern of the extensive Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific system, with its 7,350 miles of track and an annual earning capacity exceeding sixty millions of dollars.

The high office, the young man, the unprecedented move, all combined, caused a great deal of interest in newspaper circles the country over. The Chicago papers in particular felt that there must be something back of the election. A big railroad coup was suspected, and a corps of expert interviewers swiftly descended upon the youthful president with urgent invitations to "tell all about it."

Mr. Walker did not refuse the interview, neither did he decline to talk. On the contrary, he conversed quite graciously, as is his custom, but he said nothing.

Whereupon the interviewers, still believing that they must be right and mindful of the new president's youth, met in conclave and issued a dictum.

"This young man must be disciplined," they agreed, and in consequence the morning papers appeared with lengthy accounts of the meeting, which accounts were purposely bare of any news about Robert Walker other than the mere mention of his name and office.

Evidently it was believed that the result would prove a sad blow to the young man, but apparently it proved otherwise. The youthful Mr. Walker, being a clever lawyer, well trained in the art of talking indefinitely, and being Mr. Walker, and being tremendously busy, continued to smile and say nothing.

Up to date, therefore, he has remained something of an enigma. The man in the street is still asking insistently some questions, highly pertinent not alone in the case of the successful Mr. Walker, but also to all other young men, and, indeed, to the whole great army of ambitious men who are knocking elbows today, in and out of New York, in the savage, stupendous rush of modern business life—the questions of "How did he get his start?" and "Why did they select him for the office?"

The answer—as I gathered it indirectly from an interview with Mr. Walker—throws some new and interesting lights upon modern conditions in this big building, fast moving age, and upon the men who are being developed up to the point of handling them.

The offices of the Rock Island company cover an entire floor in the United States Realty Building. Like other big corporation offices, they are soft carpeted, mahogany furnished, electric lighted, high ceilinged. Their atmosphere is one of silence, orderliness, wealth, power, decorum. Except for the "click, click" of a telegraph instrument in some inner distant room there is nothing whatever to remind one that they are really the executive offices of a great railroad, and not those, say, of a big law firm.

Psychologically, offices are interesting; they reflect for one thing the manner of men who preside over them and the kind of work they do. In this case the situation was significant.

The Rock Island Railroad has its nearest terminus at Chicago—a thousand miles away. From there it trunks and branches out till its glistening rails wind in and out of nearly one-third of all the States in the Union, as far west as New Mexico, north into the Dakotas and south to Louisiana. It is a wonderful system—so is every great trunk line—of thousands of miles of roadbed as a basis, and superimposed upon this foundation a marvellously intricate, interlocking fabric of men and metal, of steel, steam, brains and finger tips, all ramifying into a thousand and one daily details, each of which is governed hard and fast by an unbreakable rule.

A stupendous amount of work—work for trained minds—is given out daily by this ponderous machine. All that which pertains to operation rose no further east than Chicago and is settled there. The rest comes on to New York, to those solemn, dignified offices, far off from the dynamic roar and rattle of terminal and track.

It is a big balance that comes to New York and a weighty one. It embraces executive, financial, legal and the higher administrative problems, bulky but rarefied products of the wheels of the big Western railroad machine.

Out in the spacious anteroom, where I cooled my heels for some time, I saw office boys trotting in and out of doors with neat piles of correspondence, some as thick as a man's body. Men of administrative stamp came in and out carrying leather portfolios stuffed to bursting and were closeted in quick succession with the president.

Evidently there's a mass of highly important work to be done here in the brief business day. Some one man at the top must do it or direct it, rapidly and masterfully. However great a business becomes, there must always be that one man, the right kind of a man, at the top. In this instance the directors of the Rock Island selected a lawyer thirty-five years of age.

Why?

Mr. Walker arose from a busy desk, when at last I entered the president's room, and loomed well up behind it. He is several inches over six feet in height and sturdily built. He has a youthful buoyancy of manner and the round, clear eyes of a boy. He gives an impression of unusual alertness, steadiness, precision, decision. He's the kind of a man whom work never worries. Perhaps the most remarkable thing about him, in view of his youth and sudden success, is his utter lack of egotism, of self-consciousness. Evidently he is bigger than his position. A man must be to hold one well in hand.

Granted, then, that the modern day corporation requires at its head a veritable truck horse for work, we have here the prime requisites—namely, youth, physique, reserve power, steadiness. What else is needed?

The answer is—and that's the answer to the question of this man's achievement—a working mind.

Mr. Walker did not take credit to himself for having one. In fact, we arrived at a discussion of the subject only indirectly and after a number of inconsequential questions, which he answered good naturedly but with pen held in hand and eyes dropping impatiently now and then to a pile of letters which awaited his signature.

We were speaking of colleges—Mr. Walker is a graduate of Amherst, class of 1896—and their influence, good or bad, in fitting young men for success in this practical age. A good many self-made men of prominence have called the influence bad or, at least, unnecessary. Mr. Walker says otherwise.

"I regard a college training as a highly important factor," he said decisively, and then added enigmatically, "because of the vast multitude of things it enables you to forget." Mr. Walker dropped his pen and talked without prodding, for the first time in our interview. "It helps give you a working mind," he went on, "which is very necessary nowadays in this step lively, think lively age.

"Let me jump ahead a bit and explain by example what I mean.

"Take a leader in the legal profession, for instance, Joseph H. Choate.

"When Mr. Choate is to conduct a case it is his custom to jump into a cab with one or more lawyers who have spent weeks in searching out all of the details. The probability is that Mr. Choate knows little or nothing of the many points involved when he leaves his office, but his assistants do, and on the way to court they lay all these details before him, omitting none.

"Now, here's the point:—Mr. Choate's mind is such and so finely trained that he is able swiftly to absorb what he wants and to forget all the rest; forget it as swiftly and utterly so that he can concentrate altogether upon the essential, the telling points.

"Moreover—and this is important—he is able after the trial to forget the whole case, and so be fresh and ready for the same masterful procedure with a new one. It is often related of Mr. Choate that after the conclusion of a trial he will meet the opposing lawyer—say, in the evening at his club—and ask him what it was all about.

"Here is the apotheosis of the legal working mind. Consider what a vast amount of highly important work such a man can do and do successfully. He is naturally a leader, since his mind utilizes the work of other working minds less highly trained.

"So much for the great lawyer. Now, take the railroad president. L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson Company, mentioned prominently as a successor to the late E. H. Harriman, is perhaps the best representative.

"Mr. Loree says that there are no new business problems. All have been previously and successfully worked out. Why waste time and mental energy in studying and analyzing them—why, above all, waste mental room in stuffing the mind with the facts concerned?

"'The one novelty to-day in the business world,' says Mr. Loree, 'is the knack of handling many business problems most successfully in the briefest possible time. There is a crying demand for minds trained to do this; and the way to produce such a working mind is to learn how to forget.'

"You will find, I believe, that all men to-day in high professional and business positions are well cultivated forgetters.

"By forgetting," continued Mr. Walker, "I mean, of course, forgetting temporarily. The human mind is so wonderfully constituted that every vivid impression is registered and retained. But the masterful mind is the kind that can give all its power to each problem, and then quickly pigeonhole the matter in a very small mental recess, there to hold it for future use but not for present usurpation.

"That is the ideal working mind, the kind that the big corporations of to-day demand of their chief officers. And," said Mr. Walker, "to go back to where we started, I believe that a college course is, perhaps, not always necessary, but highly important, at least in its development.

"Four years of earnest study at the age when the brain is forming helps most to make a working brain, just as mechanical apprenticeship makes skilful hands. You forget the things you learn—and it is best you should—but you don't forget the way you learned them.

"That is why I hold the old fashioned classical course above the modern and more technical college courses. The latter, it is held, fit a man at once for the workaday world, so that he can earn an immediate living in it. Perhaps that is true; but is it advisable to begin your life work with a mind stuffed stale with facts? And after all, the greater problem is, not how soon can a man start, but rather how high will he have gone ten years afterward.

"I simply claim that a working mind is a more valuable possession than a fact stuffed mind. The man with the former is fitted to rise above the practical man and direct the latter's knowledge and energies."

Four years in Amherst College, three years in Columbia University Law School, seven years in the Cravath law offices—fourteen years of steady, earnest training, with the goal ahead of a mind that can forget—this training sent Mr. Walker into the Rock Island office as assistant general counsel.

Robert Mather, their president, resigned later to enter the important Interstate Commerce Commission. He was succeeded by R. A. Jackson, first vice president of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific. Upon the latter's resignation a man whose age was only thirty-five years, but who had spent fourteen of these years in the right way, stepped into a post previously filled by much older, thoroughly experienced men. He has acquired, despite his youth, that remarkable mental machine that the present day corporation must have to carry its burden of work.

There is another factor concerned—the legal training Mr. Walker had.

The legal profession to-day, as never before in its history, is proving an excellent stepping stone into big industrial positions. There are many examples, noteworthy among them Judge Gary, of the United States Steel Corporation, and Judge R. S. Lovett, the successor to E. H. Harriman. The list is very long, ranging from a number of trust and railroad presidencies down to minor and subsidiary companies whose names are not so well known, but whose chief executives are lawyers and receive handsome salaries.

The explanation is simple. There are so many restrictions to-day—imposed for the most part by recent government legislation—that the president of a corporation, trust or natural monopoly—or indeed of any big industrial concern—must either be a lawyer himself or else have a legal counsellor constantly at his elbow. This is particularly true of railroad corporations; so the law undoubtedly helped Mr. Walker up the ladder.

The fact that his father, Aldace F. Walker, of Vermont, was a prominent lawyer and railroad man—member of the first Interstate Commerce Commission and previously chairman of the Board of Directors of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad—may or may not have counted in the son's success. A. F. Walker died in 1901, two years after Robert Walker was graduated from law school. As for "pull" of any kind, it is freely admitted to-day, in view of the terrific exactions imposed upon the executive by the modern day corporation, that "pull" counts for absolutely nothing at all.

A working mind, trained like a finely organized machine to do and save a vast amount of mental labor, a physique calculated to stand easily the excessive mental strain, and youth—these are the great desiderata.

ROBERTS WALKER

Fourteen Years of Steady, Earnest Training • • • Sent Mr. Walker into the Rock Island Office

The Legal Profession • • • Is Proving an Excellent Stepping Stone Into Big Industrial Positions

Herein lies the answer to the question of "Why did they select him for president?"

It is only fair to Mr. Walker and his people to state that, far from seeking this interview, he did his best to avoid it, and he is not an easy man to interview.

When at length I said:—"That is all, thank you," president, general counsel and chairman of the Finance and Executive committees of the Rock Island arose from his desk, escorted me to the door and opened it for me. It was a very pleasing courtesy, but more pleasing still is the fact that he did it quite unconsciously.

This lack of self-consciousness, standing out always and in spite of his remarkable success, ought to land Mr. Walker still higher among the small coterie of "well cultivated forgetters" who lead this country's activities.

It probably will.

HANDLING AND TREATMENT OF MILK IN THE MAKING OF CHEESE AND BUTTER

Valuable Address by Mr. G. G. Publow at This Morning's Session of the Annual Meeting of Cheese and Butter Maker's Association of Peterborough District—Careful and Practical Instruction.

An instructive session of the annual meeting of the Cheese and Butter Makers' Association of Peterborough district was held at the City Council chambers this morning, when the chief address was delivered by Mr. G. G. Publow, of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School at Kingston. His remarks were of particular interest and value to the makers.

President D. A. Oakley was in the chair.

The first speaker was Mr. R. W. Ward, dairy instructor for Peterborough district. Mr. Ward said the old season had been closed and the new one was being opened. He hoped and trusted that the dairymen would take hold of the affairs of the season and make it an outstanding success. There were improvements made along several lines, and he believed these could be done. Mr. Ward thought in the first half of May the cheese should be made carefully for quick ripening, but in the last half of the month it would not have to be made for such early shipment.

He thought improvements should be made in pasteurized starters and in the average yield. If anything could be done along the latter line for legitimate profit it should be done. This could be effected by careful handling, proper ripening and the right utensils. He thought the loss in the butter fat in the yield could be reduced from .24, which was the average for the two years for this district, to considerably below that.

The greatest trouble he found here last year was in the fore part of the season and this was due to the curd being over-ripe.

Mr. H. C. Duff, of the agricultural school, Norwood, said the Farmers' Clubs of the county were endeavoring to do their best work in the interests of the patrons and makers. The dairy subject was a topic of much discussion at the meetings of the club, and he believed that as a result the patrons would be more ambitious to know about the best methods in the mutual interests of the makers and themselves.

Mr. G. G. Publow, Superintendent of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School, Kingston, said that unless there was a good quality of winter cream it was impossible to get the highest grade cheese. Therefore the cream producers were the principal factors in cheese making and should have an exact knowledge of what was required. The farmers as a rule believed that if their milk or cream was accepted without question it could be taken for granted that it must be in satisfactory condition. But the makers should emphasize that defective cream resulted in a loss for all concerned. Every man should put forth every effort to have the cream in the very best condition.

Mr. Publow said that cream was often delivered to the butter factory in over-ripe condition. If the buttermaker was expected to make the best butter he should have the control of the fermentation of the cream. The cream at the farm should be sufficiently cooled and the milk should be 45 degrees or 50 degrees before it was separated. The warm and cold cream should not be mixed. The cream should be delivered in individual cans for the taking of cream to the factory.

In preparing the starter it was strongly recommend that the makers get a pure culture. This could be obtained from the dairy school at Kingston or Guelph or from any of the dairy supply houses.

In the average creamery or factory as a rule the milk was selected from the separator, but the best cream should be chosen regardless of this. If the culture tasted bitter or rancid it should not be used—if it were anything else than sour. Mr. Publow gave practical and direct instructions regarding the culture. It should be borne in mind that the flavor of the butter or the cheese would largely depend on the flavor of the culture. By having it a uniform strength its action could be relied upon. The weather conditions, the temperature that this culture was likely to be kept at and other considerations had to be regarded. Low temperature required a high seeding and vice versa. In cheese making it was not desirable to use more than 1 and 1-2 per cent in butter making it could be used as high as 5, 10 or 20 per cent, as conditions called for. For carrying over the culture the speaker advocated the use of good clean sealers. Defects through glass could be much more quickly noticed than when the culture was in tins and for that reason that method was advocated.

It seemed to the speaker that the makers were not careful enough in the handling of the culture. Around a cheese factory there were likely to be other bacteria than were desirable for the products. To avoid this extreme care and cleanliness should be exercised in the handling of culture.

Heating the milk to 185 degrees would not kill the spores that might be in the milk. For that reason it was recommended that fresh milk be used and heated at once. There was less likely to be spores in fresh milk than in old. Mr. Publow recommended that a special thermometer for the testing of the culture, a special dipper and even a special spoon for the stirring of the culture in small bottles should be kept. The ill results of undesirable bacteria could not be too strongly dwelt upon.

The growth of the culture should be carefully looked after for in the sudden changes of temperature the same quality could not be expected to remain. A thermometer should be used from day to day to keep record of the weather. In making the butter a uniform quality from day to day was desirable and that could not be obtained unless a uniformity in the culture was maintained. When once a method was secured that gave the desired results in the starter that method should be strictly adhered to and no further experimenting done. In carrying over cultures the best thing was to carry them over at a special temperature than to carry them over on ice. The mother culture could be placed on ice however, for two or three hours before it was to be required for use and in this way the temperature could be kept down.

In the making of whey butter the cream should be cooled as quickly as possible to 60 degrees or so and the culture added as soon as possible. One of the pronounced defects in whey butter was the flavor and this defect was found greater the longer the whey was kept.

The meeting was continued in the afternoon.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

WON'T HAVE TO VOTE ON BY-LAW

To Raise $70,000 for Power House at New Waterworks Dam

Peterborough ratepayers will not have to pass their opinion on the by-law to raise $70,000 for the development of the surplus power at the new waterworks dam. It was to have been voted on on April 19th. At a special meeting of the city council last night it was decided to withdraw the by-law, on motion of Ald. Phelan and Ald. Bradburn, in view of the fact that the Canadian General Electric Company have practically accepted the proposition made by the Peterborough water commissioners in connection with the surplus power. The letter to this effect from Mr. Frederic Nicholls was read by Mayor Morrow and seemed to please the aldermen.

A contract, which when signed by city and company, will consummate the agreement, is now being prepared by the city solicitor and will be submitted to the company in a few days and it will then be dealt with by the company's solicitor.

MASS MEETING FOR BOYS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Mr. McCuaig Will Address the Meeting Which Commences at 7.15

All boys between the age of 12 and 18 are cordially invited to be present at the boy's rooms to-night.

SENSATIONAL EXPERIENCE IN SEARCH OF A CURE

$50 For One Specialist Alone

The varied and costly experiences of some people who suffer from skin diseases and get into the hands of so-called "specialists" are rarely heard of. Almost daily the proprietors of Zam-Buk are receiving letters of gratitude from persons who have been cured by Zam-Buk, and in many cases these letters tell a story of suffering in the search for cure which is truly pitiful.

Mr. Arthur Fairbank, of 547 Lansdowne avenue, Toronto, says: "Some time ago I had a bad eruption on my forehead, which I attribute to getting infected at the barber's. This eruption became very sore and spread over my scalp in the form of open sores. I went to a doctor who treated me for it. Still the sores spread until almost the whole of my head was affected. As the doctor's treatment did me very little good, I left it off and tried various home remedies. I also tried taking various aperient medicines to try and cure the outbreak through the blood. Still it was in vain!

"Then I tried blood mixtures, but none of them did me any good. I was by that time in a shocking condition, and as a last resource I went to a skin specialist. He treated me for a period and it cost me over $50, but the sores got no better. They would itch and burn at times until I was nearly mad.

"One day a friend asked me why I had not tried Zam-Buk and gave me a little. That little bit of Zam-Buk did me more goood than all the long treatment I had had from doctors and specialists. I immediately sent for a supply of the balm and started right in to give it a proper trial. Very soon I began to see and feel a great difference in the sores and I knew that at last I had got something that would cure me. Zam-Buk cured me and at a trifling cost. Indeed only a few boxes were necessary to do it."

Not only for skin diseases, but for cuts, burns, bruises, piles, inflamed surface, etc., Zam-Buk is unequalled. All druggists and stores, 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse imitations.

Points for Mothers

Many of us remember our first stitches at our mothers' knees. In teaching a child to sew in the first place interest her by telling her of the articles she can make—dolly's clothes, towels for the mother, handkerchiefs for the father, and later she may make an apron, skirt, etc., for herself. Give her work that will gradually grow under her tiny fingers and not long seams that maddden a nervous child. Ten minutes at a time will be long enough if the little one shows any restlessness or lack of interest, and half an hour should be the limit. Fit up a little workbox, using a clean pasteboard box, and put in it a little thimble, a small pair of bluntly pointed scissors, two spools of white cotton, a tiny pincushion and an equally small needle book, with half a dozen No. 7 needles in it, and an emery cushion for rusty needles.

Commence with a plain undergarment for the doll, cutting it out in two pieces and pinning the sides together. Get soft muslin to make it easy for baby fingers to handle. Give the child a needle to look at, let her handle it and then take No. 40 cotton, show her how to cut the end of the thread diagonally so as to make it go easily through the eye of the needle and how to roll the thread between the fingers if split at the end. Threading a needle correctly and making a knot in the longest end of the thread (over the left first finger) that will be small and compact will be sufficient for the first lesson.

The Children's Teeth.

"If I were asked," says Professor Osler, "to say whether more physical deterioration was produced by alcohol or by defective teeth I should unhesitatingly say by defective teeth." It is only through sound teeth and clean mouths that we shall be able to preserve the health of the stomach and many other organs of the human system.

Think of the poor children who suffer loss of appetite and loss of sleep on account of toothache! Is it reasonable to expect with these conditions existing for any length of time that children will grow to be strong and healthy men and women?

The question naturally arises, How can we correct the existing conditions? The most effective solution must be through the children. There must be impressed on their minds early in life the necessity of a clean mouth. They must be instructed in the use of the toothbrush, for in reality the toothbrush is mightier than the dentist.

Everyday Logic For Everyday Mothers

Cheerfulness is a fine spring tonic and a delightful winter cordial.

We all want our children to be happy, and the happiest are those who have happy mothers.

The mother who is gloomy and discontented, fretful and fault finding cannot expect to have the confidence and companionship of her children.

Take an interest in your boy's last or his next ball game and in his tousel headed friend.

Life and motherhood are serious matters of grave importance, but we need cheerfulness to sweeten the little everyday duties, and if we wear sad or sour faces our children will naturally turn from us to find brighter companions.

School Headaches.

A great many children who are perfectly well during the holidays suffer from frequent headaches and other ailments as soon as they go back to school.

This usually means that the eyes are in some way defective and that the child needs to be taken to an oculist to have his eyes tested. A pair of glasses worn for a time will often cure the mischief altogether, whereas if it is allowed to go on unchecked it may mean that he will have to wear glasses all his life. It is not merely always the brightest eyes that are the strongest. Indeed, very beautiful eyes are often shortsighted and imperfect in many other ways.

One Happy Queen.

When the little Juliana, princess of the Netherlands, goes abroad with her mother, Queen Wilhelmina, the carriage is drawn by four white horses, and everywhere it goes the placid Dutch who see it grow excited in their happiness. The queen is said to be as pretty as she was before her marriage, the disappointment and illness of years having marred her good looks somewhat until her present happiness restored it.

Danger of Cold Water.

Children should be prevented from drinking very cold water after partaking of a warm meal. Very often after drinking hot coffee or tea a large quantity of cold water is drunk. This mixture of the warm and cold is very injurious not only to the stomach, but also to the teeth. The habit should be broken in childhood, because when once formed it is difficult to overcome.

WILL RESIDE IN LAKEFIELD

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harvey Who Have Resided in Young's Point for Ten Years are Removing

Last Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harvey, who have resided near Young's Point for the past ten years, but who are now leaving to take up residence in Lakefield, were agreeably surprised by relatives and friends to the number of forty calling on them to spend the evening and to say farewell. All spent an enjoyable time. Games were played and afterwards refreshments were served. The gathering dispersed after the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

The following Monday night a party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas for the purpose of bidding farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Harvey. About twenty-five were present and the evening was spent in games and music, and refreshments were served. The departure of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey from Young's Point is greatly regretted, and they leave with the best wishes of their many friends.

HON. MR. OLIVER REPLIES TO INDIAN LAND CHARGES

Calls Mr. Bradbury's Statemens a "Tirade of Unwarranted" Assertions, But Member for Selkirk Declares That Minister Shows Ignorance.

Ottawa, April 15.—An unprecedented "sustained tirade of unwarranted assertions," was Hon. Frank Oliver's mildest characterization of Mr. Bradbury' four hours' speech Wednesday night on alleged frauds on Manitoba Indians by Government officials.

The discussion continued all yesterday and last night. On division Mr. Oliver was sustained by 107 to 57, the largest majority of the session. The Conservative whip was caught napping.

Where lands held by Indians were not being used to their profit, it was policy to have them surrendered in exchange for money, Mr. Oliver argued.

The surrender of lands on St. Peter's Reserve arose out of attempts made to secure the title of whites and half-breeds who held the lands individually within the area occupied by the reserve. Chief Justice Howell, as commissioner to adjust the claims of the white and half-breeds, found affairs which made a surrender of the lands necessary. The terms of surrender were negotiated by him at from $4 to $17.50 per acre.

Mr. Bradbury interjected that the Minister had shown ignorance all through his speech. The members of the band had not signed the surrender, and therefore it was not legal.

Mr. Oliver insisted that the Indians knew before they voted what they were voting for. Terms had been discussed time and again.

As regards the sale, he would say, without reference to any member of the House, that anyone who said the land was sold without proper advertisement was absolutely regardless of the truth. The land was sold by auction in the open light of day. It was an extraordinary case, and extraordinary measures had to be taken.

W. S. Middlebro (North Grey) said the transaction was a blot upon the administration of the Interior Department. Part of the land which had been sold for $5 or $6 per acre was sold by the Government for $20 per acre, and other portions were assessed at $24. No public body, no provincial authority and not even the Town of Selkirk had petitioned for the sale, only S. J. Jackson, ex-M.P. for Selkirk.

T. W. Crothers (East Elgin) said it was pitiable to the Minister's friends in the House to see the feeble arguments he had advanced. He quoted from the Indian Act to show that there was no authority to make a patent of public lands to an unenfranchised Indian. The transaction, he described as one of the most contemptible schemes and swindles. He did not know Chief Justice Howell, but he did know that chief justiceships granted by this administration carried no guarantee for everyday common honesty. He was describing Mr. Oliver as guilty of the most contemptible conduct, when Mr. Fielding rose to a point of order and Mr. Crothers altered his statements and said it was the greatest breach of public trust ever brought against a Government, already on the eve of moral bankruptcy and tottering to its fall.

Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, the last speaker, vigorously defended Justice Howell. He felt sure that Mr. Crothers, upon reconsideration, would be inclined to retract his statements.

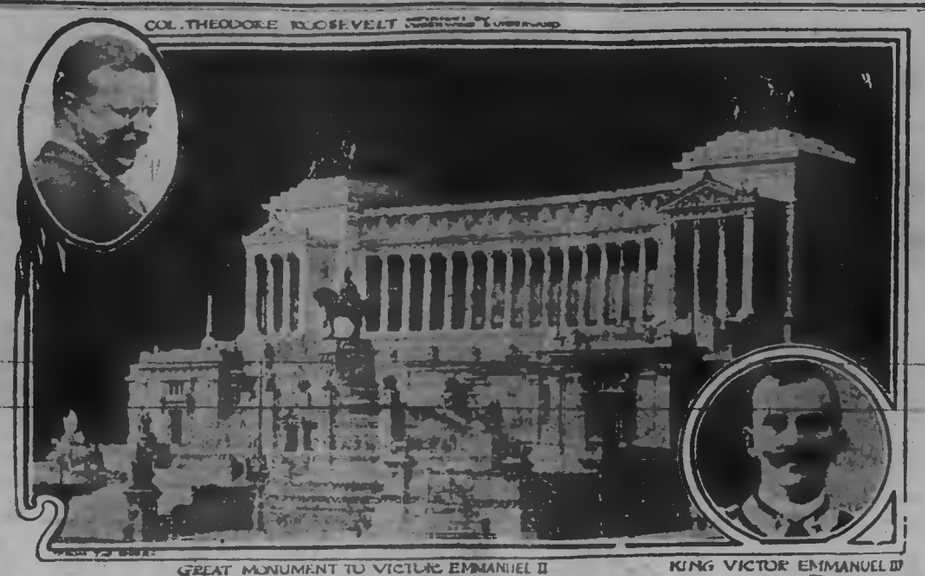
Mr. Boyce (Algoma) read, for the benefit of the Minister of Justice, an article in The Canadian Municipal Journal, commenting on the release of Skill and King, sentenced at Toronto to a year's imprisonment for circulating obscene literature, saying "the whole thing is a pure farce," and asking "where is the pull?"

Mr. Aylesworth desired to refer to the files first, but he desired, he said, at the earliest opportunity, "to deny and repudiate, with whatever indignation of which I am capable, the absurd and utterly untrue insinuations contained in the article which has just been read. It is untrue that Mr Robinette of Toronto or any other person has the slightest influence or pull with the Department of Justice in cases of this kind."

In the Senate yesterday Sir Richard Cartwright stated that the purpose of the revision of the immigration law was to strengthen the provision against undesirables.

Senator Gibson referred to the case of an Englishman at Hamilton, who sent for his wife and children, and when they reached Quebec the officers detained them, alleging one of the children had ringworm. A bill of $60 was run up and because the man's funds were exhausted the family would have been deported had not the St. George's Society came to the rescue.

Sir Richard said the new bill would prevent such incidents.



Rome, April 14.—King Victor Emanuel paid special honor to Mr. Theodore Roosevelt. His Majesty drove up to the Hotel Beau Sejour in an automobile and invited Mr. Roosevelt to accompany him on a tour through the city. In expectation of the royal visit a great crowd had gathered about the hotel.

The King and Mr. Roosevelt were cheered repeatedly during a brief whirl about the most interesting streets. The King took Mr. Roosevelt to the barracks of the King's Regiment of Cuirassiers. He showed his guest the different uniforms of the Italian army, squads of soldiers representing the various corps of the garrisoned city. Mr. Roosevelt was much interested in the field uniform of a peculiar shade of grayish green.

Leaving the barracks, the royal host and his guest went to the Victor Emanual II. monument, in Piazza Venezia, and inspected the statuary and great marble columns. Already more than $20,000,000 has been spent on it.

COMPROMISE ON THE MILLER BILL REACHED

Ottawa, April 15.—After a conference last night between supporters of the Miller anti-racetrack gambling bill, and representatives of the horse racing associations, a compromise was effected, and it is exceedingly probable that the bill, as proposed to be amended, will go through this session.

The chief terms of the proposed legislation are that race meetings of seven days' duration will be allowed twice each year, and bookmakers will be allowed to attend during the time the meetings are in progress.

The negative provisions of the bill are that no new race tracks will be permitted, no hand book men will be allowed to operate, and there must be no tipsters, no poolrooms, no newspaper advertisements of tips, and no transmission of news for handbook purposes by wire.

Except arrangements regarding the length of meetings, and the presence of bookmakers, the bill will be identical with the Miller bill.

SIXTY-FIFTH REGIMENT TO TAKE A TRIP

Montreal, April 15.—The statement was made yesterday in military circles that Hon. Col. Rodolphe Forget, M.P., of the 65th Regiment (French-Canadian) will take the whole regiment of 500 men to London and Paris; also, that while here, en route for the old land, the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto will be the guests of the 65th.

There was some talk of a civic reception, but the colonel of the Queen's own expressed a preference for a reception by the brother soldiers of Montreal.

Mr. Forget's offer is conditional. If Lt.-Col. Labelle's regiment can be got into perfect shape, and if the boys will attend their drill, the trip will come off. He says, however, that he does not fear a comparison of the 65th band with the best military musical organizations in the French army, that of the Guarde Republico, of course, excepted.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

A German torpedo boat was run down by a small cruiser during naval manoeuvres and two engineers killed and several others wounded.

At Meriden, Conn., one woman was killed outright, another woman seriously injured and a man probably fatally hurt when a train struck a large touring car.

The City of Brantford, in the Police Court yesterday, withdrew their case against the Street Railway Co., over the operation of cars over a street in course of repair.

The approval of the King to the use of the word "Royal," as applied to the Royal Guardians, a Quebec fraternal organization seeking a federal charter, has been received.

Van Parseval's new aeroplane, the largest yet constructed, was caught in a violent and gusty wind while flying over Lake Plau, Germany, and, turning turtle, fell into the water.

At Chicago, Wm. S. Phillips, president of the American-Mexican Mining & Development Co., was sentenced to three years' imprisonment and a fine of $1,000. He sold $800,000 worth of stock in the company and paid large unearned dividends out of money received.

INQUEST RESUMED AT TWEED

Tweed, April 15.—The inquest into the death of William Masters last Friday forenoon was resumed yesterday, when Crown Attorney Anderson of Belleville examined witnesses. Provincial Detective Miller brought Masters' clothing and the bullet that killed him, together with the 44-calibre rifle and revolver that belong to the aged suspect, Parker, who has retained Mr. Stewart of Madoc as his counsel. Members of the family told of Masters going for a load of wood and of the finding of the body on a side road. They also told of threats that Parker had made, while neighbors told of seeing Parker on the main road a little while before the shooting. He was also seen running away toward Tweed by a Miss Way. Mr. and Mrs. Palmatter, where he was Friday afternoon, had told him of the affair, and he appeared greatly surprised. He stayed at the home of James Tucker all Friday night, something he had never done before, and left before breakfast. He told them their announcement was the first he had heard of the shooting. On Saturday he went to a brother-in-law's, William Ferguson, who lives many miles away, who also told him of the tragedy. Again he seemed surprised. Ferguson told him a warrant had been issued for his arrest and he readily assented to give himself up.

The inquest resumes next Thursday.

PREMIER ASQUITH WILL GO RIGHT ALONG WITH BUDGET

Veto Resolution Passes Second Reading by a Vote of 351 to 246, and Asquith Announces That He Will Push Budget Along.

London, April 15.—The House of Commons yesterday evening passed the second reading of Premier Asquith's House of Lords veto resolution by a vote of 351 to 245.

The vote was taken amid scenes of intense excitement, hardly paralleled since the Gladstonian home rule debates.

Asquith declared that if the Lords rejected the Government's proposals, he would immediately tender advice to the crown regarding steps to be taken if the Government's policy is to be carried into effect. If the advice is rejected, Parliament then would dissolve, taking steps to ensure on the next occasion, that the will of the people, as expressed in the election, would be carried out. The only legislation prior to a decision on this question would be the budget.

It would not be right, he continued, for him to disclose the terms of the advice to the throne, but unless the Government found themselves in a position to give their policy statutory effect they would either resign office or recommend dissolution of Parliament.

The Premier's statement was interrupted by cheers and counter-cheers. There was much laughter from the Conservative benches when he said that he could not disclose the terms of his intended advice to the King.

Mr. Balfour, leader of the Opposition, rose amid a considerable uproar, and said that the Premier's important statement represented the culmination of long negotiations with the Irish party. The Nationalists had agreed to swallow the budget, their aversion to which they had never concealed, in order to get home rule.

The Speaker having adjourned the House, an uproarious scene ensued. There were hisses and cheers, and cries of "dynamitard," "traitor," and similar names. While Mr. Redmond, the Irish leader, appeared to be trying to reach a Conservative member, who had used an offensive expression meaning serious occurred, but the demonstrations were renewed in the lobbies, where the members, especially the Nationalists, lingered in excited discussion until the lights were extinguished.

Asquith's resolution to be proposed next Monday, allocating the time for the consideration of the budget, provides that all stages of the legislation must be completed on April 27.

The fact that the Premier has decided to dispose of the budget measure before a decision by the Lords on the veto resolutions will have assumed a final form, indicates that a deal has been effected between the Cabinet, and the Redmondites, and that the latter will support the budget.

The preliminary debate on the veto resolutions has been somewhat overshadowed by the interest excited by the revelation of Sir Robt. Anderson's share in the political events of 1887, and the determined efforts the Irish members are making in the House to secure a Governmental investigation of the affair, with a view of depriving Sir Robert of his pension of $4,500 yearly, on the ground that his action was a breach of official confidence.

Sir Robert Anderson has admitted the authorship of the famous "Parnellism and Crime," series of articles which appeared in The Times in 1887, and which culminated in the publication of the Pigott forgery.

The debate, however, has been notable in character, and has attracted many prominent visitors to the House, including Queen Alexandra, who made her first appearance in the House since her coronation.

In the meantime Lord Rosebery, in the House of Lords, submitted his plan for the reform of the second Chamber. It proposes that in the future the House shall consist of the Lords of Parliament, chosen in part by the peers themselves, in part by nomination by the crown, in part elective from the outside, and of others sitting by virtue of their office and [illegible], the term of tenure for all to be the same.

GENERAL KITCHENER SAYS THERE IS NO VISIBLE REASON FOR WAR COMING

Chicago, April 15.—Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, was in the city for 90 minutes yesterday.

On militarism the general spoke guardedly, saying: "One must be careful when a thoughtless word might be wrongfully taken to mean something one did not intend it to.

"As to Canada's military future, I haven't visited Canada. I see no aggressiveness in the future, so far as Canada is concerned. The little navy they are building up there is only that they may sleep a little easier o' nights. One rests better with a 'bobby' walking around the square. I suppose they will some day begin to increase the army there—just for the same reason.

"I see no reason that international peace should not continue from this very moment. One never knows, however, when something may stir up trouble and war does not often announce itself far in advance. It always pays to keep one's 'powder dry'."

"Is that an expression of England's military policy," Lord Kitchener was asked.

"Well, I should not put it that broadly. England is at peace with all the world, but our surest safeguard of peace is always to be ready. Until such time as some international agreement shall be reached, if such there be, England will be ready at all times to lend that influence toward peace. I think I may say that in a general way, without respect to my military position there."

Asked what he considered the chief factor tending to international peace, the general replied: "Food. Plenty of food is one of the first. The Panama Canal has come into the list now as a new factor also. The nation whose food supply is cramped, is restless and irritable. It wants to expand. It wants what the other fellows have. It was a comfort to my heart as a peace-loving man to see broad acres of food-producing land in this country and to hear that Canada could duplicate it. The Panama Canal was the best move America ever made. It will bring the east and the west closer together and the big factor, not only in commerce, but in the country's military future.

"I wish I knew what the future would bring forth for the Pacific," he said. "It is gratifying to us that the canal is being built at Panama, for that helps to simplify matters. But only by the movement of nations in the future can we tell what part of the Pacific will then take in history.

"My idea of the army and navy of the future is that the navy must be of the first consideration. Either in defence or offence the navy must take the initiative, but a nation will have to depend upon the army before it can whip another.

"My whole view of the future is one made peaceable by force of arms. Even with an international agreement for peace, some force must exist to punish offenders."

Hundreds of persons, chiefly Englishmen, crowded the station platform when Lord Kitchener arrived and gave three cheers.

CANADIANS IN DANGER

Toronto Missionaries Imperilled by Chinese Outbreak—Several Outrages.

Shanghai, April 15.—The Wesleyan-China Inland Mission at Changsha, the capital of the Province of Hunan, was destroyed by rioters yesterday.

The missionaries took refuge in the Yamen, which the rioters subsequently attacked. There was no loss of life.

Two British gunboats are hurrying up the Yang Kiang for the purpose of quelling the disturbances.

Toronto, April 15.—J. S. Helmer, secretary of the China Inland Mission, has had no intimation of the disturbance up to last night. The Wesleyan and China Inland Mission, he stated, were two distinct missions. The Mission of Yale University also labored in Changsha. The Wesleyan Mission had five or six workers, while the China Inland had eleven missionaries distributed in several stations, including Dr. and Mrs. Keller (Toronto), R. K. Veryard (England), Miss Tilley (Toronto), and seven German workers.

Changsha, the capital of the Province of Hunan, is situated on the Siang-Kiang, 50 miles south of its embouchure in Lake Tong-Ting-Hu. It is a seat of silk industry and is the home of the famous College of Yolo. The population is estimated at 800,000.

MEDICAL INSPECTION OF SCHOOLS

Toronto, April 15.—Toronto is to have two physicians, one a lady doctor, and three nurses to inaugurate medical inspection in the public schools. This move was decided at the meeting of the management committee of the Board of Education yesterday, after a great deal of discussion.

Although no physician has been appointed, Miss Lina I. Rogers of New York, a Canadian, born in Woodbridge, was made supervising nurse on the recommendation of John Ross Robertson, who appeared personally before the committee to urge her appointment.

New Control For Hartford Life.

Hartford, Conn., April 15.—Capitalists of Cincinnati, headed by John G. Hoyt, yesterday acquired the controlling interest in the Hartford Life Insurance Co.

Windsor, April 15—The five-months-old child of Albert House is dead from scalds, after having upset a pot of tea.

EARTHQUAKES IN COSTA RICA

Damage to the Extent of $1,000,000 is Reported.

San Jose, April 15.—A series of earthquakes, varying in intensity, has swept over Costa Rica during the past 24 hours, doing vast damage, the extent of which can only now be estimated at more than $1,000,000.

So far, there has been no report of loss of life, but the people in the cities are panic-stricken, and are abandoning their homes for the hillsides.

In all there have been more than thirty shocks, ten of these occurring between 12 o'clock Wednesday night and three o'clock yesterday morning. Property in San Jose to the value of several hundred thousand dollars has been destroyed, but it is feared that it will total far more than this, as the vibrations of the earth have not yet ceased.

Yesterday the Government ordered a suspension of general business until such time as safety is assured. The banks and public institutions have been closed, and trade and commerce are at a standstill.

The first shocks Wednesday evening were of slight intensity and caused little alarm, but later they became much more violent and even the stauchest buildings were shaken to their very foundations.

In several instances weaker buildings were partially wrecked and many persons were slightly injured.

Communication between the various towns has been interrupted, and details of the damage done at these places are lacking.

PHILADELPHIA STRIKE IS OVER

Philadelphia, April 15.—The strike of the employes of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., which began Feb. 19, was settled last night.

The terms of the settlement have not yet been made public, but it is said they include many of the features of the proposal made through Mayor Reyburn on March 20, when the company agreed to take back all the strikers and to guarantee them $2 a day until regular runs could be secured for them. The cases of the 174 men whose discharge precipitated the strike on Feb. 19, will be submitted to arbitration.

Candies Are Harmless.

Ottawa, April 15.—That harmless dyes only are used in coloring candy, made by Canadian manufacturers, is opinion expressed by A. McGill, chief analyst of the Dominion Government, who has just issued a bulletin giving results of an analysis of the 169 samples of highly-colored confectionery purchased throughout the Dominion.

To Fight Tuberculosis.

London, April 15.—Waldorf Astor has offered the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption a practically unlimited sum to carry on the fight against tuberculosis. Waldorf Astor is the son of William Waldorf Astor.

JOHNS HOPKINS FIRST ON LIST

Baltimore, Md., April 15.—Steps to develop what will probably be the greatest institution of higher education in the United States were taken yesterday, when, by the action of John D. Rockefeller and the trustees, faculty and alumni of John Hopkins University, a committee was organized to raise $2,000,000, of which Rockefeller has offered $250,000, and add school of law, teaching, engineering and preventive medicine to Johns Hopkins. These four schools will be of the same high level of the Johns Hopkins University and medical schools. The six big institutions in one will be moved to a large estate just outside of Baltimore.

MINE EXPLODED, SEVERAL DEAD

Quebec, April 15.—News was received yesterday evening from St. Alphonse, Saguenay County, of a bad accident, yesterday afternoon, on the line of the Ha Ha Bay Railway, three miles from St. Alphonse.

While blasting in an earth dump, the man working the battery did not give the working men sufficient time to get out of the way. The mine exploded with terrific force, burying some twenty men, mostly foreigners under a huge pile of earth and rock. Up to a late hour last night, ten men had been taken out, two of them dead, and three seriously injured.

AUSTRALIAN ELECTIONS WERE GREAT SURPRISE

Melbourne, Australia, April 15.—Ex-Premier Deakins' own majority was reduced from 6,000 to 320 in Wednesday's labor triumph, which has produced a profound sensation. While apparently there was no great difference between the programs of the parties, there was a big divergence in principle. Laborites are strong for concentration of power in the Federal Government, while the Fusionists desired to strengthen the authority of the states. A graduated land tax and industrial legislation on advanced lines is inevitable. The first session of the Parliament with "new protection" as the policy, giving the benefits of the tariff to those manufacturers only who pay higher wages, will be watched with interest.

FOR RECIPROCITY IN NATURAL PRODUCTS

Washington, D.C., April 15.—On leaving the White House yesterday, Senator Root was asked about the progress in getting Canada and the United States together for reciprocity. "There is a tremendous sentiment all along the border of the two countries for reciprocity in natural products," he said. "The time has passed for reciprocity in manufactured products."

PALACE OF JUSTICE IS CONTEMPLATED

Ottawa, April 15.—A palace of justice at Ottawa is contemplated. Haughton Lennox (South Simcoe) asked Hon. Wm. Pugsley if the Supreme Court was to be put in the new Government building. The Minister said no, but added that the judges liked the present site, and the idea had occurred that a building might be erected upon it to accommodate the Supreme Court, the Exchequer Court, and the Railway Commission.

WAS BURNED TO DEATH IN BED

Sherbrooke, Que., April 15.—A fatal fire occurred at St. Francis Xavier, by which the residence of Pierre Therrien was destroyed. The father of the owner perished in the flames. He had been a cripple for years, had the habit of smoking in bed, and, being alone in the house when the fire started, was unable to escape.

Woman Mangled by Train.

St. Thomas, April 15.—Mrs. Jane Mapson, a widow, aged 70, who kept a restaurant, was found frightfully mangled on the M.C.R. bridge over Kettle Creek at daybreak yesterday morning. Partially dressed, she had evidently left her home while temporarily insane.

SOMETHING TO FEAR

The approaching negotiations for commercial reciprocity between the Governments of Canada and the United States will be looked forward to with some apprehension by the Canadian people. The Laurier Government have prepared the way by lowering the duties on a number of Canadian articles without getting any concessions from the United States. If the Canadian tariff were as high as the United States tariff Canada's representatives might begin negotiations with some show of success. Any concession on one side would then have to be met with an equal concession on the other side, but when a country with a very high tariff asks a country with a low tariff for further concessions, the reply should be, "When you lower your tariff to the level of ours we may think of further reductions."

The result of the recent negotiations at Albany show that this is not the spirit in which the Canadian Government will meet the Government at Washington. The American politicians have learned that the Laurier Government can be frightened by threats into giving something for nothing. They will profit in the future by this knowledge.

EXPORTS NOT ALWAYS PROFITABLE

What the Toronto Globe does not know about the theories of protectionists would fill a big book, and almost every day it publishes its ignorance. Its latest statement appears in an editorial on freight rates, in which it refers to "the protection theory that regards exports as in themselves beneficial, whether they result in a gain or loss."

There is no such protection theory. Is it the free trader or the protectionist who is always boasting of foreign trade statistics? Any reader of the Globe knows that it is always rejoicing over any increase in foreign trade regardless of whether it is beneficial to the country or not.

The protectionists say that home trade is more profitable than foreign trade, except when the articles imported cannot be economically produced in the country.

The freetrader favors sending farm products abroad and bringing in foreign manufactured goods. The protectionist says that if the farmer buys goods from the home manufacturers and sells food to the Canadian workmen, who make the goods, it is far better for the country than if the food is exported and the manufactured goods purchased in foreign countries.

The protectionist always opposes the policy of exporting raw materials and bringing them back as manufactured products. The export figures are big when we ship out our timber, our pulpwood, our nickel, our iron ore, our copper, and our lead to the United States, and have them made into finished products there. The protectionists says it is better to cut down these export figures and make up the raw materials at home.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER

In view of the proposed engagement of an industrial commissioner for Peterborough, the discussion that took place in the Toronto city council the other day, when the Department of Industries and Publicity was abolished, is of interest.

Ald. Phelan opposed the abolition of the Department.

"If our large industries have to engage men to get out after business we will have to do the same," he said. "We must have a properly qualified commissioner to get after business. With cheaper power in the outside municipalities, Toronto will have to hustle after business.

"Do we want an office boy, as stated by the vice-president of the Board of Control, or do we want a man who adequately represents the city in a commercial capacity?"

Ald. Phelan outlined the duties of such a commissioner and ridiculed the idea that an office boy be appointed.

"I am sorry that my friend does not know very much about commercial life," said Controller Foster. "He may be all right addressing a judge, but when he talks about getting out after business he is at sea.

"Do we want a small office with a third-class promoter? What does a commercial man do when he wants to know anything about the business advantages of the city? He communicates with the Board of Trade and finds out all he wants to know.

"The reason the Commissioner of Industries was appointed before was because there was a member of Council who wanted to provide a position for a friend. What did we get? We got a clerk from one of the civic departments. He was a nice fellow, but that was all.

"We got more industries before the department was established than we did after. In three and a half years the department cost us $26,160."

Controller Foster criticized the views of Toronto, circulated to advertise the city.

"They were more fit for a parlor than they were for advertising purposes," he said. "The commissioner didn't resign too soon."

"In 1906 I was opposed to the establishing of this department," said Ald. McBride, "but Ald. Foster's speech has changed my opinion. I agree with Ald. Phelan, who has outlined the usefulness of this department in an able manner. With all respect to ex-Commissioner Thompson, he was not the right man for the position. His ideas were too elaborate.

"Who is going to look after the conventions and industries we want to come to Toronto? We must have a man to attend to this work."

Ald. Dunn said a great deal had been said about the appointment of an office boy to look after industries, "but I am of the opinion that the Assessment Department could successfully attend to these duties."

"With such results as we had from this department, can we decide to continue it?" asked Ald. Dunn.

"Surely we are not going to give the Assessment Commissioner more work to do when he is already overloaded with work," said Ald. McCarthy. "If a member of this Council sat here and allowed the expenditure of $26,000 without asking for results, I am not disposed to follow his advice."

The alderman told how a Philadelphia business man had been induced to establish a branch of his industry in Toronto by the writing of a letter from his office giving some information.

"You can't tell me that we don't require a commissioner," he said. "In getting a convention to decide to come to Toronto from Philadelphia, I told the delegates that we would allow a company of the Queen's Own to protect them from the Indians who might be prowling about, and they actually took my statement seriously. And that was in the city of Philadelphia.

"If we adopted a policy of boosting instead of doing so much knocking, Toronto would go ahead as it never went ahead before."

The motion in favor of abolition was carried by a majority of one.

Toronto's experience simply shows the importance of selecting the right man for such a position. Hamilton, some years ago, had an industrial commissioner, who succeeded in bringing a number of large industries to that city. Toronto's industrial commissioner did not understand the art of advertising a city. He might have learned something by studying the methods of Winnipeg's industrial commissioner, who does know how to advertise.

An industrial commissioner should be a man of wide knowledge regarding the industries of Canada, the United States and the United Kingdom. He should know what British and American manufacturing industries are doing a large business in Canada, and be able to show them that it would pay to establish branch factories in this country. He should know the quantity and value of the imports in every class of manufactured goods. He should have accurate knowledge of the conditions requisite for success in each line of industry. He should know how to write newspaper articles, how to prepare pamphlets and placards, and how to write concise and forceful letters. He should be courteous, tactful and resourceful in argument. When any city is so fortunate as to secure that stamp of man as industrial commissioner, his services are invaluable.

However, the success of an industrial commissioner must largely depend upon what this city has to offer to manufacturers. A Peterborough commissioner, for instance, must be able to show practical business men that this city offers advantages equal to or superior to those offered by other cities and towns that are seeking industries.

Nearly $7,000 is being offered in prizes, and a number of events, exclusive for the military, have been added this year.

Single fare has been granted for the show by all the railroads in Ontario.

A BRILLIANT WRITER

Dr. Thomas O'Hagan's Essays Are Receiving High Praise.

Thomas O'Hagan, M.A., Ph. D., the noted Canadian critic, poet and litterateur, whose recently published essays are receiving such high praise from leading Canadian and American critics, is one of Canada's most brilliant young writers. During the last fifteen years he has been doing splendid work in the field of literature and making a name for himself. He first attracted marked attention by his Songs of the Settlements and his Canadian Essays and Studies in Poetry reveal a wide acquaintance with literature of the Dominion.

Dr. O'Hagan is of Irish descent and of good old Kerry stock. He was educated at St. Michael's College and Ottawa University, graduating there in 1883 with high honors in English, Latin, French and German, and subsequently took a post graduate course at Cornell University, where he studied literature under Prof. Corson, the eminent Browning and Shakesperian scholar. He followed the teaching profession for some years and has taken a deep interest in the educational advancement of the Catholic schools of Ontario. He has held classical and modern language masterships in several of the leading high schools of Canada and has been a voluminous contributor to many of the leading magazines, periodicals and newspapers of the day. His writing is characterized by a fine literary style and a finish that stamp him as a writer of superior merit.

During 1903 and 1904 Dr. O'Hagan traveled in Europe and he has enjoyed great success on the lecture platform both in Canada and the United States. He has lectured at the Catholic Winter School at New Orleans, the Columbian Catholic Summer School, Detroit, and the Champlain Summer School, Plattsburg, and has appeared on the lecture platform in nearly all the leading cities of the American Union.

Dr. O'Hagan is a member of the Canadian Club, Hamilton; of the Celtic Society, Montreal; the Irish-American Historical Society, the American Historical Catholic Society and the Catholic Congress of Europe. He has specially prepared poems and read them at a number of noted celebrations, such as the Moore centenary celebration in Belleville, the jubilee of St. Michael's College, Toronto, in 1903, and the dedication of the Memorial Church to the Jesuit Martyrs at Penetanguishene, in 1902. Among his noted published works may be mentioned Gate of Flowers, 1897; Dreamland, 1893, and his recent work, Essays, Literary, Critical and Historical. His earlier poetical works received high commendation from J. D. Whittier, Dudley C. Warner, Katherine Tynan, Charles D. Roberts, Jas. Jeffrey Roche and a host of minor critics. Dr. O'Hagan is still a young man and much valuable work may still be expected from his brilliant and facile pen.

A Difference of Viewpoints.

Mr. Frank Nelson, who in addition to being the best known race-starter in Canada is sporting editor of The Toronto Globe, an old lake sailor and several other things beside, was one of the chief witnesses against the Miller anti-betting bill in the recent special enquiry at Ottawa. After he had given his evidence, Mr. W. E. Raney of Toronto, who represented the religious interests back of the measure, approached Nelson in the corridor and said:

"Look here, Nelson, it's all very well for you to testify as you did, but you must admit that racing brings objectionable characters into the country and that racing associations even admit objectionable characters to membership."

"Well," replied Nelson, "there's a good deal of difference of opinion everywhere as to what constitutes an objectionable character. Now I used to belong to a very fine organization and it specified only two classes of people which it would not admit to membership under any consideration. Would you like to know what they were?"

"Yes," said Mr. Raney.

"One was the liquor seller."

"Quite right," said Mr. Raney. "What was the other?"

"The lawyer," said Nelson.

And what he said was true, for the organization to which Nelson belonged and which excluded both lawyers and liquor sellers was the Knights of Labor.

Power Plows For Alberta.

A few weeks ago an entire train of gasoline power plows arrived in Alberta and despatches later advise that a large steam plow manufacturing company in Indiana had shipped thirty steam plowing outfits to that district. Each engine is capable of plowing 2,000 acres during the season.

The Giant's Strength

...By... BASIL KING,

Copyright, 1909, by Harper & Brothers.

"By urging her into a marriage in which she has no heart."

"Oh, but you must be mistaken, Wiltshire. I know she's fond of you."

"Yes, as she would have been fond of an elder brother if she had one. It's because she's fond of me in that way that she hasn't the heart to hurt me by refusing"—

He paused, half hoping to be contradicted again, but when Trafford spoke his tone implied little inclination to dispute the question.

"Do you think so?" was all he said.

"Aren't we obliged to think so? Haven't we the proof before us?"

"Where?"

"In herself. No woman who was going joyfully to her wedding day would look as she does. Mind you, I don't say that what she's doing she's doing unwillingly. On the contrary, she's making a willing sacrifice—the sacrifice of all her own happiness for the sake of pleasing you and me. We're forcing her."

"No, no; not that, Wiltshire. I've never put the slightest constraint upon her. She's always been as free as the wind. When it comes to sacrifice I'm willing to anticipate hers by mine in everything."

"Not more so than I, Trafford," the duke said quietly, "and yet I repeat what I said—we're forcing her by the very fact of letting her see how much it means to us. We don't realize that she's just the nature to break her own heart rather than wound yours or mine. The question for us to decide is whether or not we're going to let her."

"Of course we can't let her if you're right."

Trafford spoke with difficulty, finishing his sentence with a sort of gulp. He bent his head again and once more began pushing the paperweights about.

"And you know I am right," Wiltshire persisted.

Again Trafford hesitated before answering.

"Then what do you propose to do?" he asked at last, with a certain hushiness.

"I've thought that over, and I see that here our united action ends. If her happiness is to be secured—and I suppose that is the dearest wish of both of us—then I have one task and you have another. I have the right to speak of mine, but I can't speak of yours unless you give me leave."

"Say what you like. This is no time for too much punctiliousness. Whatever is necessary I shall have to do. I've long begun to recognize that I can't be stronger than she is, not any more than the chain can be stronger than its weakest link. Now, tell me what you mean."

"It's soon said," Wiltshire went on. "I can free her from the man she doesn't love, but it's for you to let her marry the man she does."

Trafford sprang to his feet.

"There's a man—she does—love?"

"You ought to know it," Wiltshire answered quietly. "A girl like Paula has forgotten in January the man she promised to marry in June. I don't reproach you, Trafford"—

"Oh, reproach me if you like!" Trafford groaned impatiently as he strode up and down the room.

"I will say, however, that if you had only told me what I ought to have known none of us would have been in the position in which we find ourselves today."

"I give you my word of honor, Wiltshire, I thought it was all over. Paula did promise to marry the man, but since the affair ended she seemed never to think of him again."

"And I can tell you that she thinks of nothing but him. If I were in your place"—

"You'd let her marry him. Yes, I know," Trafford broke in impatiently, "but you'll be surprised perhaps when I tell you I'd consented to the match, only the man refused my money. But what's the use of discussing it? The whole thing is out of the question—unless—unless her life depends on it."

"Are you sure it doesn't?"

"Look here, Wiltshire," Trafford cried, wheeling round. "What are you trying to say? Speak right out, for heaven's sake!"

"I mean that for your sake and mine Paula has undertaken a task beyond her strength. In the effort to carry it out she's being physically and mentally exhausted. The question in her mind is a more complicated one than that of giving up the man she loves to marry the one she doesn't love. That's an experience many girls have had to face, and they've lived through it. Paula could do it as well as they. But in her case she has other troubles."

"Other troubles?"

"And I think you ought to know it, Trafford."

"But, great heaven, what other troubles can she have?"

"Your own. She isn't ignorant of the campaign they're carrying on against you—over there."

"Well, what of it?"

"I have no more to say on the point. I mention it only to explain why the accumulation of her experiences during the past few months has been such a drain on her vitality."

"Do you mean to say that she attaches importance to the rot they've been writing about me in New York?"

"I think I can go as far as that."

"Importance—in what sense?"

The low tone of Trafford's voice, the stillness of his attitude and the intensity of his deep eyes betrayed the fear with which he awaited Wiltshire's reply.

"That's a question I've no right to answer. Any discussion of it should be between you and her."

"That sounds as if you were afraid of breaking bad news. Well, I won't press you."

For a few minutes Trafford resumed his walk up and down the room, his hands clasped behind his back and his head bent. When he stopped at last in front of Wiltshire he astonished him by saying:

"Let's go and talk it out with Paula."

Wiltshire objected on the ground that he preferred to have his own interview with her in private.

"No, no," Trafford urged. "I must be there. I must know what you say to each other. I must know, above all, what she says. The question touches me too closely to have it decided in my absence. Come, Wiltshire," he insisted, taking the duke by the arm and almost dragging him from his chair—"come along, and we'll reach an understanding together."

Reluctant as he was, Wiltshire suffered himself to be led away toward Paula's boudoir. As they approached the half open doorway they heard women's voices within. Wiltshire held back, but Trafford pushed the door open and entered. Two women were on their knees, with pins in their hands and between their teeth. There was a third woman farther off looking on with critical attention. Paula stood in the midst, tall, pale, grave, crowned with orange blossoms, veiled in lace and shimmering in the white and silver of her wedding dress.

She gave a little cry as her father entered.

"Don't be alarmed," he said, with a forced laugh. "It's no one to be afraid of. Come here, duke, and you'll see something."

"No, no! Please!" Paula implored.

But Trafford insisted on Wiltshire's entering. Since things had gone as far as this he was not without a lingering hope that it might be too late for turning back.

CHAPTER XXIV.

As they were actually in the room, there was nothing for Paula to do but receive them with the best grace she could command. She came forward to meet the duke with hand outstretched, but she held herself rigidly, as though on guard against any warmer greeting. The attitude did not escape him, and its significance confirmed him in the feeling that he was right in what he proposed to do.

While the three women withdrew at a nod from Trafford, Paula stood before Wiltshire trying to cover up her embarrassment with smiling cordiality.

"It had to be done, you know," she said, spreading her hands apart in a gesture of apology. "Even wedding dresses have to fit."

"If you have to wear them," Wiltshire added, trying to smile in response.

"And as I'm going to do so"— Paula began.

"We've come in to talk about that," Wiltshire said bluntly.

"Talk about—what?" She looked wonderingly as she spoke from the duke to her father.

"Wiltshire thinks you'd rather not marry him," Trafford declared, with intentional directness of attack.

"Oh, how can he? You must both know that I'm doing it—willingly."

"It's precisely because I do know that that I'm wondering whether I should let you," Wiltshire said gently.

"But I thought you—wanted to."

"It isn't a question of what I want, Paula. It's the far bigger question of what's right. And I've come to the conclusion that it isn't right for me to let you throw away your life for mine."

"Is it because you saw me at Mr. Winship's yesterday that you bring this up now? Papa, dear," she added, turning to Trafford, "I went to see Mr. Winship yesterday. I felt that I had a right to do it. I wanted to bid him goodby. Is it," she continued, looking again at Wiltshire—"is it because of that that you want to—to release me?"

"I know why you went there. As you say, it was to bid him goodby. But if you hadn't loved him you wouldn't have wanted to do it."

There was no reproach in Wiltshire's tone. He tried to keep out of it everything but a mere statement of the fact.

"I do love him," Paula said after a minute's hesitation. "I needn't deny it. A lot of people know it. Your sister knows it, and papa, and"—

"I swear I didn't, Paula!" Trafford cried. "I thought you had given the man up."

"So I have, papa. But don't you remember that I told you I should always love him, even if I married some one else?"

"You see, then"— Wiltshire began.

"But that doesn't keep me from loving you," she went on quickly, "just as much as I've always loved you. Only it isn't the same thing. It isn't even the same sort of thing. If you think I've changed toward you, duke, or that I don't want to keep my word, you're quite wrong."

"But I don't think so, Paula. I know you're ready to marry me, and I know you'd do it from the highest motives that can rule in human conduct, but I couldn't take the heart of a man and allow you to do it."

"Let's sit down," Trafford suggested, with something like a groan.

When they had taken seats Wiltshire defined the situation between them. He took the responsibility for it entirely upon himself. He had practically laid a trap for her. He had placed her in a position in which it had been almost impossible for her to refuse him. He had known that at the time. He had been quite aware that unless she had other reasons for doing so she could not marry him for love. He would say in his own defense that he hoped that the love which was lacking now she might learn to give him as their lives went on together. It was a hope founded on the assumption that if she did not love him much at least she loved no one else more. Now that he knew to the contrary he must beg her not to sacrifice herself in an effort that could only fail. She listened with downcast eyes. Her face was pale and drawn, and, though she maintained her self control, her emotion betrayed itself in the nervousness with which she twirled round and round the one ring she wore—her engagement ring. She was unconscious of the action, but Wiltshire noted how loosely the ring clung to the thin white finger.

"I don't think you do me justice, duke," she said when he had finished speaking. She raised her eyes and looked at him with apparent calmness. "You seem to think I have taken this step without knowing what I was doing or counting the cost. But I did all that beforehand. If I hadn't believed that I could be a good wife to you, I shouldn't have undertaken to try. That I loved some one else differently was something I never intended that you should know. It wouldn't have been necessary. I don't suppose that any two married people know everything about each other or that they need to know. You'd have been happy with me."

"Ah, but would you have been happy with me, Paula?"

"A woman's happiness, duke, is very easily secured. A large part of it—the very largest part of it—is in the happiness of those she cares for. If you and papa were pleased, that in itself would mean a great deal to me. I don't say that it would be enough to make me put aside all positive desires of my own, if there were no other reason. But there is another reason."

"What?"

"Papa knows. I needn't explain it. It's enough to say that it exists. I couldn't marry Mr. Winship, however much I cared for him. And, since that is so, why shouldn't I take what's left of my life to bring some comfort into yours?"

Wiltshire sprang up and crossed the room toward her.

"No, no, Paula! It can't be. You wouldn't be bringing comfort into my life when I knew you were desolating your own. It isn't as if everything were surely over for the love you own to. If it were, then perhaps—who knows?—I might let you come in to the poor shelter I could offer you. But everything isn't over."

"Oh, duke, don't say that!" she cried in a sharp tone of pleading.

"I do say it. I say it and repeat it. Reasons that exist today may not exist tomorrow. What should I feel if the time ever came when you might be free to marry him if you had not been tied to me?"

She started, with a little gasp, raising her hand as if to brush the thought away from her. It was the hand on which her engagement ring hung so loosely. Wiltshire caught it, holding it firmly in his own grasp.

"I'm going to take this off, Paula."

"I'm going to take this off, Paula. It should never have gone on."

She looked at him piteously, big tears beginning to roll down her cheeks. Trafford sprang from his chair, with an inarticulate sound of impatience. Wiltshire drew the ring so slowly from the finger that he seemed to be counting the seconds by which his own life ebbed away.

In the long minute of silence a discreet tap on the door sounded startlingly loud. To Trafford's quick "Come in" his secretary entered, apologetically offering a card.

"The gentleman said his errand was urgent," the secretary explained; "otherwise I shouldn't have ventured"—

"You're quite right, Smithson. Ask Durand to show the gentleman in here."

"But who is it, papa?" Paula cried, rising. "I can't see any one."

"You'd better see him," Trafford said gruffly.

He handed the card to Wiltshire, who, having read it, passed it on to Paula:

"You see, I was right," he said softly. "Everything isn't over yet."

"But, papa," Paula protested, with an air of distress, "I can't see Mr. Winship with this—this wedding dress on."

"Then take it off."

"Yes, take it off, Paula," Wiltshire said, with a sad smile. "As long as I live I shall remember with joy that you were willing to wear it. Now I am going to say goodby. You mustn't be sorry for anything that's occurred, because, even as things are, I'm a great deal happier than if—than if I didn't love you."

"Oh, duke"— she began brokenly.

"Hush!" he whispered. "Don't try to say anything. Winship will be here in a minute, and you must go and take that off. But you can lay it away somewhere—can't you?—and keep it in memory of the sacrifice—from which I saved you."

Again Paula tried to speak, but he turned quickly from her. With a rapid pressure of Trafford's hand, he left by one door, while Paula went out by another. Trafford was thus left alone to wait for Winship.

CHAPTER XXV.

YEARS of use had developed into an instinct Trafford's faculty for rapidly seizing the salient points of a situation. He never lost sight of the end to be attained or suffered side issues to divert his attention. When Wiltshire closed the door behind him he disappeared from Trafford's plan of action as completely as if he had never been in it. It was one more instance of the tool that had been lent in the hand and could only be cast aside. He had been singled out to insure Paula Trafford's happiness, but circumstances had rendered him unsuited to the task. Very well; there was nothing to be done but to turn to some one who would be equal to the undertaking, even though it were a Roger Winship. Trafford was subconsciously aware that a day would come when he would have leisure to look back with regret to the hopes he had built upon the duke, but events pressed too closely to allow of his doing it now.

During the few minutes that passed between the duke's departure and Winship's appearance Trafford reviewed in his rapid way the points of the situation one by one and prepared himself for any step he might be called upon to take.

The meeting between the two men was cold and formal. Each kept himself on his guard. It was impossible for Winship's trained observation not to see that Trafford was a broken man and equally so for Trafford, with his habit of quick scrutiny, not to perceive in Winship a certain development in command and importance since their meeting of six months ago.

"I must thank you for receiving me," Winship began when they had taken seats. "I shouldn't have ventured to disturb you if I had not something of importance to say."

"I'm very willing to see you, Mr. Winship," Trafford said, with a faint suggestion of friendliness.

Mrs. A. Graham, 547 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., says: "My back was so weak and tender that I could not turn in my bed. A heavy, dull pain had settled across the small of it and caused me almost constant suffering. I became weak and languid. I was run down generally, and had little ambition to move around. Headaches were frequent and often accompanied by spells of dizziness. Spots would dazzle before my eyes, and I would be unable to see. I had tried numerous remedies without getting results. Booth's Kidney Pills were advertised at Medill's pharmacy I tried them and soon found relief. The kidneys were quickly regulated and each and every symptom of kidney trouble was quickly cured. THE CAUSES OF DIVORCE

Rev. Mr. McCuaig Addresses Large Audience on an Important Subject

The last general meeting of the series of meetings conducted this week in the city in the interests of social purity was held last night in Park street Baptist church. A large and representative audience was present and many strong expressions of the good accomplished by the campaign were voiced by the ministers, who have heartily co-operated throughout. The Rev. Mr. Riddiford, pastor of the Park street church, presided, and Rev. Mr. Henderson and Rev. Mr. Pogue took part in the exercises.

The subject discussed by Mr. McCuaig was "The causes of divorce." Passing from the immediate cause of the great increase in the number of divorces granted in the United States during the last twenty years, which was shown to be lax laws, which tend to facilitate divorce the lecturer dealt with the unquestionable demand for divorce on the part of the community. This demand had its rise out of three conditions—"unfit marriages," "unwife-able women" and "sexually abnormal men." These conditions in their turn were shown to prevail on account of false education touching the relationship of the sexes through failure of parents in the home to impart true ideals to their children.

Mr. McCuaig addressed a special meeting of the Ministerial Association at two o'clock this afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. and at three o'clock delivered the last of the course of lectures on "Eugenics," in the parlors of the Young Women's Christian Association.

CORNER STONE TO BE LAID

At New Knox Church To-morrow—Lieut.-Governor to be Here

An important event in the history of the city will be the visit of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Lieut.-Col. J. M. Gibson, to-morrow. He is coming to Peterborough to lay the corner stone of the new Knox Presbyterian church, which, when completed, will be a credit to the congregation and to the city. The distinguished visitor will be given a civic reception on his arrival. He will be welcomed at the station by the mayor and members of the city council and will be taken over the lift lock on the government boat, "Bob Hall." He will have luncheon at the home of the Misses Dickson, Dickson street, and the ceremony in connection with the laying of the corner stone will commence at 2.30 o'clock. The proceedings will open with a hymn by the choir, after which the Moderator of the Presbytery, Rev. D. A. Mackenzie, of Centreville, will conduct a short devotional service. Then will follow the laying of the corner stone by the Lieutenant-Governor. He will be presented with an address and a silver trowel. After the laying of the corner stone will come the offertory, during which the choir will give another hymn. Short addresses will be given by Mayor Morrow, Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., and the ministers of a number of the churches in the city.

Fine weather is promised for the event.

COMMISSIONERS MEET TO-NIGHT

To Consider Applications for Renewal of Liquor Licenses

To-night at eight o'clock the license commissioners meet at the office of the License Inspector to consider all applications for renewals of liquor licenses. Six hotel licenses must not be granted.

While the meeting to-night is called for by the Liquor License law, it is just probable that no business will be transacted. License Inspector Stewart has no vote, and Mr. H. LeBrun is absent from the city. The two remaining members of the Board, Dr. Morrison and Mr. James Kendrey, would therefore have to agree as to which applications are to be refused.

"DR." PELLETIER IS IN OTTAWA

Famous Physician, Who Left Bills Unpaid Here, Figures in Police Court case in Hull

"Dr." Pelletier, the man who visited Peterborough last summer, exploiting an alleged consumption cure, who figured in an alleged hold-up case in Hastings county, and who left this fair city without paying a number of bills, has turned up again in Ottawa, and is in the public eye again. An Ottawa paper says:

Doctor Pelletier, the great Dr. Pelletier, the man who cured a whole United States army, a city full of people in Mexico, and 300 of the civic officials of Montreal—Pelletier is back in the city, and, as usual, is in trouble.

Dr. Pelletier, who is known in Ottawa as the "big man of the gold buttons," or the "man of the gas-tank," or the "physician who can cure consumption as easily as rolling off a log," is now searching Ontario and Quebec for a mysterious Mrs. Flynn.

He doesn't know her first name, but she is Mrs. Flynn, and he says that she has two children of his.

Pelletier, the man who pumps his patients, (if he can get one,) full of gas to cure worms, says Peter Pauquet, of Hull, knows where Mrs. Flynn has fled to, and yesterday he marched to Hull with a little army, consisting of his lawyer and numerous witnesses, and poor Pauquet was "pinched" and thrown into the cell.

Yet, verily, General Pelletier was at the head of the army. And what is more, he was clothed in the gold buttons, and armed with gold sealed documents, which said that he was a qualified physician.

But an awful change has come over "Doc." There is something wrong. He doesn't look right. He is the same long, loose-jointed, stoop-shouldered, giant that he was when he figured in the police court case, when he made the statement that consumption was merely a bunch of worms which attacked the lungs, and which dropped dead at the first whiff of his gas, from a silver tank made of 20 different chemicals. (This was where the marvellous medical man roped in five bucks.) Yes there is something wrong. He has shaved off that beautiful moustache.

Pelletier recently returned from Sudbury, in fact he only arrived in Ottawa the day before yesterday. The first thing he did was to single out Pauquet and have him arrested.

The case was set over till Monday by Magistrate Gayette.

A DRAMATIC STORY POWERFULLY TOLD

Few, if any, of the Biblical plays have had a life of more than two or three seasons. The fact that Clarence Bennett's "The Holy City," after four years of growing success, is, to-day, a stronger attraction than ever, and that its return dates are greeted everywhere with crowded houses, proves that it has in it something of real and powerful dramatic worth, outside of its religious interest. It is not mere curiosity to see a play out of the ordinary, a sort of dramatic innovation, that causes the great public to go to see it again and again, and that makes each one who has seen it, an enthusiastic advertiser for it. The real reason for this is, that, outside of the fact that it narrates the most dramatic and thrilling incidents in the history of the world, a story that is inwoven with the very fibres of our faith and our hopes for time and eternity, it tells that story with such an earnest, devout and reverential spirit that it disarms the criticism of the most religious and, at the same time, develops that grandly tragic theme in such a powerful and dramatic way, giving such splendid opportunities for superb acting, telling so vividly the story of a beautiful, passionate, willful woman's love, hate, revenge, remorse and triumph, presenting it all with such life-like surroundings of beautiful Oriental scenery, gorgeous costumes and splendid stage settings and dramatic climaxes and wonderful stage mechanism, that, aside from its religious interest, it stands alone upon its dramatic merits as one of the greatest, strongest, most thrilling and interesting dramas of modern times. The beauty of its language, scintillating with gems of eloquence and poetic expression, its wonderful portrayals of character and expression, running the entire scale of human emotions from laughter to tears, from mirth to horror, from hope to despair, from love to hate, from joy to death. These all appeal directly to the heart and make us forget that it is only a play. To us for the time being, it becomes a living reality. With a large and powerful cast of excellent actors, most gorgeous costumes, elaborate and beautiful scenery and surroundings, it is a real play. Mr. Bennett, himself, will appear here in the dual role of John the Baptist and Judas, supported by Edna Marshall in the characterization of Salome.

Grand Opera House one night only, Wednesday, April 20th.

W. Stapleton has been appointed western agent of the C.N.R. steamship company.

HAMILTON FIRM GETS CONTRACT

For the Erection of Little Bob Bridge at Bobcaygeon

Lindsay, April 14.—A joint meeting of representatives from Victoria and Peterborough county councils was held this morning for the purpose of awarding the contract for the erection of the Little Bob bridge at Bobcaygeon. The Hamilton Bridge Manufacturing Co. secured the contract, and it is expected the structure will be undertaken at once.

Those present were Warden Tate, of Dunsford; Reeve Byng, of Bobcaygeon, and Reeve Cornell, of Emily, representing Victoria county; and Warden F. Mosier, Reeve C. J. Darling of Dummer; Reeve C. Cohen, of Galway, representing Peterborough county.

The new level bridge will be constructed across the Little Bob just east of Bobcaygeon in the township of Verulam. It will be remembered this is a boundary bridge in law, if not in fact, a legislative enactment having be settled a long standing source of trouble between the two counties in the proportion of three-quarters and one-quarter respectively. The bridge, having become dilapidated, it is found necessary to build a new structure and it is proposed to build a level bridge, reducing it to two spans, and further filling in the approaches at either end.

The government was asked to contribute a portion of the cost on the grounds that the raising of the waters for canal navigation purposes had increased the length and deepened the necessary fill, and consequently increased the cost of the structure.

OBITUARY

LATE ANDREW ROBERTSON.

On Monday, April 11th, death claimed an old resident of Otonabee in the person of Mr. Andrew Robertson at the advanced age of seventy-five years, after a lingering illness of several years.

The late Mr. Robertson was the son of the late James Robertson, who came to Otonabee as a pioneer settler from Scotland.

The deceased leaves to mourn his loss his wife, one brother, William, of Otonabee; one sister, Mrs. J. B. Pife, of Iowa, and five children, viz., James, Mrs. John Dickson, George, Mrs. S. A. Smithson, and Elizabeth, all of Otonabee.

The funeral on Wednesday, which was largely attended, was conducted by Rev. D. D. Macdonald, of Keene. Interment took place at Westwood cemetery.

REGRET LOSING MR. GILCHRIST

Quebec Ministerial Association Passes Resolution About New Secretary of Peterboro' Y.M.C.A.

The "Quebec Chronicle" in a recent issue makes reference to the following resolution of the Ministerial Association of Quebec city, which was carried unanimously at a largely attended session of that body by members and others.

"Resolved, that the members of the Quebec Ministerial Association place on record their appreciation of the life and work of Mr. H. M. Gilchrist during his three years' residence in Quebec city as secretary of the Y.M.C.A. As a member of the Association Mr. Gilchrist has given a number of valuable papers which were practical and helpful. He has faithfully assumed all the duties which were apportioned to him, giving able service by song and speech at special meetings and public gatherings, and willingly doing anything to aid the ministers of the different churches. In his own work, as secretary of the Y.M.C.A., he has labored with untiring zeal, and with sincere Christian devotion to bring the men and boys to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, and to enlist them to yield a life service to the Kingdom. In his Bible classes among men and boys, and his lectures on "Teaching" to the Sunday school teachers, Mr. Gilchrist has sown much good seed, which in due time will yield a rich harvest. The members of the Association regret the loss of Mr. Gilchrist to our city, but humbly pray that (in (his new field of labor he shall be sustained and owned of God with much work."

Mr. Gilchrist has been appointed General Secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. and will arrive from Quebec to take charge on or before the first of May.

FORT WILLIAM WILL HAVE A NEW Y.M.C.A.

The first tangible step towards the erection of the proposed $50,000 Y.M.C.A. building in Fort William, was made at a meeting of the board of directors, held last night in the Y.M.C.A. rooms.

By unanimous vote, the board decided to purchase a site at the corner of Archibald and Myles street. The lot has 100 feet frontage, and it will cost $7,500. It is only about a block from Syndicate avenue, and is convenient to the Arena rink.

General Secretary G. H. Williamson said that there was little doubt that the building will be erected next year. A campaign for funds will be made this fall.—Fort William Times-Journal.

To Reside at Lakefield

Mr. John McGrath moved his family from Peterborough to Lakefield on Monday last, and took up his residence on Bridge street, next door to Dr. Gibson. Mr. McGrath's business has increased to such an extent that he decided to become a permanent resident of the village.—Lakefield News.

SPORTING NOTES

Toronto won an eleven-innings game at Worchester by a 2—1 score.

Chicago White Sox took the first game of the season from St. Louis yesterday, Smith gave but one hit, and only one St. Louis player reached the middle bag.

Del Mason will be carried by the Toronto Leafs for a trial.

Jim Barry received his fifth defeat at the hands of Sam Langford yesterday at Los Angeles. It was the ninth time the two men have met. The fight went sixteen rounds.

There is something new in the local baseball situation. There does not seem to be any stampede of teams for admission into the town league.—Lindsay Post.

THE RING

A letter from Sydney, Australia, which has travelled since Feb. 28th, was received by Billy Allen, of Ottawa, on Tuesday from Hugh D. McIntosh, who promotes all the big fistic carnivals there. Tommy Burns, the man who beat Bill Lang on Monday, is a great friend of Allen, and ever since Burns has been in Australia he has been boosting the little Ottawa fighter.

Efforts are being made to have Billy take a trip to the Pacific coast and to Australia next winter.

LAWN BOWLING

That beautiful piece of property, the haunt of the members of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club, at the corner of Brock and Aylmer street, is fast assuming an appearance that looks as though there might be an opening day in the near future. Mr. W. Grey is again in charge. All regular members and prospective ones, are reminded that the secretary has a receipt book from which he would like to make distributions.

FOOTBALL

Nothing has definitely taken place in regard to the Bankers' association football team, but an interesting practice was conducted last evening. A meeting for the final organization will be called in the course of a few days and no doubt a team will be selected. It is expected a game will be arranged for the 24th of May between the locals and the Peterborough bankers.—Lindsay Post.

RUGBY

For the first time in ten of fifteen years the Ottawa Rugby Football Club finds itself free from all financial encumberances and will start the season next fall with a surplus close to $1,000. Last year the gross receipts of the club amounted to over $7,000, the largest year in the history of the game in the Capital.

BASEBALL

All P.A.C players and any wishing to have a game of ball are requested to be at the ball field opposite Park street church, on Saturday, at 2 p. m.

Y.W.C.A. TENNIS

There will be a meeting this evening at the Young Women's Christian Association rooms for the purpose of organizing a Y.W.C.A. tennis club for the summer. Every girl interested, whether a member of the association or not, is earnestly invited to attend this meeting this evening. There is a fine tennis court on the grounds at the Y.W.C.A., and it is hoped that a tennis club can be formed for this year. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock.

THE TURF

The Racing Situation

The Toronto News says, editorially: A sharp distinction must be drawn between racing as a sport and racing as a business. Already a large body of public opinion, hostile to the evils which cling about the business of racing, has exerted a strong pressure in Parliament. Mr. Miller never would have been able to command such strong support for his bill if this had not been the case. The bill was so sweeping in its provisions, so thorough-going, that it awakened the fears of the Minister of Justice. That explains its rejection. If the proposed legislation had been more moderate, it would have passed the House of Commons easily.

"Playing the races" has grown to extraordinary proportions. In Canada an army of men, mainly young, are engaged daily in handing their money to the hand-book men and the pool-rooms. This is the evil side of racing, and is the direct result of the protracted meets at some of the less important tracks. In Canada the Windsor and Fort Erie races have become notorious. So bitter is the public feeling against these tracks, which, plainly, are gambling rather than sporting institutions, that the racing men have won in Ottawa only a Pyrrhic victory. Most of them see clearly, moreover, that, unless some concession is made to public sentiment, the House of Commons may be more ardent next year, and, in rooting out racing, the business, may irretrievably damage racing, the sport.

Accordingly, the directors of the Montreal, Toronto and Hamilton Jockey Clubs will limit the meets to eight days each. Moreover, pressure has been brought to bear on the Fort Erie and Windsor authorities to compel them to do likewise. The day of continuous racing is done. The public will not have it, and the managers of the Fort Erie and Windsor clubs will be wise if they realize this fact. One week out of the fifty-two is ample if racing is considered as a sport, and not as the convenient excuse for the activities of an army of professional gamblers. The Canadian Racing Association has issued already an ultimatum to Windsor and Fort Erie. If they persist in the continuous performances which have caused so much trouble in the past, they will be no longer members of the association, and, assuredly, they will face serious trouble in Parliament next session.

Shooting

Teams 4, 5, 6 and 7, in the officers' shooting competition will shoot at the armories to-morrow night. The personel of the teams is:—

No. 4—Capts. Cloxton and McWilliams, Lieuts. Kelly, Gammell and Lech.

No. 5—Capts. Watt, Walker and J. H. Eastwood, Lieuts. Clarke and Backham.

No. 6—Capt. Medd, Majors Hall and Davey, Capts. Langfeldt and Clarry, Lieut. Duffus.

No. 7—Major Young, Capts. Ackerman and Sherwood, Lieuts. Learyl, Elliott and Rogers.

Frank Stockton and Poetry.

Frank Stockton never could write a successful poem. In this connection the novelist frequently told a good story on himself. In his youth in conjunction with his brother John he wrote many poems, with which he afflicted the editors of various Canadian periodicals. The effusions always came back. The editor of one magazine was an especial target of the Stocktons, but as none of their poems was ever accepted the brothers came to the conclusion that the editor had no conception of good poetry. To prove their belief they bunted up and dispatched to him an ode, little known, by Milton. Within two days they received a check and a letter of thanks "I came to the conclusion that that editor knew poetry when he saw it after all," Mr. Stockton used to say, "and gave up trying to write it."

Heart Protectors.

"Curiosity is not my weak point," said the tailor. "Nevertheless I can't help wondering about some of my customers, especially those who order little metal disks padded into the left side of their coats and vests. Several of them do that—have been doing it for years. The natural inference is that they count on being shot at some time, and they take that precaution to protect the heart. But what I should really like to know is what they have done to make anybody want to shoot them. Apparently they are inoffensive, law abiding citizens, but there must have been a time when they were regular daredevils and laid the foundation of an enmity that they expect to wind up some day in a shooting scrap."—New York Press.

His Mistake.

There once appeared at the back door of a house a tramp who to the mistress of the place related a pathetic story of his troubles. This tale, however, did not greatly move the matter of fact woman, for she remarked tryly:

"That's the same story I had from the last bobo that passed."

"Indeed!" said the tramp. "Then, madam, I perceive that I have been unwise not to have had my history copyrighted."—Judge.

Good Advice.

"Help! Help!" came the cry of distress through the midnight stillness.

The policeman in the neighboring doorway stirred uneasily. "Advertise in the want column," he muttered and resumed his nap.—Philadelphia Press.

THE WOOING OF MISS PRISCILLA.

Sam'l Wasn't Too Sick to Take Advantage of the Opportunity.

By CARRIE HUNT LOTTA.

As she drew near to a small house which was built well back from the road Miss Priscilla glanced at it with pretended indifference. Then she looked closer, stopped and looked again.

"How shet up Sam'l Clayton's house do look! Mebby he's went away. Mebby he's went west. He said he would ef I didn't marry him. But, law me, that was years an' years ago, an' ef he'd ben goin' he'd 'a' went long ago. Mebby he's sick an' all by hisself! I wouldn't live on a byroad fer a duer farm 'n this of Sam'l's."

She took a few steps farther, then stopped. There was a determined look on her face.

"It ain't proper fer a lone wummin ter go fer the house of a lone man, but I ain't goin' ter stop fer that ner nothin' else when they's a prospec' of Sam'l Clayton bein' sick with nobody ter complain ter."

She walked briskly up the lane which led to the little house. The blinds were drawn and the front gate was closed. The barnyard gate hung open, and the chickens wandered about the dooryard disconsolately, while out in the shed the cow lowed piteously.

"No tellin' when that cow's ben milked er how long she's ben shet up without feed an' water. Somethin's happened. I hope—oh, I do hope—it ain't nothin' awful. Sam'l's 'bout the only friend I've got here'bouts, an' ef he was ter die"—

She had to wipe the tears from her eyes before she knocked.

There was no answer. Her breath came fast. She knocked again.

"What yo' want?" The voice was decidedly cross.

"Sam'l Clayton, is they anything the matter?"

"Nothin'," he answered grimly, "'ceptin' I'm flat on my back an' ain't able ter git up."

The door flew open, and Miss Priscilla entered.

"I know I ain't doin' the proper thing, Sam'l, so don't be castin' up nothing', but— My goodness, Sam'l, yo're as yaller as gold."

"That's comfortin', Percilly."

"Yo've got yaller janders, I reckon. I don't blame yo' none fer not wantin' ter git up. When I had 'em I couldn't turn over in bed."

"I do want ter git up, but I can't, Percilly."

"Don't yo' be cross, Sam'l. They ain't no call fer it. I'm sorry fer yo', awful sorry, an', though it ain't the thing, I'm goin' ter stay here an' red things up some. Then I'll git word to yer brother Robert. Air yo' thirsty, Sam'l?"

He nodded.

"An' hungry?"

He put out his tongue at her and made a wry face.

"No; I reckon yo' ain't hungry, but yo're weak fer somethin' ter eat, an' yo'll git it right soon."

She went into the kitchen, and Samuel heard her muttering and talking to herself. She put her head in at the door.

"Is that glass there on the table the only one yo've got, Sam'l?"

"I'm the only one ter use a glass, Percilly, an' I never bev cump'ny."

"What's it got in it anyhow?"

"Ginger tea, Percilly."

Miss Priscilla picked the glass up and smelled of the contents.

"Phfew! Sakes alive, I s'pose yo fixed it?"

Miss Priscilla disappeared, taking the glass with her. She soon returned with a glass of sparkling cold water.

Miss Priscilla straightened the sheet, put clean cases on the pillows, opened the windows and put the room in order. Samuel's face brightened as he watched her.

"Got anything 'bout the house ter eat, Sam'l?" she asked presently.

"Things as aplle easy is hangin' in the well, an' the rest of the things is in the cellar, Percilly."

Miss Priscilla fed the chickens, milked the cow and turned her into the pasture. When she returned she put the milk away, then entered the room again, bringing a cup of hot broth.

"It ain't cooked 'nough, Sam'l, but it won't do fer yo' to go any longer with a imply stummick. Eat some."

She propped him up in bed, and he did as he was bidden.

"That's the first good broth I've e't sence mother died."

"I don't doubt that, Sam'l. Yo're the porest 'xcuse fer a housekeeper I ever seen. The whole house is awful. I ain't s'prised yo're sick. I'd be dead."

"It ain't my fault as I'm my own housekeeper, Percilly Blake," he answered significantly.

She flushed red.

"Well, I see plain as I'll bev to go an' leave yo' by yourself an' not wait fer yer brother ter come. Don't make matters unproperer than they air a'ready."

"My, but yo' air b'hind the times! Brother moved ter Ioway five weeks ago comin' Thursday."

"They's other maybers, Sam'l," she snapped.

All the rest of the day she watched for a passing vehicle that she might call its occupant and send for some one to look after Samuel. Toward evening she grew uneasy. She had refused to talk to Samuel for some time, as he would talk of personal matters, but now she turned to him anxiously.

"Sam'l, I can't bear ter leave yo' by yo'rself ag'in teruight."

"I guess I won't die of yo're anxious ter go, Percilly."

"I ain't anxious ter go, an' yo' know it."

"Then stay an' let folks talk ef they want ter."

"I can't 'ford ter do that, Sam'l."

Then there was another long silence. Miss Priscilla looked down the road anxiously, finally going down to the gate to see if she could get a glimpse of any one.

"He might git worse in the night," she murmured to herself. "I never was so put out in all my life."

Samuel looked into her eyes as she came in.

"See anybody?" he asked.

She shook her head.

"Percilly, w'y, say, do yo' 'member what I asked yo' once?"

She made no reply and looked steadily down the road.

"Well," he went on, "them's still my feelin's."

She shaded her eyes as if to see better and did not answer.

"W'y, Percilly, say, ef I'm not dead by mornin', won't yo' hook up old Kit to the buggy an' drive over fer the preacher an' fetch him over an' bev 'im marry yo' an' me?"

Miss Priscilla sprang to her feet. Her face was crimson with anger.

"Sam'l Clayton, ain't yo' 'shamed ter insult me in yo'r own house? Do yo' think that's what I come over here fer? Shame on yo'!"

And, covering her face, she burst into tears.

"Fer the Lord's sake, Cilly, now don't do that! I wouldn't 'a' made yo' cry fer this farm. Course yo' didn't come here fer that. I've been wantin' ter say this howsumever, even sence I said it that time so long ago. But yo' know yo' wouldn't ever let me talk 'bout it. I'm lovin' yo' all this time, an', Percilly, yo' jest can't know how lonesome I am."

Miss Priscilla wiped her eyes and looked at him.

"That broth made yo' a heap better, didn't it, Sam'l?"

"A heap better," he answered smilingly.

"Well, yo're well 'nough ter leave by yo'rself, ain't yo'?"

"The 'xcitement of yer goin' away would upset me, I'm shore."

"Anyhow I'm goin', Sam'l."

"Yo' ain't give me no answer to that question, Cilly. A 'Yes,' said good an' strong, would cure me."

"I'm goin' home an' do the milkin' an' feed the chickens an' do the chores."

"I hate ter stay by myself 'nother night, that I do. I had such a uncomfortable night las' night."

"Yo' pore man!" she said kindly. "Well, as I was sayin', I'll go home an' do the chores, an' while I'm there I'll change my dress. I think I'll hook up old Belle—I ain't ust ter Kit—an' I'll send Bob Caldron over ter stay with yo' while I'm away. I'll bev his wife come too. They'll do fer witnesses, yo' know."

"Do yo' mean yo're going ter bev me, Percilly?" he asked eagerly.

"I reckon I do," she answered, fingering her sunbonnet.

"Cilly, they's one thing I wish yo'd give me 'fore yo' start, somethin' ter keep up my strength till yo' git back."

He looked at her wistfully.

"More beef tea, Sam'l?" she asked, but there was a twinkle in her eyes.

"Yo' know better—somethin' I asked yo' fer an' tried ter steal long time ago."

She hesitated for an instant, then leaned over and kissed him.

How Glaciers Are Formed.

The joint cause of glaciers is precipitation and cold. A low temperature alone can do nothing without moisture, and this fact quickly disposes of the popular notion that glaciers invariably exist in cold countries. Tibet, for instance, and some parts of North America are destitute of ice springs, though eternal cold may be said to reign supreme in those parts. Imagine for a moment the higher mountains clear of snow and ice and then watch for the formation of a glacier. Snow falls and fills up all the valleys and gullies, avalanches descend from the higher parts, and a great accumulation gathers in all hollows. By constant repetition of snowfalls (always provided a greater quantity is deposited than can be melted by the sun's rays and by the natural warmth of the earth's crust) great pressure is put upon the lower portions by the superincumbent accumulation, and, aided by the infiltration of water and refreezing, a large body of ice is formed, which at once begins to move down the valleys containing it.

Why Snow Is White?

The pure white luster of snow is due to the fact that all the elementary colors of light are blended together in the radiance thrown off from the surface of the crystal. It is quite possible to examine the individual snow crystals in such a way as to detect these several colors before they are mingled together to constitute the compound impression of whiteness upon the eye. The soft whiteness of the snow is also in some degree attributable to the large quantity of air entangled amid the frozen particles. Snow is composed of a great number of minute crystals, more than a thousand distinct forms of which have been enumerated by various observers. These crystals and prisms reflect all the compound rays of which white light consists. Sheets of snow on the ground are known to reflect beautiful pink and blue tints under certain angles of sunshine and to fling back so much light as to be painful to the eyes.

PHONE TRADE DROPS OFF.

Women Discover It is Cheaper to Go to the Grocer's in Person.

One effect of the talk about the increased cost of living has been to lessen the telephone trade of the grocers and to bring customers often face to face with the grocer himself. Housewives under stress of real or fancied necessity for economizing take an hour in the morning for marketing.

Clerk No. 23, who for years perhaps has called up every morning a score of houses and taken orders from mistress or maid, begins to know the faces of customers whose voices alone he had known before. No. 23, being properly devoted to the interests of his employer, has had the habit of naming to his twenty customers on the wire the best and most expensive articles of the season. Now and then when a particularly large wholesale order of perishable stuff had to be hustled out quickly No. 23 told of bargains and thus kept up the fiction that he had the customers' best interest at heart, but No. 23 always knew well enough that too earnest a devotion to the interests of the customer would shorten his term of usefulness with his employer.

Nowadays customers belonging to the telephone trade are hearing of things that No. 23 never so much as hinted at. For example, they have learned of entirely edible fish at one-third the prices quoted glibly by No. 23 every Friday morning—rabbits at two for a quarter, quite good enough for an occasional family luncheon; of excellent apples at a good deal less than $1.50 a dozen and now and then of a Saturday of game and other delicacies at ridiculously low prices.

Meanwhile the competition between the frugal folk, who have always done their marketing in person, and the telephone trade, that has just learned the trick, is slowly boosting bargain prices of the grocers. As to No. 23, his work is doubling up because he could wait on two or three of the telephone trade while one careful buyer looked about for bargains.

GROCERS GEORGE STREET

Milady's Mirror

The average woman has neither the time nor inclination to make an elaborate bedtime toilet, but there are essentials which no woman can afford to neglect not only for present use, but to circumvent Father Time and to make us physically attractive members of society.

A prime factor in encouraging and retaining health and good looks is body cleanliness.

The amount of soil accumulated in a single day when our work takes us into the big cities is remarkable, as evinced by a single experience.

It is sometimes a source of annoyance to perform little duties for ourselves when we are tired, and yet a woman is amply repaid by her fresh, well groomed appearance in the morning. Furthermore, it is a great saving of time if she must needs be off early the next day and cannot indulge in a leisurely morning toilet.

The daily bath is advised to all women who are physically strong enough to stand it. Not more than from five to ten minutes should be consumed in the bath. A quick sponge off in salt water or a shower in cold water makes a splendid tonic and bracer. One or two warm baths at night will keep one reasonably clean at least.

Where a warm bath is found too stimulating at night to prevent sleep it should then be taken in the morning or late afternoon, but in each case a cold sponge off should be taken to close the pores and prevent taking cold.

Where a body bath is not taken at night a warm foot bath will be found very grateful to tired and painful feet. It is very restful and draws the blood from the brain, inducing sleep.

Before starting the night toilet remove all binding clothing and slip on a long kimono and bedroom slippers, those without heels, as Turkish ones or sandals.

Relax as much as possible, especially when inclined to be nervous, for when the tension is taken off the nerves these little preliminaries tend to make one quite sleepy.

Several details of the toilet may be performed at the same time. For example, remove all pins from the hair and when false pieces are worn brush and comb these out and lay before an open window to thoroughly air. Shake out the hair thoroughly and spread it over the shoulders to ventilate and rest the roots.

When a foot bath is desired it is a good plan to take it at this point, so that two things may progress at the same time. When one is not hurried five minutes' relaxation may be indulged in. Be sure you sit in your most comfortable rocker while the night toilet is progressing.

Look to the Ways of Your Mouth.

If you haven't given your mouth much thought study it a bit. See if the expression of it has all the charm it might have. Try to catch yourself off guard some time in your mirror. You may be surprised to find your lips framed in cold, peevish or discontented lines. Keep them in good condition, red and glowing with health and not roughened and chapped with wind and cold.

See to it that your teeth are in as good condition as a dentist or dental surgery can put them. Don't pout, don't screw your mouth to one side when talking, don't purse up the lips, don't close them so tight that they positively look savage.

Cultivate a calm, pleasant, cheerful expression without a perpetual smile.

Add to your charm and power of pleasing in every legitimate way you can, for you are thus adding to your pleasures, your happiness and your success in life.

Beautiful Hands.

Mrs. Jamieson, the well known authoress, was a great admirer of beautiful hands and thus expressed herself on her favorite "point" in a woman.

"A white hand," she wrote, "is a very desirable ornament, and a hand can never be white unless it be kept clean, nor is this all, for if a young lady excels her companions in this respect she must keep her hands in constant motion, which will cause the blood to circulate freely and have a wonderful effect. The motion recommended is working at her needle, brightening her house and making herself as useful as possible in the performance of all domestic duties."

Hair Hint.

If a woman is troubled with a hideous growth of superfluous hair and if electrolysis is impossible for her the tweezers are safer than depilatories, for the reason that these powders remove the soft, downy growth as well as the long hair and the undeveloped hairs come back in the form of bristles. No woman should go about burdened with such an affliction. The cure is certain when the electric needle is used. Flat moles can be taken away by applying acetic acid. Protect the white skin about the blemish by anointing with vaseline or a good cream.

Major-Gen. Benson of the British army is in Winnipeg, arranging for cavalry mounts.

The "Chemics" of Bread

LET us look a bit into the chemistry of bread.

For we want our bread not only to seem good but we want it to actually be good. And as bread is a question of flour and flour a question of wheat we see that wheat is where we have to begin.

Gluten, starch, water and phosphates, are the principal component qualities of wheat. And in proportion as these qualities are more or less present is the wheat more or less valuable so far as nutrition is concerned.

The nutritive and bread-making qualities of wheat are the things that make it more valuable than rye or oats or barley or corn as a human food.

The quality of nutrition, too, is what makes one brand of flour more valuable than another.

If it were not for nutrition and bread-making qualities any flour would be as good as any other. We wouldn't have to care whether it was made from good wheat or poor wheat, from Spring wheat or Winter, from all wheat or part other cereals.

A chemist will tell you that "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" is richer in high quality gluten than flour made from low grades of wheat. And for that reason it is better for food, hence more valuable than ordinary flour.

And actual tests in your kitchen will tell you that it produces more and larger loaves to the barrel than ordinary soft wheat or blended flour, the reason being that flour made from hard Red Fyfe wheat is more expansive and more absorbent.

Royal Household Flour

There is no mystery about the superiority of "Royal Household". It is a plain, common-sense proposition that flour made from the finest hard wheat in the world and scientifically milled must produce the finest bread in the world. And it does. Try it. Prove it. 10

New Sport of Flying.

Operating an aeroplane is easier than riding a bicycle or steering an automobile. In driving on the road you attention is required constantly to be fixed upon the paths or ruts in which the vehicle must be guided, for the slightest inattention would cause serious trouble. Guiding an aeroplane is like riding a bicycle in the center of an immense asphalt plaza where the surface is perfectly smooth and uniform and where you can go in every direction equally well without serious attention as to where you must steer. In the air all is free, and the movements become so unconscious that the aviator's mind sometimes wanders off until he almost forgets that he is in an aeroplane. One can look down on the ground and notice various things but it is very hard to tell how high you may be flying or the exact angle of sight of the machine or its speed. Country Life in America.

"The Queen of the Savannah River."

Travelers going south by way of Savannah are always attracted by some such exclamation as "The queen is waving at us!" as the steamer glides into the Savannah river from the Atlantic. Nobody seems to know the real name of this unusual woman, as she is always called "the queen." The romance is that years ago, when she was young, she had a lover who went to sea. She promised to greet him on his return, waving a handkerchief if by day, a lantern if by night. He never came back, and for more than thirty years "the queen" has greeted every steamer that has sailed up the Savannah river, waving a handkerchief by day, a lantern by night. It is said that she never misses a boat at no matter what hour it may pass her home. All the navigators know about "the queen," and they never fail to salute her when passing.—Collier's Weekly.

To Clean Plaster.

When plaster casts become soiled with either rust or finger marks make a creamy solution of dry starch and cold water and apply it with a soft brush, carefully wetting all crevices and depressions. Set the cast aside to dry, then remove the starch with a stiff brush, and it will look as if fresh from the studio.—Harper's Bazar.

SPLENDID LOT OF HORSES SHIPPED FROM PETERBOROUGH

A shipment of horses containing some of the best specimens of the equine species ever sent out of this city went forward from Peterborough to Toronto this afternoon. There were thirty-six animals in the shipment and they were purchased throughout the county by Mr. C. Percy Pearson, of the Repository, Toronto, who has the reputation of being a shrewd buyer, but one who is willing to pay the price when he runs across a horse that suit him. The horses shipped from here were matched teams and were about evenly divided between heavy draught and carriage. There wasn't a poor one in the lot and some of them were magnificent specimens.

"There is a strong demand for good horses in almost every class," said Mr. Pearson to the Review. "If a little more attention were paid to feeding there would be many more good horses in the country. The reason one farmer receives more money than his neighbor when selling a horse is he knows how to feed. For a well fed horse I will pay from $50 to $75 more than for one that has not been cared for properly."

Some of the draught teams cost Mr. Pearson $600, and more than that was paid for some of the carriage pairs.

CRUSADE AGAINST CONSUMPTION

The Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis has issued the following statement:—

The year 1909 will be marked in the calendar as a red letter year in the history of the crusade against consumption. The movement received a great impulse from the congress of distinguished physicians which was held in Washington, U.S., in the autumn of 1908 to consider the further measures to be taken to stamp out this dreadful enemy to the life and happiness of mankind.

Canada, in common with the rest of North America, perhaps we should say, the whole civilized world, has participated in the renewed and increased activity which resulted from the deliberations of the congress.

Never since the organization of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis has there been such activity displayed in Canada in this fight for life. Older branch associations have been reinvigorated, new associations have been formed which are showing in many cases a vigorous activity. Several new institutions for the relief and treatment of consumptives have been opened and the demand for our literature has been larger than ever. Take it all in all 1909 was a year of great progress in the work of the Association.

The tenth annual meeting will be held in Montreal on the 9th of June next, and preparations are being made to make this one of the best if not the best meeting in the history of the Association.

GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCES INCREASE IN TIMBER DEALS

Hon. Frank Cochrane Makes an Announcement—Licensees Are to Pay Fire-Ranging—Arrangement Stands For the Next Ten Years.

Toronto, April 16.—An announcement of great importance was made last evening by Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Crown Lands, in an official statement of an increase in timber dues.

Taken in conjunction with the announcement early this week by Premier Gouin of a protectionist policy in pulpwood, it is thought that the "cat is out of the bag" as to the real meaning of the conference some weeks ago in Toronto between the members of the two provincial Cabinets.

The province has decided, in view of the fact that there has been no increase in the dues on "old limits" for 23 years, to raise the dues on pine saw logs from $1 to $1.50 per thousand feet (board measure); square timber, from $20 to $50 per thousand cubic feet, and hemlock by 25 cents per thousand feet, board measure. Ground rent, which was raised from $2 to $3 per mile, twenty-three years ago, is now to be advanced to $5. The transfer fee will be raised from $1 to $5 a mile.

These rates are fixed for ten years. The licensees will also have to pay the whole cost of fire ranging, instead of half, though the Government retains an authority over the men engaged.

The statement begins: "The Government has had under consideration the question of sharing in the increment of value that has taken place in the stumpage value of timber on lands which have been under license for long periods.

"We have recognized that any increases made should be considered in all their bearings—that is their effect upon the trade as well as upon the revenues of the province—and after getting all the information and listening to the representations of those interested, we have determined upon certain increases which, while they will bring in a substantial increase in timber revenue, will not, in our opinion, prove injurious to or embarrass the interests of the lumber trade."

According to the last annual report of the Department of Crown Lands for the last fiscal year, the total revenue from woods and forests for ten months was $885,892.44, consisting of bonus, $285,571.41; timber dues, $529,422.50; ground rent, $68,528.53; transfer fees, $2,370. The revenue from timber dues, being for ten months only (ending Oct. 31, 1909), is small as compared with amounts appearing in previous reports. The explanation is that the accounts for the previous season's cutting were not collected, as they do not accrue due until the 1st December following the winter in which the cutting took place. The bonus consists of deposits made on account of the sale held last September.

The fire-ranging on licensed territory as heretofore has been conducted by men selected by the timber licensees. The number of rangers on licensed lands was 450, costing $66,114.71, the licensees paying the expense of fire ranging on their limits.

The report concluded: "The lumber trade is in a better condition because there is an increased demand and an advance in prices. What effect the tariff legislation of the United States will have when applied remains to be seen. The output for the season of 1909-10 is estimated to be from sixty to one hundred millions in excess of last year."

Toronto, April 16.—Word has been received by the Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, that his son Clark is now out of danger.

BALFOUR'S NEW POLICY

Would Have Imperial Wheat Admitted Free—New Platform.

London, April 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Replying to a letter from a Unionist M.P., Mr. Balfour says: "Wheat grown within the limits of the Empire should be imported free. This policy will, I believe, commend itself to the judgment of the British community and will certainly be received with favor by the colonies."

Mr. Balfour's announcement is regarded as likely to have an effect on the industrial constituencies in the next elections. The free trade view, however, is not to tax colonial corn and is not to affect the price of bread, as three-fifths of the corn is imported from foreign exporters, who would raise the price to pay the duty. Colonial and British farmers would do likewise to make extra profits, so the statement will not prevent the cry of the "little loaf."

The morning Post, the organ of advanced tariff reforms, determinedly disagrees with the Unionist leader's new policy, and hopes the agricultural members and candidates will stick to their guns in the matter of pledging themselves to fight when the time comes for fair play to home agriculture.

Winston Churchill has received a large sum for the purpose of a free trade campaign and is arranging 2,500 special lectures in the next twelve months by distinguished men, including Lords Avebury and Brassey.

GOVERNMENT MUST KEEP THE CONTROL

Toronto, April 16.—The International Waterways Commission yesterday heard further argument in respect to the application of the St. Lawrence Power Co. for permission to dam the Long Sault for the development of electrical energy.

G. Lynch-Staunton, K.C., of Hamilton presented the objections of the Ontario Government, while representatives from the Town of Morrisburg and the Townships of Williamsburg and Matilda were also present.

"We say," said Mr. Staunton, "that while private companies may be allowed to take power from the river, no private company should be allowed to have one dollar of proprietary interest in any dam of any work constructed in the river."

Commissioners Haskell and Clinton of the American section nodded their agreement with Mr. Staunton's plea, which was made in answer to Chairman Gibbons' statement that the commission is dealing with no definite plan but with the abstract question of allowing the construction of the dam.

Mr. Staunton pointed out that in the Niagara River last year eminent engineers thought it would be quite safe to allow the Ontario Power Co. to construct a dam in that river, but that the construction of such a dam resulted in an ice jam, which seriously endangered valuable property and almost wiped out the property of the power company along the river.

COMPANY IS AT LAST INCORPORATED

Ottawa, April 16.—The St. Lawrence Power Transmission Co. Bill was given its third reading last night, after a division upon an amendment by Major Sharpe (North Ontario) that it be referred back to committee to insert a clause that nothing in the bill should revive any powers which may have lapsed under the St. Lawrence Power Co. Act of 1901.

Major Currie rose to move the six months' hoist, but the Speaker ruled that the bill had been given a third reading. The bill has been amended almost beyond recognition.

The Earl of Essex and Lord Tenderden, representing English capital, are behind the scheme, and are expected here within ten days.

FOURTEEN ARE KILLED

Four Toronto Men Are Among the Dead at Bagotville

Bagotville, Que., April 16.—A premature explosion caused a landslide of 75,000 cubic feet of earth and rock here Thursday afternoon, which crashed down upon the camp of the Ha Ha Railway, and buried twenty men. Seven have been taken from the ruins, six were found alive, and it is feared the remaining seven are dead.

The dead are Stanislaus Gagne and David Gagne, of Toronto, the former being the chief engineer of the work; Jennings and O'Brien, his partners, also from Toronto; an unknown Swede and two unknown laborers. Four of those rescued are believed to be injured fatally, Mr. Peterson, a Dane and two Swedes.

The accident occurred in a cut that was being made on the farm of Simon Larouche, three miles from here. A gang was busy blasting while the night gang was in camp. Fifty barrels of dynamite and 200 of powder had been prepared for the explosion. So far as can be learned the man who worked the battery did not give any warning before setting the blast, and the mass of earth swept down the cliff without warning upon the men asleep in the camp.

Stanislaus Gagne, was a member of the firm of Gagne & Jennings. H. has two brothers in Toronto, Henry Gagne and Paucide Gagne. He was only 31 years of age, and graduated from the School of Practical Science in 1901. He was engineer for a time for the Toronto and Niagara Power Company.

GAVE KITCHENER A CHEAP ROOM

New York, April 16.—Lord Kitchener was welcomed on his arrival yesterday by a committee of fifty from the Pilgrims' Society and by W. Butler Duncan, jr. Scores of persons at the station recognized him and he received an impromptu reception which surprised him.

Lord Kitchener and Mr. Duncan went to the Plaza Hotel, where a small apartment, opening on an inside court, giving a fine view of a brick wall, was assigned to the visitor. Mr. Duncan hurried back downstairs. The clerk said he never had heard of Lord Kitchener.

"He isn't looking for a cheap room," said Mr. Duncan.

Eventually Lord Kitchener was assigned to a large suite overlooking the park. He will go to West Point to-day.

THEY MUST NOT WORK ON SUNDAY

Victoria, B.C., April 16.—Attorney-General Bowser yesterday issued a fiat to the civic authorities of Vancouver to prosecute Charles C. Moore & Co., the San Francisco contractors engaged in the erection, principally with American labor, of the B. C. Electric Railway Co.'s new plant and 250-foot chimney stack in Vancouver, for violation of the Dominion of Canada Lord's Day Act.

Representations have been made to the Department that these contractors have been persistently and unnecessarily desecrating Sunday and the province will assist the city in securing a conviction, and the punishment of the offending firm. Incidentally, the case gains special interest as J. R. Moore, representative of Moore & Co. of Vanvouver, had retained as his legal advisers Bowser, Reid & Wallbridge, in which firm Attorney-General Bowser is senior partner.

DIED FROM HYDROPHOBIA IN NEW YORK

New York, April 16.—C. E. Pierce, veterinary surgeon, of Wellsville, N.Y., who applied for admission at Bellevue Hospital yesterday, saying that he feared he was about to be attacked by hydrophobia, died a few hours after his admission, with all the dymptoms of rabies.

Pierce, early last winter, removed a bone from the throat of a dog that afterwards died of hydrophobia. His hand was badly scratched during the operation.

He had enjoyed his usual health until Thursday, when, noting alarming symptoms, he consulted his physician, who advised him to hurry here and consult specialists. He was near a collapse on his arrival here yesterday.

He was taken to Bellevue, where the first paroxysms of hydrophobia attacked him within a few minutes after his arrival.

MILLER BILL PASSES AFTER NUMBER OF AMENDMENTS

Compromise Clauses Are Included in New Draft Which Gets its Third Reading in Commons—Hon. Mr. Aylesworth Explains Pardons.

Ottawa, April 16.—The Miller anti-race track gambling bill was given its third reading in the Commons last evening after amendment on the lines of the compromise announced.

Mr. Miller said that in accepting the modified bill a good deal was being gained. He was afraid that if a compromise had not been accepted people would have thought that the advocates of the bill were more anxious to win a fight than to place good legislation on the statute books. The compromise would do away with handbook making, pool rooms and the dissemination of racing tips, and would reduce the length of meetings to seven days, allowing associations to hold not more than two such meetings within twelve months.

Many of those who had opposed the bill were actuated by a sincere desire to make racing clean, and this had been a consideration in inclining him to accept the compromise. He did not accept the compromise offered previously because he did not like it. Much had been gained by not accepting it. The length of meetings had been cut down by one day. Then a clause in the first proposed compromise which permitted betting between individuals was drafted in such a way that the bookmaker might have been exempted. The advocates of the bill did not yet concede that it is right to allow the business of betting.

Mr. Miller denied that another bill would be introduced next year for more restrictions. There should be a reasonable time allowed to see how the new bill would work out in practice. Another bill would be introduced only when public opinion demanded it, and that would to a large extent depend on how the racing associations conducted their tracks.

Seconded by Mr. McColl, he then moved amendments to the original bill. R. L. Borden enquired if the amendments had been approved by the Minister of Justice, and Mr. Pardee, chief Liberal whip, said that they had.

Major Currie asked if the clause would prevent newspapers in Canada and elsewhere from publishing betting odds. Even The London Times published betting odds and came into Canada and was sold by newsdealers.

Hon. Jacques Bureau, Solicitor-General, said it was not his business to advise the House.

G. H. Cowan (Vancouver) thought some inducement ought to be held out to racing associations to limit the number of meetings. One meeting of ten days' duration once a year would be better than two meetings of seven days. David Henderson (Halton) favored the original bill.

Mr. Miller deprecated any further amendments. If the bill was not passed to-night it might not go through the Senate this session, and he was anxious that it should become law.

"I recommended that they be summarily released because, in my humble judgment, they were not guilty of the offence of which they were charged."

The Minister of Justice in the House yesterday morning thus completed his promised explanation of the release from prison of T. J. Skill and J. C. King of the Toronto Antiquarian Book Co., sentenced for circulating obscene literature calculated to corrupt morals.

"The prisoners," said the Minister, "were defended by two gentlemen, each of whom is a personal friend, quite as much so as Mr. Robinette. The gentlemen are George Tate Blackstock, K.C., of Toronto, and his partner, Hugh Rose."

Mr. Aylesworth said that he believed the men had been engaged in "the ordinary legitimate business of respectable book-selling, though in some of the translated French and Latin classics were passages which, if they were singled out, or collected and published together, might properly be described by the word indecent."

The Minister had been informed that the firm's stenographer had not, as was stated at the trial, resigned because of the improper character of work she was called upon to do. He had received letters asking for clemency from over 25 people, one of whom was a bank manager in Toronto, one a bishop of a Protestant church, three other prominent clergymen, one a leader in the Methodist church, and the others members of business concerns in Toronto.

He had also had the advantage of a personal discussion of the case with Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General for Ontario.

POLITICAL UPHEAVAL IN GERMANY

Berlin, April 16.—The National Liberals won a remarkable victory in the election of a successor to the late Count Udao Von Stolberg-Wernigerode who was president of the Reichstag at the time of his death on Feb. 19 last. This country district of East Prussia has been carried by the Conservatives practically without opposition in every election for forty years. In the election just held, Herr Kochan, the candidate for the National Liberals, was chosen with a majority of nearly 3,000.

The overturn is attributed to popular dissatisfaction over the Government's measure for finance reform and the Prussian election reform legislation.

MAY BE TROUBLE AT FORT WILLIAM

Fort William, Ont., April 16.—Monday will probably be a critical day in the situation at the C.P.R. freight docks, as the expected boats will begin to arrive and unload. There was considerable unrest Thursday when the Canadian Pacific took on 190 men, mostly English-speaking people.

A number of men have arrived from outside points and these are being housed in the Marine Hotel under the protection of C.P.R. police, and outside the danger zone. The Longshoremen's Union may take exception to some of the men thus brought in, as they have no cards.

A Calgary Tragedy.

Calgary, Alta., April 16.—The dead bodies of a man and woman were found in a house in the red light district yesterday afternoon. There were bullet wounds in the head of each, and it is thought that the woman was shot by the man, who then committed suicide. Both were Italians.

LINDSAY HAVING TROUBLE WITH ITS BY-LAW ABOUT DOGS

Lindsay, April 15.—This morning a reporter interviewed Mayor Begg regarding what action the council would take in connection with the dog by-law as a result of the dismissal of the charge preferred against the county magistrate this morning.

His Worship stated that he would call a meeting of the council for the purpose of repealing the measure. He would wash his hands of the whole affair and felt like resigning from his position as chief magistrate.

The measure, he thought had not been fairly treated, and as a result the council occupied a very funny position in the eyes of the people.

It is likely a special meeting will be called on Monday evening to consider the by-law.

W. Stapleton has been appointed western agent of the C.N.R. steamship company.

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH

AUSTRIA IS RUSHING FOUR DREADNOUGHTS

Ottawa, April 16.—In the Senate yesterday, the bill providing for control of cable and telephone rates, was referred to the railway committee, so that representatives of cable companies would have an opportunity of being heard.

MET AND ADJOURNED

No Business Transacted at Meeting of License Commissioners

No business was transacted by the license commissioners at the meeting last night. There were present Dr. Morrison, Mr. James Kendrey and License Inspector Stewart.

An adjournment to next Thursday April 21st, was made, as it was expected that Mr. H. LeBrun will have returned to the city by that date.

St. John's Chimes

The promoters of the scheme to place a set of chimes in St. John's tower point out that if the chimes had been in place they would have been used to welcome the Lieutenant-Governor with a joyous peal, and if they are installed may be used for all such occasions in the future.

THREAT GOT THE BILL PASSED

Montreal, April 16.—When the bill was passed at Ottawa creating the Quebec Battlefield Commission, there was no Parliamentary authority to expropriate. Something had to be done, however, as there were over $600,000 in the Bank of Montreal, to the credit of the commission, and the members wanted to go ahead with their work. Appeal after appeal was made to the Government at Ottawa, yet, like other large bodies, they declined to move. Finally Sir George Garneau, Byron Walker and Col. Denison, threatened to resign en bloc. This had the desired effect, and the bill was rushed through at Ottawa.

When spoken to last night, Byron E. Walker, said: "There was no friction whatever at any time between the commission and the Government. The commission always had power to expropriate, but a technical amendment was necessary. Certainly no member ever thought of resigning."

WILL APOLOGIZE TO PRESIDENT

Washington, D.C., April 16.—The National American Woman Suffrage Association will express its regret to President Taft, because of the hissing of certain remarks which he addressed to them Thursday night, by a letter from the executive board. This action was approved by the convention with only one dissenting voice.

EXECUTION FIVE TIMES POSTPONED

Atlanta, Ga., April 16.—George Burge was hanged yesterday for the murder of his wife on May 17 last. The execution had been postponed five times, yesterday being the sixth date set for the hanging. Burge confessed just before he was hanged yesterday.

Two Negroes Lynched.

Ashburn, Va., April 16.—Two negroes were strung up and shot near here yesterday by prominent men for an assault committed two weeks ago.

WHO HISSED THE U.S. PRESIDENT

Washington, D.C., April 16.—Suffragists, anti-suffragists and disinterested persons yesterday agreed that the hissing of the president of the United States at Thursday night's convention here, will prove one of the hardest blows that suffrage has ever suffered. The leaders of the National Association are to-day doing their utmost to minimize the incident, and several of them contend that the president's limited endorsement of the movement was not engineered by suffrage delegates, but by outsiders.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, national president, yesterday said: "It was not our people who hissed. The demonstration was made by people whom I recognized as outsiders. All the leading suffragists recognize that the occurrence was very regretable, especially as the president officially recognized the disturbance, both at the meeting and in the official copy of his speech, filed at the White House to-day."

The general idea prevalent to-day is that the convention are responsible for the disturbance.

NEW LINE WILL BE CONSTRUCTED

Toronto, April 16.—In order to secure an entrance independent from either the G.T.R. or C.P.R., the T. & N. O. will construct its own line from Nipissing Junction to North Bay. Despite the fact that the G.T.R. has contracted for the use of the T. & N.O. terminals at North Bay for 21 years, this will not prevent the commission of the provincial railway from forming similar agreements with the C.P.R. or Canadian Northern.

The Algoma Steel Co. has contracted to supply the commission with 2,000 tons of steel rails for their new section at $32.25 a ton.

USED DYNAMITE FOR SUICIDE

Nagaunee, Mich., April 16.—Frank Haarinan, a miner, aged 31, placed a stick of dynamite under the bed in which his wife and three-year-old daughter were sleeping, and another under the one which he and his five-year-old boy occupied. When the dynamite was exploded the man, woman and boy were blown to atoms. The girl had a miraculous escape, being found practically unhurt. The family had been here only two weeks.

WILL IT BE ENFORCED?

The government of Nova Scotia has introduced a bill to prohibit the liquor traffic in the whole province, except the city of Halifax. It is one thing to pass a law and another thing to enforce it, and from a temperance point of view the question of most importance in what provision is the Nova Scotia government making for the enforcement of the law?

The Conservative Government of Ontario has shown an earnest desire to strictly enforce prohibition in all districts where the people decide in favor of prohibition, while in license districts it enforces the license laws. A law that is not enforced is worse than no law at all.

QUEBEC'S PULP WOOD POLICY

The newspapers of Canada, with the exception of the Montreal Witness, are unanimous in expressing approval of the action of the Government of Quebec in following Ontario's example in prohibiting the export of pulp wood, when it is grown on Crown lands. Conservatives and Liberals agree that this is wise policy. The newspaper press of Canada was almost equally unanimous not long ago in declaring that Canada should "stand pat" in the tariff negotiations with the United States, but notwithstanding this fact, the Canadian government lowered the tariff on a large number of articles, at the dictation of the Washington government, and Liberal newspapers, which a few weeks ago were jubilantly announcing that the Canadian government would "stand pat" and that the refusal to yield to United States dictation would be a great advertisement for Canada throughout the civilized world, are now commending Mr. Fielding's surrender to Mr. Taft as an example of high statesmanship.

If the pulp wood lands of Ontario and Quebec were under control of the Laurier Government we might expect another surrender to the United States, and as soon as it was accomplished Liberal newspapers would commend it as another instance of the sagacity and statesmanship of the Laurier Government.

AN ENEMY OF FARMERS

A man whom Canadian farmers should regard as their enemy is E. C. Drury, of the Dominion Grange. During the election contest in England, a few months ago, he wrote a letter to one of the leading politicians of England, asserting that Canadian farmers do not want a preference in the British market. Is that the truth? Do Canadian farmers desire that the wheat and other food products of Russia, Argentina, the United States and other countries shall continue to enter the British market on the same terms as Canadian food products? Would it not be a great advantage to Canadian farmers to have a preference in the British market? Why, then, should the head of a farmers' organization tell the politicians of England that Canadian farmers do not want a preference?

The wheat production of Canada is increasing at an enormous rate. The land now growing wheat is a very small fraction of the land that is capable of growing wheat. Each year the acreage under cultivation is greatly increased. Argentina's wheat areas are also being rapidly increased and Russia is opening up the immense wheat lands of Siberia and encouraging farmers to occupy them.

The British consumption of wheat is limited, and every bushel of Russian, Argentine or American wheat that is consumed in the United Kingdom will mean one bushel less of Canadian wheat. What is true of wheat is true of cheese, bacon and other food products.

Mr. Drury has a right to express his own opinion, but he has no right to tell the politicians of England that the farmers of Canada do not want a preference.

MINERALS FOUND BY RAILWAYS

The Review referred the other day to the few railways there are in Eastern Ontario, as compared with the network of railways in Western Ontario and suggested that the Ontario Government railway should be extended southward from North Bay to Peterborough, and from here to some port on Lake Ontario. One effect of such an extension might be to open a new mineral region. Prof. W. G. Miller, provincial geologist, speaking at an Empire Club luncheon in Toronto the other day, said:

"In ten years Canada will be one of the greatest mineral countries in the world. The railways which are being opened up from time to time are discovering and making known the great deposits which are imbedded in our rocks. The C.P.R. discovered the great district of Sudbury, which in its brief life has made an output of over one hundred millions, and is a camp that will last many generations. The Temiskaming and Northern Ontario government railroad, which was originally built for purely agricultural purposes, discovered the district of Cobalt, from which about thirty-eight millions dollars worth of mineral has been taken."

No one knows what valuable minerals may be found in the counties of Eastern Ontario. Recently the discovery was made that there are very valuable ruby stones in Ashby township, of Addington county. Toronto jewelers say that the stones are of high quality. The rock formation is said to be exactly similar to that district of Burmah, from which the most precious rubies of the world have come. Mr. Harry MacMaster, a mining engineer, who has examined the property, says that there is no question at all that the deposit is of sufficient extent to warrant an inexhaustible supply of ore, and the expenditure of a large amount of money in development work.

Valuable minerals may be found in other counties of Eastern Ontario. Who knows what may yet be discovered in the country lying between Peterborough and North Bay!

But altogether apart from the question of mineral discoveries the government railway should be extended southward to Peterborough for the convenience of people in Eastern Ontario who wish to get into the north country without the inconvenience of going so far west as Toronto.

Whether or not there are valuable minerals in the country back of Peterborough there are many sources of traffic. Farm products and lumber would furnish freight; the tourist travel to the lakes and Algonquin National Park would yield a large revenue, and the tide of travel from Central and Eastern Ontario to New Ontario would go over this line.

While it is desirable that the railway to be built between Peterborough and North Bay shall be a part of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, if it is found impossible to get the Government to build it an effort should be made to induce the Canadian Pacific, Canadian Northern or Grand Trunk to undertake it.

How a Woman Can Build Up Her Health

This Open Letter From Mrs. L. Hermann Will Be Interesting to All Women Readers.

The following letter written from her prettily situated home in Ossining, on the banks of the Hudson, gives Mrs. Hermann's experience with ill-health:

"I was never very strong.

"Thousands there are just like me, who have to pay double toll for every little extra effort or exertion. When the weather was fine, and I was able to get about, I enjoyed life and held my strength. But something always happened—a little too much done, or some small sickness would put me back, and I would drop into the most miserable despondent state, unable to sleep or enjoy my meals. I decided to take the most nourishing and strengthening tonic made, and was strongly urged to use 'Ferrozone.' After the first box I saw Ferrozone was doing me good, so I followed closely the 'Ferrozone Rules for Health,' and gained steadily. At first I didn't eat as well as I once did—I couldn't expect to. But there was a gradual improvement in my appetite, and this buoyed up my hopes, and convinced me Ferrozone was what I needed. It is less than a year since I commenced Ferrozone and already I am like a new woman. I eat more, sleep better, weigh more, am stronger, healthier, better looking than ever before."

LAKEFIELD MAY HAVE AN OLD BOYS' REUNION

Lakefield, April 15.—It has been suggested that an attempt be made to have a gathering of Lakefield Old Boys. The idea is a thoughtful one for there are hundreds who have left Lakefield and vicinity that would visit the scenes of their boyhood days, and, as it were, renew their life by reviewing the past with their schoolmates and other friends. It is a pleasure that one cannot express to go over the ground that one had trod as barefoot boy or girl. To mark the changes here and there and now and again, to note the same old stone, tree or building, creates in one a feeling of kindness and fellowship. If all would become interested a successful gathering could be arranged. It would require a resourceful secretary, one willing to use every endeavor to interest those at home and abroad.

WONDERFUL CURATIVE QUALITIES OF FRUIT

Demonstrated by "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Physicians puzzled over the strange case of Kingston girl. Nothing did her any good until the Famous Fruit Medicine completely restored her to health.

The people are awakening to the marvellous powers of fruit juice as a preventative and cure of disease. "Fruit-a-tives,"—the only medicine in the world actually made of fruit juice—has demonstrated the extraordinary value of fruit juice even in cases that were apparently hopeless. The strange case of Miss Mable Todd, of Kingston, Ontario, well illustrates the wonderful properties of "Fruit-a-tives."

From a happy, rosy cheeked girl, she had become pale and thin and so weak that she could hardly stand. Her many friends knew that something serious was the matter. The best medical attention was sought but the ordinary resources of the physician failed to do any good.

As a last resort, "Fruit-a-tives" was tried. Read the result.

Miss MABLE TODD.

91 CLERGY ST.
KINGSTON, ONT.

November 4th, 1909

"I suffered for some years with a dangerous form of Heart Trouble. There was severe pain over the heart and down the arms, severe Palpitation, Headaches, Constipation and Indigestion. I became so weak that I could hardly stand and my friends were greatly alarmed. I was treated by physicians and took many remedies but none did me any good. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives" and this medicine completely cured me of all Heart Disease, Constipation and Stomach Trouble and gave me back perfect health."

Miss MABLE TODD.

"Fruit-a-tives" made this wonderful cure because "Fruit-a-tives" is a magnificent heart tonic and nerve tonic. "Fruit-a-tives" soothes the stomach and stimulates the liver, kidneys and skin, thus purifying the blood and restoring the heart action. "Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c., or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BASIL KING,

Author of "Let Not Man Put Asunder," "The Street of Seven," Etc.

Copyright, 1908, by Harper & Brothers.

"My business may be briefly stated," Winship continued, "but my motives may require a word of explanation."

"I'm entirely at your service for anything."

"Six months ago," Winship pursued, with some evident difficulty, "you offered my sister and myself a large sum of money. That is to say, while no definite sum was named for me, you contemplated, I think, something of the sort."

"You're quite right."

"We refused the money then. We meant that refusal to be final, but since last night we've reconsidered the matter. If you are still in the same frame of mind"—

"I am."

"We should be willing to accept it."

"I shall have the matter arranged at once. I believe I said five hundred thousand for Miss Winship. Or you'll permit me, I'll double the sum for you, or, if you prefer it, I will double that again."

"The amount is of no consequence. Neither of us could ever use the money for ourselves. As far as we are concerned, its transference to our names would be a mere formality. I know we lay ourselves open to the charge of compromising with the man who ruined our father and mother"—

"Couldn't we discuss the subject, Mr. Winship, without bringing that point up again?"

The curious gentleness of Trafford's tone struck Winship strangely.

"I'll try," he said briefly.

"I'll tell you why," Trafford explained. "I know you're doing this for my daughter, and I've reached a point where I can't bear that there should be bitterness of speech in anything where she's concerned."

"That's right," Winship said, with more emotion of tone than he had displayed hitherto. "I ought to have remembered it, especially as my errand here this morning is to say that my sister and I want to bury the sword at your daughter's feet."

"In what way, Mr. Winship? Will you be good enough to tell me exactly what you and Miss Winship mean?"

"Our impulses are different. My sister's is a very simple one. She has always treated Miss Trafford harshly unjustly. But she has done it with a sort of kicking against the pricks. Now that she realizes her goodness, her elevation of character, she is ready to do anything, however hard, to make amends. It's not an unusual manifestation of remorse. My own motive are somewhat more complicated. In fact the whole question is a complicated one. "I understand that Miss Trafford is to be married in a few days to the Duke of Wiltshire. Well, I rebelled against that when she told me yesterday, for you may not know that I saw her yesterday. But the night brings counsel, and I've come to see that in all the circumstances it's perhaps the best thing for every one. Wiltshire is a good man, and if he can't make her happy he will at least surround her with love and kindness. I'm the only one who could have made her happy"—

"And you wouldn't do it," Trafford broke in. "You threw away your chance."

"I don't think I really had it. The Cid and Chimene were not separated by so impassable a barrier as she and I. At all events, if I've made a mistake I'm ready to pay the penalty. She's not happy, and she's not well. Any one can see that. I think it might help her toward being both if she knew I had taken the money. She feels strongly on the point—more strongly, I fancy, than any of us is aware of."

"That is, she thinks—mind you, I'm speaking quite calmly, Mr. Winship; I'm merely trying to state the case as it is—she thinks I've done you and your family a wrong, and she would be happier if she thought I had righted it."

"I think that's her conviction."

"And you're willing to make it seem as if I had righted it in order that she may be more at peace?"

"Quite so. Miss Trafford need never know anything more than that I have taken the money. Before she is married I shall have sailed for New York, where I mean to live. It's hardly likely that our paths will cross again, and so in the course of time"—

"May I ask if you are going to America also on my daughter's account?"

"Only partially. The time has come for me to return there in any case. I'm only hastening my departure."

For a few minutes there was silence. Winship, having stated his case, had little more to add. Trafford looked musingly at the floor, and even when he spoke he did not lift his eyes.

"Look here, Winship," he said at last, "why shouldn't you wait a few days and take my daughter with you?"

There was a second or two of dead stillness before Winship replied, "I don't understand."

"It's easy enough, however," Trafford pursued, still without looking up. "Paula is not going to marry the Duke of Wiltshire."

"Oh!" Winship started.

"He came here just now to release her. He'd learned that Paula didn't love him; that, in fact, she loved you. And since she does—and you love her and you've met me half way by offering to take the money—why shouldn't we"—

"I didn't expect this," Winship gasped.

"No, of course you didn't. Naturally it would put you back in the same position as before—before you dealt that blow at me in June. Now, don't speak, Winship. Let me give you the thing from my point of view." Trafford looked up and spoke with more animation. "You've grown up in the idea of working off on me a bit of family revenge. Chance put you in the way of doing it. You would have carried off my daughter and left me childless. You would have done it in such a way that the very manner of her going with you would have been the severest condemnation of my life and me. You didn't quite succeed; and yet you haven't wholly failed. My daughter stands by me before the world. She condemns me only in secret; she shrinks from me only by ways which she thinks I don't see or understand. As a matter of appearance she's still my child, but as a matter of fact I've lost her. You see, then, that you've done the most important part of your work—you've effected between her and me that sort of moral separation that nothing can ever heal. Whatever happens now, whatever turn events may take, she'll never be to me again what she used to be. You see, you've done as much as that. It's part of what you wanted, isn't it?"

Winship hesitated a minute before replying. "Yes," he said at last.

"But there's one thing you haven't realized," Trafford went on in the same calm voice. "You've made me suffer, but I'm not the only one. I'm not sure even that I'm the one who suffers most. You couldn't have guessed beforehand what it would mean to a nature like my little girl's to lose her faith in me. But you must know it now if you saw her yesterday. She didn't look like that when you saw her first, did she, Winship? That's your work. As the duke said this morning, she's not dying merely because she gave up one man to marry another; she's dying because she finds herself in a world so tainted that she can't breathe in it. You see, then, Winship, you wanted to kill me, and you've gone far toward killing her. There's just one thing that will bring her back to life. Do you want me to tell you what it is?"

Winship was gazing at Trafford with haggard eyes, but he did not speak.

"Our reconciliation," Trafford said, with the same unemphasized intensity.

Winship rose slowly to his feet.

"I'm only a man," he said hoarsely. "I've no power to work a miracle."

"Then, for God's sake, couldn't you pretend to do it?" Trafford cried, springing up in his turn. "You're ready to make sacrifices for her sake. You're ready to take the money. You're ready to go away. You're ready to tear out your own heart and hers too. Is it so much easier to do all that than merely to take the hand outstretched to you? True, it's my hand—the hand, you will say, that crushed your father and struck your mother down—but, even so, wouldn't you rather touch it—just touch it—than grind the life out of a sweet and blameless child? I know your revenge is dear to you, but you've got it. You've got it in the very fact that I, Paul Trafford, come pleading to you as I never expected to plead to any man. I've used men as the mere bricks with which to build my castle, and yet I'm brought to the necessity of begging you for a recognition. Can't you afford to laugh, man? Can't you afford to triumph over me? You couldn't gloat at the sight half so much if you saw me in my coffin as you can now in watching me at your feet. God Almighty has put me at your mercy in managing my poor child's life, but you'd be a monster and not a man to keep me there."

He paused, waiting for a reply, but for a minute or two Winship said nothing. He stood erect, his hands behind his back, his lips tightly set and his deep eyes gazing off into the distance above Trafford's head. Trafford himself watched with an expression of rather pitiful beseeching.

"I find my position a very hard one," Winship said slowly. He spoke in a low voice, but with what seemed to Trafford curious distinctness. "I have to put it to you crudely—very crudely. In order that you may see how hard it is. I thought I was ready to make any sacrifice for Miss Trafford, merely to give her peace of mind. Now I have to hesitate to save her life. But I've never contemplated the possibility of even a nominal reconciliation with you. If it were only a question of private enmity I shouldn't shrink from it. But it's more than that. It's a great point of honor. If I do as you suggest I shall be allying myself openly and before the world with a man whose life, work and character I look upon as a diabolical evil. You must see yourself that it was one thing for me to try to take your daughter out of the life you stand for, but it's quite another to be willing to go into it with her. But that's what it comes to. However nominal my act might be, that's what I should be doing. I repeat that I can forget all the reasons I've had for personal hostility, but I can't forget that you're the chief of that group of men who, as I believe in my heart, are the corrupters"—

"I won't trouble you for further explanations of that sort," Trafford interrupted without show of anger. "I've been treated to such a lot of eloquence on the subject at one time or another that I know in advance exactly what you want to say. I shall only ask you to remember that if I've never said anything in my own defense and if I say nothing now it doesn't follow that I've no defense at all. At the same time I may admit that I see your point, and in spite of the fact that it isn't flattering to me I'm not without a certain respect for your position. Don't give me an answer now. Think over it. Then if you can't do it, why, we shall just have to bear the consequences; that's all. But remember this, Winship—that if what you call your honor outweighs what you call your love and my little girl dies it won't be because you wouldn't marry her. She's no such weakling as to break her heart for that. It will be, as I've said already, because the world will have become unfit for her to live in. Now go and think it all over. If we talk about it any longer we may say the wrong thing. Remember that you're on the point of making a big decision and take your time. Today is Tuesday. Suppose you were to come to see me again on Thursday afternoon?"

After further discussion it was settled in this way, and Winship rose to go. He was at the door when he paused and turned.

"If often happens," he said in a tone of voice he had not used hitherto, "that men who are furthest apart in matters of principle find some place for mutual sympathy when they come into personal contact. I've been twice put in situations where I've had to speak out my mind with something more than plainness, and yet the superb patience with which you've borne what you've had to say has made me feel as if I were shooting into the air. I should like to add, however, that it won't be necessary for me to begin in that vein again."

"My dear fellow," Trafford responded warmly, "nobody appreciates a good fighter like an old soldier. It would never occur to me to resent anything you say. I'm too much occupied in trying to make you think differently. That's my form of winning a victory. Who knows but what we may both live to talk over all these things as I've heard two old soldiers of the north and south, each giving his account of the same battle from his own point of view?"

Winship made no reply to this, but he allowed Trafford to take his hand and hold it for a second with a pressure that was not unkindly.

CHAPTER XXVI.

In spite of what he knew of Marah's changed attitude toward Paula, it was a surprise to Winship to find that she counselled him at once to fall in with Trafford's plans.

"It's a case that admits of no hesitation," she said as they talked the subject over in the long red studio that night. "If Paula is as ill as you say, there can be no thought for any one but her."

They sat at the table from which the servant had cleared away their simple evening meal. Marah had brought her paints and brushes to the light, and Winship had opened mechanically a portfolio of drawings, at which he did not look. He sat smoking pensively allowing Marah to pursue her thoughts without interruption.

"At the same time," she continued, "you'd have to count the cost. We should both have to do it. It's in the very nature of the circumstances that, whatever compromise must be made, I should have to share it."

"That's hard on you," Winship said absently. "You'd be paying the price without securing any of the reward."

"My reward doesn't matter," she snapped. "It's too late now to think of happiness for me. If I can get the reflection of yours it will be enough. And you would have it. It's no use talking as if you were making a great sacrifice to get nothing in return."

"I don't think I ever did. If I have scruples they come entirely from the fear of buying my happiness at a price I ought not to pay."

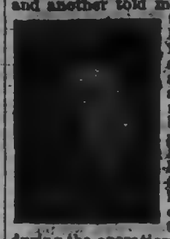
DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Camilton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. LETITIA BLAIR, Camilton, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatuleney, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women

HOW TO MAKE BABY SLEEP

The baby that cries half the night does not cry for nothing. It cries because it is not well, and has no other means of saying so. The chances are the trouble is due to some upsetting of the stomach or bowels, which would be speedily removed if the child were given a dose of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets make children sleep soundly and naturally because they remove the cause of the crossness and wakefulness. They are a blessing to children and a relief to worried mothers. Mrs. John Sickles, Douglastown, N.B., says: "If anything ails my little ones the first thing I give them is a dose of Baby's Own Tablets and they are soon well again." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Out of Tune.

A piano tuner employed by a city firm was sent to a certain suburb to tune a piano. He found the instrument in good condition and not in the least need of attention. A few days later the firm received a letter from the owner of the piano, a lady of musical intention, saying that the piano had not been properly tuned. It was no better than before. After receiving a reprimand from his employer the hapless tuner made another trip to the suburbs and again tested every note only to find, as before, no fault with the instrument. This time he told the lady so.

"Yes," she said, "it does seem all right, doesn't it, when you play on it, but as soon as I begin to sing it gets all out of tune again."

He Ate His Own Words.

Not long ago the punishment for libel in Russia was the requirement that the libeler literally eat his own words. A man who published a small volume reflecting on the unlimited power of the sovereign was seized, tried in a summary way and condemned to consume the objectionable words. In one of the public streets the book was severed from its binding, the margins cut off, the leaves rolled up one by one and fed to the unfortunate author. A surgeon was in attendance to pronounce upon the number possible to give without endangering his life, but he is reported to have set the limit at something like 200.

Sounded Queer.

"All right behind there?" called the conductor from the front of the car.

"Hold on!" cried a shrill voice. "Wait till I get my clothes on!"

The passengers craned their necks expectantly. A small boy was struggling to get a basket of laundry aboard.

Foolish Question.

Hasker—Hello, Crabbe! What are you going to do with the camera? Crabbe—Going to bore an artesian well in our dining room with it. You didn't suppose I was going to take pictures, did you?

His Object.

Wigwag—What roses! Don't you know a girl never marries the fellow who sends her flowers? Oldbach—Sure, I do. That's why I always try to keep on the safe side.—Philadelphia Record.

Acute Dyspepsia

Restoration of Stomach Power Comes Quickly With the Right Medicine.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge, P.O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend, who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon glowed within me. I can now eat, sleep, and live like a live man."

Be advised—Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do your good. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

LICENSE REDUCTION SYSTEM AS EMPLOYED IN AUSTRALIA

Method of Reducing Licenses on Compensation Basis—Convictions Against Hotels and Their Necessity or Desirability in Communities Are Chief Factors in the Reduction.

In view of the fact that license reduction will shortly go into effect in Peterborough, the procedure given below in connection with the system in vogue in Australia will be read in the city with general interest. It is taken from the annual report for the year ending December 31st, 1909, of the License Reduction Board at Melbourne, Australia, which was kindly loaned the Review, by Ald. J. J. Turner, to whom it was sent by Mr. J. Ruburia, who is in the hotel and restaurant business in Melbourne.

The extract is as follows:—

DEPRIVATION PROCEDURE.

At the close of each year the board decides on the programme for the next year, and the districts to be dealt with, and estimates the amount of funds that can be allotted to each, and approximately the number of houses that may be closed. It then asks the licensing inspector for each district, without in any way indicating the number it expects to close, to furnish a list of as many houses, which in his opin on could be closed without public inconvenience, always asking for a sufficient number to give a considerable margin, and give full opportunity for selection. If at the hearing of evidence the board feels any doubt between a hotel in the list and one that is not included, its practice is to allow the former to remain, so that both can be considered on a future occasion.

In selecting the list to be heard the inspector follows the order set out in section 44, and first presents hotels whose convictions or conduct bring them under that section.

ORDER OF DEALING

Section 44 of the Act of 1906 provides for the order in which hotels are to be dealt with in each district, subject to the consideration of public convenience and the requirements of the several localities in the district. That order is as follows:—

(a) Those against which there have been two convictions within the last three years for certain specified offences.

(b) Those against which there has been one such conviction.

(c) Houses that have been so badly conducted as to be a nuisance to the neighborhood or that are not supplied with proper sanitary conveniences.

After these comes the houses that, although not badly conducted, are not required.

The clause further explains that suitable compensation is given when the licenses are revoked.

In the report the stand is taken that license reduction on a well regulated compensation basis is the fairest means of dealing with the doing away of unnecessary or undesirable licenses.

UNOCCUPIED HOUSE AND BARN DESTROYED BY FIRE

At an early hour this morning an unoccupied frame house and barn on the west side of the G.T.R. siding on Auburn street in Auburn, and the property of Mr. Alex. Greaves, was burned to the ground. It is suspected that the fire was of incendiary origin. At 2.25 an alarm was telephoned in from the Nicholls hospital, and almost at the same time an alarm was rung in from box 29. The fire department responded, but on arriving at the scene of the fire could do nothing, on account of there being no water supply. Other methods were useless, as the fire had gained too great a headway.

The fire attracted a large number of people residing in the vicinity, and the spectators included the guests at a dance, which was being given in a house nearby.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR WAS TAKEN OVER THE LIFT LOCK

Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, was taken over the Peterborough lift lock this morning on board the government boat "Bob Hall." This part of his entertainment in Peterborough was arranged by the City Council, the boat being placed at the disposal of the city by Mr. J. H. McClellan, superintendent of the Trent canal. The distinguished visitor arrived in Peterborough on the 11.26 C.P.R. train from Toronto, and was met at the station by His Worship Mayor Morrow, Rev. H. J. Keith, Aldermen Duffus, chairman of the Reception Committee; Turner, Metheral, Bradburn and Phelan, Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., chairman of the Board of Education; City Clerk Armstrong and several other prominent citizens who had been invited to join in the civic welcome. The Lieutenant-Governor came from Toronto in his private car, and was accompanied by Mrs. Gibson, and his aide-de-camp, Captain Young.

Mrs. Gibson, accompanied by Miss Dickson, was driven to the home of the latter on Dickson street. Lieutenant-Governor Gibson, Capt. Young, and the members of the civic reception party were driven to the Wolfe street wharf, where they went on board the "Bob Hall" and took the trip over the lift lock. Everything passed off without a hitch of any kind, and the Lieutenant-Governor expressed himself as greatly pleased at being provided with the opportunity to go over the famous lock. The party were met by hacks at the lift lock and driven back to the city. Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Gibson and Capt. Young had luncheon at the home of the Misses Dickson. This afternoon the Lieutenant-Governor laid the corner stone of the new Knox church.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARY T. JORY.

The remains of the late Mrs. Mary T. Jory arrived at the C.P.R. station Thursday afternoon, accompanied by her son, Dr. Tindle, of Flinton, and were conveyed to the residence of Mr. D. Bellegham, where the funeral service was conducted on Friday at 2 p.m.

A very large number gathered and a very solemn and impressive service was conducted by Rev. J. G. Wilson, of Toronto, brother-in-law of deceased. Rev. T. Wallace, of Monteagle, ex-pastor and friend of the family, assisted by Rev. J. G. Potter, of St. Andrew's.

Mr. Wilson bore testimony to her excellent work and Christian character. He had known her for forty-six years. He had seen her as a dutiful daughter in her father's home, as gold yet untried. He had been with her twice as a bride and twice as a widow, and throughout the course of those years he had found her still gold, but refined as by fire.

She had been well engaged in every department of the church's work, and from beginning to end had made manifest her devotion to the work of the church that she loved. Mr. Wallace said he had been privileged to be with her during her last illness for seven days, and rejoiced to bear testimony to her dying triumph, and after speaking of her patience and unselfishness in suffering, he narrated her Christian experience as given by her just before she departed this life and exhorted those present to covet such a testimony.

After the service all that was mortal was conveyed to the Little Lake cemetery to await the voice of Him that shall bid the sleeping dust awake on the morning of the resurrection.

There are left to mourn her loss one son and daughter, and four sisters, Dr. T. J. C. Tindle and Major J. V. Jory, both of Flinton; Mrs. Alex. Edmison, Peterborough; Mrs. (Rev.) J. C. Wilson, Toronto; Mrs. Joseph Stephenson and Miss Elizabeth Ivison, Morecambe, Eng.

FINE CONCERT AT BRIDGNORTH

Some of Peterboaough's Best Talent Contributed to the Programme

A very successful concert was held at Bridgenorth last night under the auspices of Court Bridgenorth, Canadian Order of Foresters. The hall was packed and a splendid programme was given, some of Peterborough's best talent being engaged for the occasion. The chair was occupied by Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., and during the evening an address on the Canadian Order of Foresters was given by Mr. W. C. Strong, of Brantford. The programme, which was arranged by Mr. Andrew Jobe, of Bridgenorth, was of a high order of merit. The Flood orchestra was heard to advantage in several numbers, and the Telford family also won loud applause in their selections. Vocal solos were given by Miss Edna Pringle of Peterborough, Mrs. Young, of Smith, Mr. George Chandler, of Peterborough, and Mr. James O'Brien, of Bridgenorth. Mr. R. J. and Master Cyril Devey gave a piano duet and Mr. and Mrs. Devey made a big hit with the vocal duet, "The Country Courtship." Mr. McLaren, of Peterborough, delighted the audience with his humorous selections. Dr. Holloway, of Peterborough, gave a short address.

Those in attendance from Peterborough report very hospitable treatment at the hands of the Bridgenorth people.

LEAVE FOR A TRIP ABROAD

Monday at noon Mr. J. J. Turner, sr., and Mr. Webber Turner leave for a trip to Europe, which will include a visit to London, Dundee, Glasgow, Leeds, Manchester and Ireland and Paris. They leave here on the 11.45 G.T.R. for New York, arriving there Tuesday morning and sailing by the Lusitania for Liverpool. This will make the forty-third trip across the Atlantic for Mr. Turner, sr., and fifth time for Mr. Webber Turner. A cabin has been booked for on the Lusitania, which carried Mr. Turner, sr., as a passenger two years ago. Although one day late in sailing, they will be in Liverpool before Mr. and Mrs. D. Hughes-Charles, to whom the meeting will be an unexpected one.

It is hoped that the purpose of the trip, that of benefiting Mr. Webber Turner, who at present is not in the best of health, will be attained and Peterborough citizens will join in voicing this sentiment.

PETERBOROUGH VOCALIST GIVEN HIGH PRAISE

This week's Toronto Saturday Night contains a review of the Earl Grey musical and dramatic competition, written by Hector Charlesworth, and in it the following appears:

"The two Peterborough entries were face to face with a very difficult situation. The Madrigal Club had to compete with choristers who have received as fine a training as may be obtained anywhere, and those who presented the first act of "The Geisha" were handicapped by the fact that their production, though entered for the musical trophy, had its dramatic elements as well. The participants did not shine as actors, and their ensemble was bad; but they rendered the choruses well, and Miss Lavina Halahan, who sang the part of Mimosa San, was probably the best vocalist heard during the week. There was unfortunately no way in which her talents could be officially recognized, much as His Excellency and the various judges might have wished it. She was not entered for the solo competition, the ensemble production in which she figured was distanced by the other offerings, and her talents as an actress, apart from her singing abilities, did not justify the consideration of her as a candidate for the Margaret Angelin bracelet. Therefore Miss Halahan had to be content with the applause universally bestowed upon her".

PERSONAL

Mr. Malcom Morrison, of North Monaghan, left Thursday morning for the west.

LECTURE ON DECORATIVE ART

As announced in another column of our paper, the Woman's Art Association of Peterborough has arranged with Mr. Harold Wadley, manager of the Brinton Carpet Company, to give a lecture on "Decorative Art," on Thursday evening next, at the Y.W.C.A. The lecture, which, by the way, is the last to be given this season, under the auspices of the Woman's Art Association, bids fair to be one of the most popular and generally appreciated lectures ever given in Peterborough. The reason is not far to seek as the subject treated with is certainly one which appeals to every householder, and in securing the services of Mr. Wadley, the W.A.A. realize that this important branch of art is being brought more closely to the notice of Peterborough people by a gentleman whose experience and taste in such matters is second to none.

The lecturer will demonstrate in a thoroughly practical way by means of examples in the way of wall-papers, friezes, draperies, floor coverings, pictures, ornaments, etc., how good and bad effects in decoration are obtained.

At the conclusion of the lecture a short but exceedingly bright and interesting programme will be given to which Miss Hallihan, Miss Choate and Mrs. Wadely will contribute. Miss Hallihan's and Miss Choate's names are so well known, and also we may say, so deservedly popular in Peterborough, that no comment need be made upon their appearance, other than to congratulate the W. A. A. upon securing the assistance of these two ladies and to mention that they will render the same selections for which they were given so much praise recently in the Earl Grey contest in Toronto.

Mrs. Wadely's fame as a public performer has hitherto been unknown to Peterborough, but it is safe to say there is a treat in store as her elocutionary powers are considerable. Before her marriage, when she was appearing in London, Eng., her interpretation in leading roles in Shakespeare and other plays was very much appreciated.

Much praise is to be given to the Woman's Art Association for organizing this affair and we hope that their efforts will be accorded the appreciation which they deserve.

The seating capacity of the gymnasium at the Y.W.C.A. is to some extent limited and the public are advised to secure seats as soon as possible so as to avoid disappointment.

Tickets may be procured at Wm. Madill's drug store and at Mr. Payne's drug store.

FOR BETTER HOME LIFE

Pastoral to be Read in Roman Catholic Churches To-morrow

Ottawa, April 16.—The second instalment of the pastoral letter prepared by the Canadian Roman Catholic hierarchy at the plenary council in Quebec, will be read in all the Catholic churches Sunday. It is a very interesting document and has some pregnant things to say on clubs, the divorce problem and prevailing evils of the present day. It says: "We especially admonish heads of families to devote to their homes all the time that legitimate business affairs and legitimate social duties leave at their disposal. Nothing so much disorganizes the family circle as the habit prevalent nowadays with far too many husbands of seeking apart from their wives and children distractions and amusements to which their tastes incline them. They are seldom found at home and numberless are the pretexts for absence, frequent and prolonged. There are to be found in all centres of any importance, clubs, which serve to an alarming extent as counter attractions to the domestic hearth. It is there that too often men waste their time indulging in companionship, conversations, games, which leave to them unimpaired neither fortune, health nor faith."

SPLENDID NEW QUARTERS OF ST. PETER'S TOTAL ABSTINENCE SOCIETY

The fact that St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society are building handsome, commodious and splendidly appointed new quarters on Simcoe street, next door to the Bank of Montreal is generally known, but the completeness of the new building and its furnishings and equipment will come as a revelation to the previously uninformed visitor. No pains or expense have been spared in the renovation and fitting up of the building, which was make an ideal home for the society.

St. Peter's T.A.S. have prospered and progressed in a remarkable way and their new quarters afford a striking example of this progress and prosperity.

Work was commenced on the building in February and it will be ready for occupancy of April 27th, the first evening of a two nights' concert to be given to celebrate the auspicious occasion of the opening which will mark the most significant chapter in the society's history. Miss Margaret McCann, the brilliant entertainer, will contribute to the programme and will be assisted by local artists in attractive numbers.

The building is three storeys high, 70 feet deep by a frontage of 48 feet, with a handsome pressed brick front with large plate-glass windows, a short distance from the level of the floor. A basement is underneath the entire area of the building and contains the large steam-heating plant which will supply heat to every room. Electric lights have been installed throughout and all the rooms will be abundantly illuminated.

There are two spacious entrances to the building, a general entrance in front and a side entrance to the assembly hall.

On the first floor the entire space is occupied with the exception of the narrow passage taken up by the hall, by the assembly room stage and dressing room. The assembly room is 70 feet by 38 feet and by reason of the fact that it will be used for mass assemblies is the largest room of the building. The stage is splendidly situated in relation to the layout of the assembly room and is 20 feet by 15 feet. It will make an excellent platform for speaking and entertainments and plays and will be equipped with a full set of scenery and stage properties. To the left of the stage are roomy dressing apartments. The assembly room will accommodate a gathering of between 450 and 500.

On the second floor are the billiard room, ladies' room, library and small rooms for committee meetings. Plate glass windows also are in the front and rear of the building in this floor, as well as in the other two. The billiard room is 53 feet by 12 feet, and when it is fitted up will be one of the best furnished billiard and pool tables in the province. The library is 30 feet by 21 feet. Both of these rooms are admirably suited to their purposes.

The third floor is divided into three rooms, the largest of which is the gymnasium, which has a width of 21 feet and runs the whole length of the building—70 feet. In keeping with the appointments in all the other departments, the "gym" will be equipped with thoroughly up-to-date apparatus, wrestling mats, etc.

The game room is to the front of the third floor and is 21 feet by 50 feet. It will make a most desirable room for its purpose.

The kitchen in the rear on this floor is about 19 feet square and will be supplied with a gas grange, conveniently arranged cupboards, etc., and all the many cooking utensils which are required for an extensive culinary department.

The floors of the new building are all hardwood and the woodwork and finish throughout are of the best character that good material and skilful workmanship can afford. The furnishings will also be of a tasteful order, and the quarters when they are completed will be very inviting and convenient. Baths and washrooms have been supplied, and all the main and accessory features that could be suggested have been unsparingly provided.

Mr. J. E. Belcher, C.E., is the architect; Mr. D. La Plante is overseer of the work; Mr. Fred Cook has charge of the painting and graining, and Mr. J. A. C. Duranceau of the steam heating and plumbing. The Peterborough Light and Power Company has the contract for the wiring and electrical fixtures. Much credit for the capable management of the work is due the building committee of the society, which is composed of Mr. Nicholas Bibby, Ald. Duffus and Mr. D. Cushing.

PRESENTED WITH HANDSOME FOB

Mr. J. M. Laing Remembered by Boys of the Y.M.C.A.

Before leaving the city for Toronto this morning, Mr. J. M. Laing was presented with a gold Y. M. C. Association watch fob by the boys of the local association. Mr. Laing has been secretary of the boys' department for the past four months, and has done good work in that branch of the work of the association. The presentation of the fob was accompanied by an address, which was read by Wallace Armstrong, and Harold Lees made the presentation. The address was as follows:—

Mr. J. M. Laing,

Peterborough, Ontario

Dear John,—It is with much regret that we, the boys of the junior department of the Young Men's Christian Association, learn that you are leaving us to go on the boat for the summer. While you have been secretary of the boys' department and, indeed, as long as you have been associated with the Y.M.C.A., we have always looked upon you as a true Christian gentleman. We have learned to love and respect you for your stirling qualities; for your faithfulness and for the manner that you have carried on the work for the boys.

We ask you, therefore, to accept this small present as a token of our esteem in which we hold you, and trust that it may convey to you our good wishes for safe journeys during the summer.

Our prayers will always follow you and we will often think of you.

Signed on behalf of the junior department: B. W. Sharpe, Grant Potter, B. Throop, A. Gilbert, M. Pearson, H. J. Hastie, Harold H. Lees, Harold F. Hill, Roy Scott, Bruce Lees, Harold Smith, W. W. Armstrong, Claude Bartlett, Ross Laing.

Mr. Laing was taken completely by surprise, but expressed his deep appreciation of the kindness of the boys in a few appropriate words.

"WAITING" IS A CAPTIVATING SONG

"Waiting," a new song of particularly attractive qualities both in words and music has been published by Jerome H. Remick and Co., New York. The number was written by two Lindsay boys, Mr. W. L. Douglas, composing the pretty melody and the lyrics which are dainty and appealing were written by Mr. A. R. McKay. The song is being sung and illustrated at the Princess to-day.

Fishing Tackle Law

There is a bill at present in both the Dominion House and Congress at Washington prohibiting the use of fishing tackle to which is attached more than three hooks. This will make it illegal to use several makes of fishing bait.

A North Countryman's Views

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—We read another suggestion of a railway from Peterborough to the north country via Haliburton in the Peterborough Review. This is a road that was proposed more than thirty years ago, but as some disagreement arose between the Councils of Peterborough and Haliburton, the latter threw their whole attention to Lindsay and the whole matter fell through. As I have been a resident of Haliburton for fifty years, and know a large section of the north country and its resorts a railway on the route which appeared in the Lindsay Warder last week certainly would accommodate more of the north than any other line. First, it is a more settled country. Second it has fairly good farm lands and forest resorts. Again the water facilities for tourists cannot be surpassed. In fact Muskoka cannot be compared for pleasure seekers. And yet Muskoka receives 100,000 visitors each and every year from every part of the continent. Well, why not Peterborough? That young and enterprising city at the head of this great route, by the proposed line to tap the Lake of Bays and Hollow Lake, would draw all this traffic through this route. Now, a word in regard to agricultural lands. This is a point that has always been misrepresented for divers reasons by big men who do not know and by others who had an interest in other sections. For instance all the crown lands are leased by lumbermen, and they, of course, do not want the Legislature to allot it to settlers, so they report it is not fit for agriculture. Men are sent to investigate who have no earthly knowledge what is fit for settlement. Take the north country as a whole and there is fifty per cent. of arable land. What does a man from town or even one who has been brought up in an open country know to bring him to the wild, untouched forest to point out good arable land? Now, when cattle raising and dairying are the main staples of the whole province our north lands are as profitable as almost any of our front townships. But, of course, they have to be cleared of timber. We hope that our public men will see this enterprise more by the near future than in the past. Let us hear from some one.

A NORTH COUNTRY MAN.

AMATEUR SPORT NOT APPRECIATED

Winnipeg Free Press.—It is unfortunate that the sporting public of Winnipeg did not patronize the Dominion wrestling championship conducted here Friday and Saturday nights, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. Amateur sport is deserving of all the assistance that can be offered, and the slim attendance at both entertainments showed a decided lack of appreciation. Amateur contests such as were decided are clean and the competitors struggled to the best of their ability to win by fair and above-board methods. The Manitoba Amateur Athletic Association as a result of poor patronage, faces quite a large deficit. It is strange, indeed, to chronicle a professional contest about which one always has one's doubts of honesty, should draw a crowded house, and perhaps a hundred enthusiasts should witness genuine contests such as were the amateur championships.

WINCHESTER OUT ONE MONTH'S PAY

It cost Goalkeeper Jack Winchester a month's salary when he came east with the Edmonton hockey team in an effort to take down the Stanley Cup last winter. Jack is an employee of the city hall of Edmonton, and when he returned at the end of the hockey season he found he had been docked one month's salary.

Speaking of the "outrage" the Edmonton Capital says:

"The actions of some wise men are beyond the comprehension of ordinary mortals. It was, no doubt, a great surprise to the majority of Edmontonians to hear that the city had held back Jack Winchester's salary for the month he was away with the Edmonton Hockey Club on the quest after the Stanley Cup. That is a fine piece of work and also a magnificent encouragement of athletes to sacrifice their time in an endeavor to further the city's interests by publicity. What local business man would have docked one of his employees in a like manner? Not one, we'll wager. But, Mr. Winchester, an employee of the very city which he was endeavoring to exploit, returns and finds that his salary cheque has been mulcted.

A SYNDICATE BUYS "MILNER"

"Milner," the well known thoroughbred stallion in which Mr. W. J. McColl, M.P., Cobourg, has a large interest, will be bought by a syndicate of this district and brought here in about a week's time. Mr. P. Conroy, of Indian River, will have the management of the horse with the Windsor hotel as headquarters.

"Milner" is a dark brown, and handsome and well formed. He was bred by the Duke of Portland, England, and is one of the most favorably known thoroughbred stallions in this part of the country. The horse will be here in about a week's time.

Flower Seeds Galore

The C.P.R. floral department is sending out this spring over 20,000 packages of flower seeds to its employees. There are 32 varieties of seeds, and these are made up in large parcels, which contain one package of each variety. These seeds are brought from China and Japan, from South America, Great Britain, Holland, Russia, California, Bermuda, Iceland, Africa, Germany, India and other countries, and, as experience has shown, are the best of their kind procurable.

The success attending the beautifying of the Canadian Pacific lines has been remarkable. At nearly every station there are pretty garden plots and neat lawns, and the employees are not less enthusiastic in their work of beautification than is Mr. N. S. Dunlop, the head of the floral department, who devotes a great deal of time and attention to the details of this scheme, which has had such a beneficial effect in transforming the usually commonplace and uninteresting railway station grounds into beauty spots. Mr. Dunlop has received many letters of encouragement from employees of the great transcontinental line, which testify to their appreciation of the company's floral work, and indicate that their own efforts to make the C.P.R. a veritable road of roses are both willingly undertaken and enthusiastically carried out.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A POOR JUMP.

It Came Near Being the Death of Isabey, the Painter.

Napoleon Bonaparte, as is well known, was in the habit of walking with his arms crossed upon his chest and his head slightly bent forward. Isabey, the painter, was at Malmaison, and he and some of the first consul's aids-de-camp were having a game of leapfrog on the lawn. Isabey had already jumped over the heads of most of them when at the turning of a path he espied the last player, who, in the requisite position, seemed to be waiting for the ordeal. Isabey pursued his course without looking, but took his flight so badly as only to reach the other's shoulders, and both rolled over and over in the sand.

To Isabey's consternation, his supposed fellow player turned out to be Bonaparte, who got up, foaming at the mouth with anger, and, drawing his sword, pounced upon the unfortunate artist. Isabey, luckily for himself, better at running than at leaping, took to his heels and, jumping the ditches dividing the property from the highroad, got over the wall and never stopped until, breathless, he reached the gates of the Tuileries.

Isabey, it was added, went immediately to Mme. Bonaparte's apartments, and she, after having laughed at the mishap, advised him to lie low for a little while.

THE ADAM'S APPLE.

An Important Organ That Helps to Protect the Brain.

One of the most remarkable pieces of mechanism in the human system, a device which anticipated several of our modern patents, is the Adam's apple, which for ages physicians considered a sort of freak of nature without any material use in the human economy. But how differently this little device is considered today!

If we had no Adam's apple there would have been more deaths from apoplexy and brain disorder than ever chronicled in history. Instead of being a useless organ this article serves as an important storage system to protect the brain.

For instance, when we are excited or too animated the heart pumps the blood up to the brain a little too fast, and if it could not be stopped by some automatic device death or brain disease would follow. The Adam's apple is the blood storage cistern which intercepts the rapid flow and holds the surplus blood.

Again, if the supply from the heart runs short and the brain is likely to suffer from an insufficient supply the storage cistern gives up its surplus of blood. Thus this organ acts automatically to check and increase the flow of the blood to the brain, protecting that organ from damage through our temporary excesses.—Pearson's Weekly.

Horse Distemper

Prince Edward Farmer Solemnly Declares "Nerviline" Is a Specific.

"After fifty years' experience in raising horses I can safely testify that no remedy gives such good results for an all-round stable liniment as Nerviline." Thus opens the very earnest letter of J. J. Evanston, who lives near Wellington, P.E. "I had a very valuable horse that took distemper a month ago, and was afraid I was going to lose him. His throat swelled and hard lumps developed. His nostrils ran and he had a terrible cough. I tried different remedies, but was unable to relieve my horse of his pain and suffering till I started to use Nerviline. I mixed a bottle of Nerviline and sweet oil and rubbed the mixture on the throat and chest three times a day and you would scarcely believe the way that horse picked up. Nerviline cured him. I also have used Nerviline for colic in horses and cows, and earnestly recommend it to every man that is raising stock."

Nerviline CURES QUICKLY

For strains, sprains, swellings, colic, distemper, coughs, and colds, no liniment will prove so efficacious in the stable as "Nerviline"—it's good for man or beast, for internal or external use. Wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse substitutes. Large bottles 50c, trial size 25c, at all dealers, or The Catarrhosone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE GIANT'S CAUSEWAY.

Formation and Appearance of This Odd Freak of Nature.

The Giant's causeway is situated at the northern extremity of County Antrim, a short distance from Port Rush, Ireland. It consists of countless hosts of basaltic pillars, varying in shape from a pentagon to an octagon, the average length of each column or pillar being about eighty feet, the whole stacked so closely together that a knife blade could hardly be inserted between them. But the formation of these pillars is not the least wonderful part about them, for, although they may be counted by thousands and tens of thousands, each column is fashioned with a symmetry that suggests a mason's handiwork. Their composition is a perfect fusion of one-half flinty earth, one-quarter lime and clay, one-quarter almost pure iron, each pillar being divided into regular lengths or joints which come together as a perfect natural ball and socket union.

Although to be found in small detachments (imbedded in the cliffs, sands, etc.) for some distance along the shore, the principal aggregations forming the causeway proper consist of three projections or tongues known as little, middle and grand causeways. These singular columns are of different lengths and present an astonishing appearance as they stand, an army of at least 40,000 strong marshaled on the shores of Erin as if ever ready to do battle with the rising tide.

Feeding a Family of Five on $4 a Week.

"My husband," said the woman with the optimistic face, "gives me $4 a week for keeping up the table for our family, and it is simply wonderful how we do it."

"I should think so," observes the woman with the grim smile. "How big a family have you?"

"My husband, myself, three boys and one girl."

"And you keep up your table with $4 a week? What do you have?"

"For breakfast we have a cereal, fruit, coffee and sometimes bacon and eggs; for luncheon cold meats or croquettes or something made of the leftovers from dinner the night before and a simple dessert; for dinner we have a soup, chicken or roast meat, two vegetables, a salad, coffee and a dessert."

"My goodness! What prices do you pay for groceries and meats?"

"Mercy me! I never ask. I just telephone to the grocer and meat man and tell them what I want, and my husband gets the bills the first of the month."

"But I thought you said he allowed you only $4 a week?"

"So he does, and by charging nearly everything, do you know, I actually save $8 or $10 a month from that allowance?"—Judge's Library.

THE ENGLISH NAVY.

Fighting Ships Used to Be Hired Out in Times of Peace.

In the earliest times of the British navy there was practically no distinction between the merchantman and the man-of-war. In the rare times of peace men-of-war traded as merchantmen, while merchantmen always went armed. Thus in time of war the trader became the warship, and vice versa. From the time of the conquest and probably earlier down to the days of Elizabeth this was the ordinary practice. Elizabeth hired out ships of the navy for all sorts of purposes, from piracy to slave trading, taking her share of the profits when the venture was successful and disclaiming all responsibility when it wasn't.

Henry III., who may be described as the originator of the navy as a special fighting force, hired out the ships specially built for the navy in times of peace and even allowed them to be taken away from their appointed stations provided that the hirers deposited due security for the return of the ships with their tackle and all equipment in a proper state of efficiency. The practice ceased after the repulse of the Spanish armada, when the fighting ships, as such, became distinct from the trader.—London Globe.

Plant Misers.

All leaf buds, whether underground or on the bare branches of winter, are plant savings put aside from the superfluity of summer against the proverbial rainy day. The starch of which such organisms consist is to the plant what his savings are to the prudent man, and the common potato is one of the greatest misers of the vegetable world in this respect, for almost the whole of the tuber is made up of starch food, left as a legacy to the young plants represented by the "eyes." This is true of all plants that grow from bulbs.

Some go further, for they run a savings bank in the shape of a taproot, which, if left undisturbed, grows larger year by year, to be drawn upon in seasons of drought when other means of subsistence are exhausted. Among these are primroses, carrots, beetroot and turnips, and with these three last this faculty of saving has been developed by man to make the plants a source of profit to himself.

History of Anatomy.

The way in which we are to "fearfully and wonderfully made" was largely a mystery to the ancients. It may be said that anatomical science was practically unknown prior to Aristotle, 384 B. C. Before that date nearly all that was known of anatomy was derived from the dissection of the lower animals. Aristotle did something in the way of science, but it was not until the time of the famous Alexandrian school, a century before and a century after the birth of Christ, that the anatomy of man began to be fairly understood. The Ptolemies were great patrons of the science and were the first who enabled physicians freely to dissect the human body, thus frustrating the ignorant superstition which had been so long compromising the welfare of humanity.—Exchange.

The Holland Primrose.

There is a plant in Holland known as the evening primrose, which grows to a height of five or six feet and bears a profusion of large yellow flowers so brilliant that they attract immediate attention, even at a great distance, but the chief peculiarity about the plant is the fact that the flowers, which open just before sunset, burst into bloom so suddenly that they give one the impression of some magical agency. A man who has seen this sudden blooming says it is just as if some one had touched the land with a wand and thus covered it all at once with a golden sheet.

THE STORY OF THE THEFT BY ARMS

By Luke Thrice

A story with a curious turn and instinct, with interest from beginning to end; one of the best in the "Adventures of the Master Rogue," written for these pages by Luke Thrice.

"I KNEW a man who once put all the old jokes to the bad by stealing a hot stove," said Laxton meditatively.

"How was that?" asked the master.

"It was a little electric fusing furnace and it contained a sizable santé of pure gold. He got clear away with it, too."

Burch laughed. The two were sitting in a cosey rustic summer retreat cleverly constructed off the billiard room on the roof of the extension wing at the rear of the house. It was the first real outdoor spring evening when the sweet breath of May lured the vast city once for all from winter seclusion and crabbedness. Laxton had come to draw the master out to the park, but had succumbed when his host introduced him to the vine screened arbor, the work of Ota's cunning hands. The nook was lighted by one dim bulb half hidden among the leaves and was furnished with spacious steamer chairs, soft rugs and the indispensable tabouret, whereon Laxton kept jealous watch. It would have needed darker souls than those of the present occupants to bring less than a smile to such a place at such a time.

"There was Johns, the hotel operator, who took a fancy to a certain feather bed and carted it off in his hand bag," suggested the master. "Forty-two trips, so he told me, and adued that he'd never regretted the trouble."

"Oh, there's no end of material if you go into the sectional thefts," said the visitor. "Look at that queer little Dutchman, Ellis, who never did a thing on the crook in his life except sop up pianos by bits. Forty years he worked in piano factories and always carried home the next piece to the piano he was making down cellar. Regarued it as a vested right and himself as an honest man. I always thought there was a genius gone astray in Ellis."

Burch nodded. "I might add something to that department of industry myself. It took me odd days all one summer to remove a certain small Gothic interior of carved wood, quite a gem in its way. I'll show it to you some time."

"That wasn't bad," said Laxton, in admiration.

"You're opened up a fascinating subject, Laxton," resumed the master after a pause, "the strange things that men have coveted and the strange ways they've taken or planned to get them. There was Colonel Blood and the British crown jewels. I never could read that without swearing. What an idiot he must have been, with the guard insensible and the coast clear, to fall so abjectly and permit a boy to give the alarm. And what a magnificent coup he missed! Then think for a moment of Duffy's audacious scheme to swear the gilt off the monster Sway Dagon pagoda and steal the gem crusted flag from the top. Or turn to actual achievements and consider how Smithson took the diamond cross from the breast of the Prince Consort at a court function; how Bordelais stole the bones of a saint from the Cologne Cathedral; how Renard and his band impersonated the prefect of police and escort, removing the entire contents of the most gorgeous palace in Paris at a swoop. It can never be said that our profession has lacked in romance, Laxton."

"Not while you've been at large," said the other, while the master smiled.

"At it again, eh, Laxton? Always tempting the garrulous old timer," he said.

Telling the Tale.

The pleasant, droning night noises of the city filled the interval until he spoke again.

"It is a fact," he began, "that my spoils have frequently been out of the ordinary, chiefly because negotiable gain has always been a minor object with me. I might pick a dozen instances when my prize was quite as unusual as your hot stove. But one adventure comes appropriately to mind with such a soft spring evening as this. That was the occasion upon which I stole a young woman.

"Worse than any hot stove, as you would agree if you were not so hopelessly young. But let me set your mind at rest. It was not definable as abduction by a stickler for legal forms. You scent more romance, perhaps, but the affair begun in a matter of fact way, though what element a young woman, and a handsome and a spirited one, will introduce into a situation you can understand possibly as well as I.

"It was the night of the raid on Gringer's place, when the police captured the best collection of gambling outfits in the country; tables that cost a fortune and that never betrayed the little secrets by which Gringer waxed fat.

"I knew what was coming. So did Gringer, and he had the place cleared and ready by a scant margin. I was with him in what we used to call the 'tween decks, the shallow room hidden within the walls. It was not discovered until years afterward and we were perfectly safe. We lounged in easy chairs and smoked while the police stamped and ripped and tore at the paraphernalia under and above and about us. Gringer, as I remember, frowned occasionally as an axe splintered and thobbed into one of his beloved tables, so massive that it had to be taken away bit by bit, but I heard never a whimper from him. Ninety-nine per cent iron was what Gringer assayed, and it was a point of pride with him that he never swore an oath except with mild and harmless words.

"I amused myself for a time in listening and in watching Gringer, but the game grew dull and, flicking off the lights, I turned up the flap to the secret peephole commanding the street. There was a lamp in front of the next house and I could see the uproarious, curious faces of the crowd, the patrol wagon outside the door and the policemen carrying their unwieldy burdens down the steps. Gringer joined me and we stood in grim silence while the work went on and the load of spoil in the wagon grew space, using the slit alternately.

"'No one about when they came?' I asked him, for it had been a close thing. He shook his head.

"'Not a soul. I had some trouble with Marty Spence. The fool was paralyzed, but Lefty and Dick got him away over the fences. He lives on the next street in this block. Wonder what old Spence would have said if he'd watched his only son being tossed from yard to yard like a sack of potatoes. It was no time for remembering the millions he's worth.' I could hear Gringer's teeth click. 'By crush' he snarled, suddenly 'did you see how that mutt cop slammed that wheel down then? It's a crime to treat such a wheel that way. He's handling a bit of mechanism more wonderful, more delicate than a jewelled movement.'

"I turned to him curiously. It was his first outbreak since the raid; but he had himself in hand almost instantly with a shrug. Even Gringer, I reflected, had an artist's pride in his work.

"'Marty's been on a tear, then?' I asked.

"'For two weeks.'

"'Why didn't you send him home before?'

"'I tried that once,' he answered, with a grating laugh. 'Old Spence had the two men I sent with him locked up and Marty himself didn't come here for a month. This time I did it because there was no other way; but I told Lefty and Dick to look to themselves if they had to leave him hanging over a fence like a dish cloth. No one can wipe his feet on me twice.'

Prize Crew in Hand.

"'Some one's wiping his feet on you pretty freely now,' I suggested, indicating the scene in the street.

"He shrugged again.

"'Who's going to pay for it, the inspector?'

"'No,' he couldn't help himself.'

"'Who then?' I persisted.

"I caught a hard smile about his mouth. 'Don't you suppose I've been discounting this right along?' he answered. 'It's tough—especially those tables, which can't be replaced under fifteen thousand. But I set them down as a dead loss the day I bought them.' That was Gringer all the way through and I turned again to the street.

"The wagon had been filled and driven off to the police station. Most of the policemen had gone, too, though footfalls about the rooms warned us that a prize crew was still in possession. The crowd had melted save for a few stragglers. Gringer went back to his chair and lighted a fresh cigar from the stub of the old one, while I stayed idly staring from the peephole.

"Came a clatter of hurrying hoofs from the west and a fourwheeler hove in sight, drawing up with a jerk at the curb where the patrol had stood. The driver climbed down from his seat to open the door.

"'What's that?' growled Gringer from his chair.

"'Probably some of your distinguished patrons coming to pay you a call, not having heard that you're temporarily retired from business,' I said.

"He chuckled. 'Joke's on them. I hope the Senator's one of the party. It would be worth while hearing him explain to the inspector how he happened to drift in—mistake of address and all that. Can you see who they are? Heh? What's wrong?' He stumbled up toward the peephole at my sharp exclamation and sought to push me aside. Scarcely conscious of my actions I grabbed him by the collar and swung him back against the wall.

"'Shut up,' I snapped at him as I bent to the slit. 'It's a woman.'

"The driver had opened the door. Into the dim yellow flare of the back lamp from the interior of the vehicle stepped a girl clad in soft, mouselinelike white, with an opera cloak drawn about her head and shoulders. I could not recognize the face, though I caught one glimpse of a pleasing profile against the glow. She did not seem to be the kind of woman that had anything to do with Gringer's or its affairs. My first thought after the surprise followed Gringer's suggestion of a mistaken address. Possibly, again, she would enter one of the neighboring residences.

"The gambler squirmed and snarled under my grip and I surrendered the peephole to him. 'Pardon me, old man,' I said. 'I wanted to get a good look at her. She's a stunner. Do you know who she is?

"'A woman,' he grumbled as he peeped out. 'What in snakes is a woman around for? By crash, she's coming in here. Well, I'll be—— Well, will you look at that?' He stood aside and I resumed the post of observation.

"The cabman had gathered up his reins and was stuffing one hand into a pocket as one well satisfied with his fare. The few stragglers were gathered about the woman, staring wide eyed at this latest addition to a police raid. The woman herself stood on the sidewalk, looking hesitatingly toward our door—there could be no doubt about that.

"'She's coming in here,' repeated Gringer in a tone of wonder.

"I knew that he was right, even before she gathered up her skirts, walked to the steps and began the ascent.

Not of That Class.

"'Do you know her?' I snapped again at Gringer, starting across the narrow room toward the sliding panel.

"'No,' he said. 'Never saw her before. Say,' he added, in sudden alarm, 'You're not going out, are you?'

"'Of course,' I shot back. 'She has no business here. She's not in that class. Do you want to see a decent woman thrown within reach of cops on a raid dragged into an affair of this kind?'

"He caught me by the sleeve. 'You can't go,' he said firmly. 'They'll get you and me too. She's in the know, all right. Probably knows about one of the boys and come to look for him. See here——'

"With a quick dive I wrenched loose his grip, got under his arms and jacked him across the space. At the same instant I slid back the panel and stepped out into the room at the side, closing it after me immediately. I was in a sort of anteroom here to the front room on the second floor, and it was empty. I crossed to the door and out into the hall. Still there was no one in sight. The murmur of voices came from the larger apartment on the third floor.

"As I reached the head of the stairs she stepped through the open front door and stood under the hall lights, looking up at me expectantly with parted lips, a slight, graceful figure. She was a delicate face and regularly featured, but not merely pretty, for the white brow and straight nature above the firm sweep of chin spoke of character. I scarcely knew what to expect or how to greet me, but she took the initiative with a little decisive gesture that caught my ear.

"'Please,' she said, in a low, distinct voice, 'can you find Mr. Spence for me, Mr. Martin Spence? It is very important.'

"There was no suggestion of shrinking or reserve about her, though from her bearing and her tone it was clear enough that she knew what kind of a place she was in. I was fairly sure, however, that her knowledge ended there and that she had not heard of the raid.

"'I'm sorry,' I answered, with an eye to the movements of the policemen overhead, 'but Mr. Spence has gone away. I think he must be home by this time. You had better go.'

"She hardened instantly. 'Mr. Spence is here and I—upon seeing him. Do you think I should have come if it were not imperative?'

"'Madame,' I said gently, 'this house is no place for you. It is in the hands of the police. All the patrons escaped, including Mr. Spence, some hours ago. If you should be found here it might prove very embarrassing.'

"The flash of her eyes was sharp with scorn. She did not believe me. 'Are you of the police?' she asked, and her meaning was plain as she noted my correct evening attire. I hesitated an instant. She moved to the foot of the stairs and began to ascend. I warned her back.

"'It will mean the police court at least if they discover you?' I cried. Half way up she stopped and swept me again with her level glance.

"'Mr. Spence is here,' she repeated, slowly, 'and he is being detained illegally and against his will. I intend to find him and take him away. You will interfere with me at your peril.' Having delivered which staggering statement she continued toward me. I protested no further, for I had felt the lash of the woman's spirit. It was too late anyway when she reached the top and stood beside me. Clattering footsteps sounded on the basement stairs. She could not have gained the front door again unseen.

Smashing a Policeman.

"The hall of the second floor was unlighted and she hesitated on the landing. As she faced me, her breath coming a trifle quickly, there was a sudden click behind us. She turned just as the door to the rear stairs swung open and a policeman stepped out. He did not see me, for the woman was between us and I was among the shadows. He stared at her a moment in surprise.

"'Hey, what're you doin' here?' he demanded, gruffly, and wonder gave way before a leer. 'Well, this is cozin' some,' he added as he closed the door. 'I didn't know Gringer ran a hen club, too. We need you. The cap'n 'll be glad to make your acquaintance.'

"The girl drew away, her resolution gone before the man's brutal manner, and took a step toward the stairs. Instantly he caught her by the wrist and pulled her back, laughing. I was on him before the girl could cry out, wrenched one arm behind him, driving his knees from under him with a thrust of my foot and smashing his hat down over his eyes as he fell.

"'Now we've done it. This way,' I cried as I caught her arm and drew her toward the door to the rear stairs. There was no time to get her to the secret room and I had no assurance that Gringer would open to us. To my alarm she resisted, twisting from my grasp. The policemen coming from the basement had heard the fall and were hurrying up, calling as they came. Our immediate friend was clawing at his hat.

"There was only one way and I took it. Snatching her opera cloak, I flung it about her head and half dragged, half carried her to the rear stairs. A woman, though she be slight and girlish, is not a burden easily handled, detectists to the contrary notwithstanding. Add that this woman did everything in her power to impede me and you will understand that my stumbling climb to the roof was made with difficulty. Before I had reached the garret the pursuit was in full cry behind me.

"There was a ladder leading to a hinged trapdoor as I found when I could hold the girl fast with one arm and flash an electric lamp. I slipped off it twice in trying to climb, thanks to my captive's persistent efforts. When I pushed her out on the roof and crawled after her I slammed the trapdoor upon the shoulders of the irritated gentleman with the battered head gear. The girl had fought against my rather brusque treatment, but she made no further attempt to escape as I sat upon the trap and secured it neatly with a gimlet.

"'That was poor judgment,' I puffed. 'Did you stop to think what it would have meant if they'd grabbled us?'

"She listened to the racket made below by our baffled pursuers, flushed and disordered and very handsome in the light of the new moon, then inspected me once more as she had in the hall before she answered. I was prepared for an outburst, a scathing denunciation such as would have been proper from a pretty woman after a violent abduction, or, failing that, a flood of tears at least. But she was once more illogical, and so, feminine after all.

"'I'm afraid I misunderstand you,' she said quietly, as she rearranged her cloak. 'When you treated me so—well, so unceremoniously, I simply resisted. But I prefer you to the other, whoever he was.'

"'Whoever he was!' I echoed. 'Are you still unconvinced? I tell you we have the police on our trail now. Didn't he say that he was going to arrest you, take you before the captain?'

"She considered this a moment, then nodded. 'But where is Martin, Mr. Spence?' she asked.

"'He must be home by now,' I answered, impatiently, as I finished driving home the gimlet. 'If you want the bald facts, he was in no condition to take care of himself, and Gringer had two of his men to carry him away over the fences before the raid.'

"'How do you know that?' she demanded, in a curious, repressed tone.

"'Gringer told me.'

"'Gringer lied,' she said, tensely. 'Listen. Martin is not home—has not been home for two weeks. I have a sure source of information. He has been kept here, locked up, by Gringer.' She stopped abruptly, and I looked my astonishment, recalling her former hint of this. 'But why should I tell it to you?' she went on. 'You must know all about it. Probably you were a partner to it.'

The Girl's Story.

"I scrambled to my feet, careless of the insistent tattoo below. 'My dear young lady,' I said earnestly, 'you wrong me. I was with Gringer when the raid occurred and went into hiding with him in a secret recess. From there I saw you drive up and I came out, taking the risk, to warn. You would not believe me and I have been led into assaulting the police to save you from them. Tell me what you think is wrong. You can count upon me further.'

"I was deeply interested and that obvious fact partly removed her suspicion of me. The level eyes sought mine more confidently. 'It is all true,' she said. 'I come from his sister, who is wild with anxiety about him. Gringer is holding him here.'

"'But if you'll tell me why?' I cried.

"'Acting on old Mr. Spence's orders—his father, you understand.'

"'Oh, come now!' I exclaimed. She stiffened again at my open incredulity.

"'After all, it doesn't matter,' she said coolly. 'You had better get away while you can. I intend to remain here until they open that trap. I have a perfect right to enter this house if I choose to. I can explain it all to the captain.'

"'I beg your pardon,' I said. 'I meant no offence, but your statement was so remarkable. As for your staying here, that is impossible. You will be arrested for aiding an attack on an officer.'

"For the first time she gave me a glimpse of the emotion that burned behind her thoroughbred repression and control. 'I will stay,' she cried, stamping her foot. 'He is here in this house and I will not leave until I find him.' At that instant the thumping at the trap changed to the grating note of an edged tool. The trap could not last another minute.

"'Pardon me again,' I said, stepping forward, 'but much as I regret it I must resume my former attitude. If you will not appreciate your danger I must simply carry you off again, save in spite of yourself.' I meant it, and as I stepped forward she shrank away. Then with another of those swift surprises that had bewildered me she yielded.

"'Very well,' she said. 'If you are to be my captor I would rather go quietly than have you touch me again.' She flashed her scorn of me, but there was no time for further argument. The trap heaved, and taking the girl by the wrist I fled across the roofs.

"There was only one high parapet, it turning up the avenue side, and she passively allowed me to lift her after me. I think that by now she had begun to sense my intention. We had gained the row on the next street, when, looking across and back, we saw a cluster of figures break out of Gringer's roof and spread in search of us. I held our course behind chimneys and through the shadows and stopped finally on the third house from the corner.

"'Do you know where we are?' I asked as we crouched and I gave my best attention to the scuttle.

"'It's the Spence house, isn't it?' she answered. It was, and a few seconds later I helped her down into the black well of the garret, drawing the cover after us. The quarry was safe for a time.

"'Stay here,' I whispered, 'while I investigate.' But her hand closed firmly on my arm in the darkness. She was with me now.

"'No,' she said. 'I know the house. I used to play as a child in this very garret. Come.' We went down through the silent halls, lighted by the cautious flicker of my torch. Apparently all the household had retired. At the rear of the third floor she paused outside a door.

In His Room.

"'This is his room?' I breathed. A pressure of her hand told me that I had caught her meaning. She remained outside and I entered, occupied even at such a moment with the hope that she might not notice how well I did it. The room was empty, the bed untouched.

"'You see?' she said, when I had communicated this news to her. 'I was right. He is still at Gringer's.'

"'Wait,' I answered. I knew that she must be wrong in that. I should have rejected her story altogether had it not been that she believed it. But it was impossible that Gringer could have blinded Marty Spence anywhere on the premises. My mind ran on to Gringer's account of how Lefty and Dick had tossed the scion of the Spences through the back yards like a sack of potatoes. Whether simply helpless from drink or really in captivity, some such course must have been followed.

"'Lead the way down to the rear door,' I whispered, and we crept again through the black mystery of the house. Certain wires and safety [illegible] we passed out into the open again. I would have left her again while I explored the yards, but she gave me a spirited negative.

"We crossed the garden and came, at the rear, upon a little summer house among the trees. Just as I was passing the tiny window, I caught, from within, a winking flare as from a match. I drew the girl to me and we looked inside. It was Lefty who had given away the game by lighting his pipe. Before he had completed that innocent operation we saw the whole group; Lefty and Dick sitting comfortably against the wall and Marty Spence between them in an attitude that spoke of utter dejection but certainly not of drink. A little gasp, eloquent of relief, was the girl's only comment as the match went out.

"I can testify that Lefty and Dick obeyed Gringer's instruction to 'look to themselves' whatever else happened. A flash of my torch at the window stampeded them and we stood clear of the door while they flew for the fences and away. The girl was ahead of me when we entered and I gave her every chance while she released the blinking Marty, who was certainly the most astonished man in four counties. I lighted the operation with my torch, carefully keeping in the background, for this was very nearly my cue to disappear. They had quite forgotten me in their mutual exclamations when I broke in.

"'Pardon me,' I said, 'but would you mind telling me what all this is about? Apparently you were right and Mr. Spence has his father to thank for his adventure. But why?'

"The girl stood up, turning a flushed and smiling face toward me. All her wonderful tenderness had vanished. But Marty did not volunteer to do her best. 'Well, you see—Martin—that is—his father was keeping him at Gringer's—er—until he'd promise to give up—something.'

"'What something?' I demanded.

"'Why—a certain engagement.'

"'Oh,' I said. 'And if I may be so blunt, who are you?'

"Marty came to the bat at the last. 'She's the girl I'm going to marry,' he said.

"'My son,' I said, as I reached for his hand, 'you must pardon me if I confine all my congratulations to you.'

"She made no further attempt to escape, as I sat upon the trap and secured it neatly with a gimlet."

EAST PETERBORO' LIBERALS HELD MEETING AT NORWOOD

Addresses Delivered by Members for Carleton, N.B., and the Yukon—Public Questions of Moment Discussed From the Liberal Viewpoint.

A meeting was held at Norwood last night under the auspices of the East Peterborough Liberal Association. A good sized audience was present at the town hall and before the opening of the meeting the Norwood band played several selections in the bandstand in front of the hall. Mr. William Buck president of the association, was in the chair and addresses were made by Messrs. F. B. Carvell, M.P., for Carleton, N.B.; F. T. Congdon, M.P., for the Yukon; R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., for West Peterborough, and D. O'Connell, of Peterborough.

After a few introductory remarks Mr. Buck called upon Mr. Hall to address the meeting.

CANADA'S TRADE RELATIONSHIP WITH U. S.

Mr. R. R. Hall's subject was "The Trade Relations Between Canada and the United States." He said that a short time ago the newspapers predicted that there would be a tariff war that would have practically paralysed the trade relations between Canada and the United States. But the sentiment against this strife was so strong in the United States that the Government at Washington made concessions to Mr. Fielding of a most valuable and important character to Canada. The speaker referred to the willingness of the U. S. to enter into a trade reciprocity treaty with Canada. Canada was the third best customer of United States and the public men of the country south of us had declared their willingness that a reciprocity treaty between Canada and the United States be established. The resources of Canada that were needed in United States were enumerated and it was a source of wonderment to the speaker that Canada and the United States had not entered into harmonious mutual trade relations some time ago. But now the United States were alive to the fact that Canada's immense trade under the British preference showed that the Dominion was taking its place as a dominating factor of the British Empire and a country of wide and rich resources. If better trade relations were established to the advantage of both Canada and the United States the mutual benefit would be enormous and Canada be vastly enriched.

UPHOLDS GOVERNMENT'S METHODS.

Mr. Carvell, M.P., for Carlton, N.B., congratulated the people of Norwood on their progressive and clean town and spoke of his pleasant associations with Mr. Finlay, the former member for East Peterboourgh. He had nothing to say against the present member—the only fault he had to find with him was that he was on the wrong side of the House.

Canada had grown greatly in the last few years and while he would not say that the Liberal Government was immaculate he was of the idea and opinion that it was the Government's same progressive policy that was chiefly responsible for the great strides Canada had taken. Two things essential in the development of any country were population and transportation. The speaker addressed the meeting at length on the immigration policy of the Government, which he held was in the best interests of the increase of the population of the country. Bonuses of $5 per head were being paid on highly desirable, industrious immigrants. During the next five years he thought from 300,000 to 500,000 ought to emigrate to Canada and it was difficult to estimate the great good this would bring to the country, especially in filling up the great Northwest.

The speaker admitted that the Government made a great mistake when it brought the Doukahbors into Canada but said it thought it was doing the right thing when it gave the downtrodden Christians of Russia a home.

When a country had attained some population good transportation was the next thing required, and the expenditures of the Government in transportation—both in the marine and railroad transportation facilities had been well directed and productive of great results. The Transcontinental was being built at an enormous cost, but it wasn't a question of whether the cost was high or low, it was a question of the results warranting the expenditure and of the labor being performed, skilfully and honestly. So far as any evidence could be produced the road had been honestly constructed and would be of the greatest benefit to Canada Mr. Carvell stated.

The extension of canals and the development of the inland waterways were strongly advocated, although it was bound to cost millions of dollars. We had a surplus of over $20,000,000 despite huge expenditures in the development of the country. Mr. Carvell defended the Government against scandal charges, and cited the recent drowned lands investigation in which a Hastings solicitor was concerned as an evidence of their lack of foundation. The speaker in conclusion paid a warm tribute to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

APPROVES OF CANADIAN NAVY.

Mr. D. O'Connell said the fact that there were two speakers present, one from the Yukon and one from the Maritime seaboard, showed what a wonderfully extensive and grand country Canada was. He spoke in high commendation of the addresses previously delivered, and referred to them as very educative and enlightening. Mr. O'Connell said that meetings of the kind being held were of a particularly beneficial character, inasmuch as they were held when the heat of campaigns were removed. While the speaker approved of the great underlying principles of the Conservative party, he was sure that the party had not lived up to its opportunities. The Liberal party were imbued with the spirit of the great Liberal party of England and upheld all its splendid traditions and caught the spirit of its wise administration. The speaker said he would endorse everything that had been so eloquently said of Sir Wilfrid Laurier by Mr. Carvell. He maintained that Canada had become a potent factor in the British Empire under the wise administration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party.

It was of the greatest importance that Canada should have its own navy as a striking example of the principle that Canada should control affairs of its own, and yet that it would loyally respond to the defence of the empire.

THAT LUMSDEN SCANDAL.

Mr. Congdon, the Yukon member, said the constituency he represented was over 4,000 miles from the town of Norwood.

Speaking of the Lumsden scandal, the speaker said that the details of it were presented in the Conservative press as though the Government had refused an investigation into the the things stated in Mr. Lumsden's letters. The test in regard to charges like these was to find out if the Government had used its best discretion in selecting the men (in connection with its public works and to make fair investigation into their work in case of complaint. It was absurd to hold the Government responsible for wrong classification that might happen to be made. The Railway Commission would faithfully discharge its duties.

He agreed with Mr. O'Connell about the distinction between the Liberal and Conservative parties and heartily supported his views on the navy. The speaker was not in favor of militarism, but he did believe that a country should be in a position to defend itself when the occasion rose.

Mr. Borden conceived that we should send $25,000,000 to the old land for a navy, (but strangely thought that if a Canadian navy were to be established all the people would have to vote upon it.

Horse Slipped

Just before one o'clock to-day as one of the horses of the Pulkinghorn livery was being returned to the stables, it slipped on the pavement and fell, breaking the left shaft of the buggy to which it was attached.

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

In the Spring Most People Need a Tonic Medicine

If you want new health and new strength in the spring you must build up your blood with a tonic medicine. Following the long indoor winter months most people feel depressed and easily tired. This means that the blood is impure and watery. It is this state of the blood that causes pimples and unsightly eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite, frequent headaches and a desire to avoid exertion. You can't cure these troubles by the use of purgatives; you need a tonic and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for their tonic, life-giving, nerve restoring powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood, which drives out impurities, stimulates every organ, and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired out, ailing men, women and children. If you are feeling out of sorts give this medicine a trial, it will not disappoint you. Mr. Paul Charbonneau, a young man well known in the town of St. Jerome, Que., is one of the host who bear testimony to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He says; "When I left school I became a book-keeper in an important office. Probably due to confinement I began to suffer from indigestion and loss of strength. I became pale and seemingly bloodless and was often seized with palpitation of the heart and violent headaches. I tried several remedies, but they did not do me a bit of good. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and did so, and the use of eight boxes brought me back to perfect health and strength. I have since enjoyed the best of health and cannot say too much in praise of this valuable medicine."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TWO DESPERADOES HOLD UP A TRAIN IN CALIFORNIA

China-Japan Mail is Stopped and Looted by Highwaymen —Engine is Then Turned Loose, Going at Full Speed—Cool Telegraph Operator Derails Engine and Saves Lives.

Benicia, Cal., April 18.—The China-Japan mail which left San Francisco over the Southern Pacific Railroad for the east at 9 o'clock Saturday night, was held up by two masked men at Sprig, two miles east of here, early yesterday and robbed of nine pouches of registered mail.

After getting the mail sacks, the robbers cut the engine loose from the train and sent it wild, throttle open, down the main track to the east. In the direct path of the engine was a section of passenger train No. 5, westbound, heavily loaded. A cool-headed telegraph operator at Suisun threw the engine into a ditch in the nick of time.

Four of the nine pouches stolen have been recovered, but the robbers rifled the others and now are hiding in the hills between Martines and Oakland. Sheriffs' posses from two counties and detectives and postoffice inspectors on horses and in automobiles are engage in the manhunt. The robbers were well armed and a battle is expected.

The passengers on the train were not disturbed and several of them did not learn of the robbery until the morning.

The train robbery was the first in California for several years. It was executed in spectacular fashion.

Before the fast mail arrived at Benicia, two men who had left Oakland ou another train, two hours earlier and had left their train on the Port Costa ferry, climbed, unobserved, on the rear end of the fast mail's locomotive. The train had gone less than three miles from Benicia, when the stowaways crawled over the oil tank of the tender, pointed revolvers at the heads of the engineer and firemen and ordered them to stop the engine and get off.

The engineer and fireman quickly complied. Then the robbers compelled them to get into the mail car, which was in charge of Herbert J. Black and his assistant, Thomas A. Clancy.

"Throw out the registered mail pouches," the robbers ordered. Black started to toss the newspapers sack, but the robbers detected the ruse at once and they threatened to kill him unless they gave them the registered mail. Black complied. The engine crew then was forced to carry the nine sacks to the engine.

The engine and mail car were uncoupled from the coaches filled with sleeping passengers and run down the track for two miles. Here the mail pouches were thrown out, the engine was uncoupled and its throttle pushed wide open. The engine dashed forward on its wild journey toward a passenger train coming westward to Tolenas, 16 miles east, passing the first section at a siding at Cygnus.

As the engine passed the station at Suisun, the operator noticed it was running wild. He immediately reported to the despatchers' office at Oakland and received instructions to call Tolenas and instruct them to derail the oncoming engine.

Second section of train No. 5, westbound, had just arrived at Tolenas, under orders to wait there for the China-Japan mail. The switch was thrown and the runaway engine, by this time pretty well relieved of steam, ran on a siding and smashed into a string of box cars.

TRY TO SCARE THE EMIGRANTS

North Portal, Sask., April 18.—Settlers arriving at North Portal from the south, give some weird accounts of stories given as facts by trainmen, commercial travelers and merchants along the Soo line in North Dakota. These people see the best class of farmers slipping from their grasp, so to speak, and do their best to deter the intending settler from moving any farther towards Canada, by circulating stories that horses are being shot by the carload by veterinary inspectors at the border; that hay cannot be procured by an ordinary man's purse, and that water is as high as one dollar a barrel. As a matter of fact less than one per cent. of horses are rejected by the inspectors, and the other reports are straight fiction.

WINNIPEG HAS A BAD STORM

Winnipeg, April 18.—The storm which struck Manitoba on Friday, continued without intermission throughout Saturday and Sunday. It is still blowing hard from the north with a heavy snowfall.

The telegraph service is maintained by the C.P.R. with some difficulty, but the G.N.W. service in this province has been utterly paralyzed since Friday morning.

To the south, in Northern Minnesota and the Dakotas, the Western Union is carrying on a very precarious service on a few wires.

SOCIALISTS OF PARIS GET BUSY

Paris, April 18.—The Socialists, the workingmen and the proletariat generally are just now in the throes of their annual spring fever of agitations and public demonstrations.

They are getting ready for a grand May Day manifestation of discontent, and this, together with an electioneering campaign of effervescence, makes the Parisian outlook exceedingly lively.

BALLOON STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Bitterhelt, Prussian Saxony, April 18.—The balloon Delitsch, which ascended here Saturday evening, fell to the earth near the village of Reichensachson, about twenty miles northeast of Eisenach, in a thunderstorm. The crew, consisting of four men, were killed.

The balloon passed over Eisenach at midnight and soon drifted into a thunderstorm. It is assumed that it was struck by lightning and that the gas exploded. The envelope was in tatters when found and the car wrecked.

STRANGE DEATH OF A YOUNG GIRL

Weston, April 18.—Blowing up a bladder of a football ended fatally to Sarah Dunn, aged 18, of Elia, near Weston, on Friday afternoon. She was stricken with convulsions while blowing. Several of the men heard groans in the house and found the girl. She died a few minutes after Dr. E. F. Irwin of Weston, arrived. Death is thought to have been caused by the breakage of a blood vessel, due to strain.

The girl was the daughter of Mrs. Francis Dunn of Lakeview avenue, Fairbank. She was in the employ of Mr. Baker of Elia. The body was brought in to Harry Ellis, the undertaker, to be prepared for burial. The funeral will be held from the residence of her sister, Mrs. O'Brien, Fairbank.

CONTROVERSY OVER JACK THE RIPPER

London, April 18.—George Kebbell, a lawyer, denies Sir Robert Anderson's assertion that Jack the Ripper was a Jew. He says the Ripper was an Irishman, educated to be a physician, who had been discarded by his relatives. He was a fireman on a cattle boat and was suspected of the Ripper crimes. The police watched him and arrested him in the act of mutilating a victim. Mr. Kebbell says he defended the prisoner at his preliminary hearing. The prisoner was not represented by counsel at his trial at the Old Bailey, where he was sentenced. He died in prison.

SUFFRAGISTS ORGANIZED IN ONTARIO

Toronto, April 18.—The Provincial Legislative Suffrage Association has been organized with the following officers: President, Mrs. Emma Lawlor, Dutton; first vice-president, Mrs. Henry Billings; second vice-president, Dr. Abbie Walker; secretary, Mrs. Hazel Wagner; treasurer, Rev. Penry Billings.

Chairman of the medical committee, Dr. Margaret Gordon; of the visiting committee, Dr. Margaret Johnston; of the reception committee, Dr. Stowe, Gullen.

Miss Olivia Smith, who created the "scene" at the closing of the last session of the Legislature, has been appointed organizer. A weekly letter will be sent to the newspapers, and Ontario ministers will be asked to give a Sunday annually to the cause.

OBJECT LESSON FOR ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS

Paris, April 18.—Mme. Marguerita Durand, a candidate for the Chamber of Deputies, from one of the Paris districts, has conceived the novel electioneering scheme.

Saturday night she announced widely that she would appear in joint debate with Charles Marest, "one of the candidate against her." Men were in the great majority at the crowded meeting when Mme. Durand walked to the platform, accompanied by a man, whom she introduced as Marest. It was immediately apparent that the man was a hopeless idiot. Mme. Durand had had his name registered as a candidate.

The brainy woman began her speech, while the man, poor imbecile, grinned and chattered.

"Marest is an interesting medical case," said Mme. Durand, calmly. "There's no harm in bringing him here, for he does not understand what is going on and he rather enjoys being conspicuous.

"I wish only to give you an object lesson. The law allows this idiot to vote and to be a candidate for the Chamber of Deputies. By this side stands a woman in the full force of her intelligence and yet she is denied the privileges he has by law."

THREW WIFE OVER FALLS AT NIAGARA

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 18.—Walking into police headquarters at Antioch, Illinois, Foster Johnson, an Indian, confessed to having thrown his wife over Niagara Falls Oct. 4, 1904. The confession has caused a sensation here. On the evening named, after a big parade, held by the Knights Templar, it was reported that the body of an unknown woman had gone over the falls, and on Oct. 13 Sampson Williams reported that his sister, Mrs. Emma Johnson, had been missing since Oct. 4, saying that he feared his sister might have "been foully dealt with." Mrs. Johnson was 38 years old, and was engaged in selling Indian novelties to tourists. On Oct. 23 the body was recovered. At an inquest a verdict of suicide was returned. It was brought out then that Mrs. Johnson had several times upbraided her husband for alleged attentions to other women.

Johnson told the Antioch police that he had been in constant fear of detection.

PROPOSALS OF PENAL REFORM

London, April 18.—Hugh Courtenay Luttrell, M.P., has introduced a bill in Parliament proposing sweeping changes in England's mediaeval criminal sentences. The bill proposes the abolition of the death sentence upon minors, penal servitude instead of execution for infanticide, the abolition of the black cap when a judge is imposing a sentence of death, religious service for convicts on the eve of execution, the prohibition of solitary confinement in all prisons, and the abolition of corporal punishment except between the ages of 10 and 16. The bill recommends the appointment of women on the board of prison commissioners.

TROUBLE AHEAD FOR THE GREAT UNWASHED

London, April 18.—Nothing daunts London's County Council. It now intends to enforce its extraordinary powers, secured three years ago, and hunt out the great unwashed. Its doctors will examine the persons and clothing of the inmates of the common lodging houses. When either is found in a foul condition, the owner will be compelled to submit himself and his clothing to a washing within twenty-four hours.

VEGETARIANISM IS FASHIONABLE

London, April 18.—Society's latest fad is vegetarianism. A new vegetarian restaurant to be opened shortly will be under the patronage of many smart women. The Duchess of Westminster, the Duchess of Portland and Dean Wilberforce have promised to attend the inauguration, while others are planning lunches and dinners at the new restaurant, which is to be run in an extravagantly luxurious manner. The daintiest meatless dishes will tempt jaded appetites. The finest wines will be served by beautiful girls tastefully dressed.

Mrs Grover Cleveland

A Washington, D. C., despatch says;—The Senate Committee on Pensions agreed to report favorably bills to grant pensions of $5,000 a year to Frances F. Cleveland, widow of President Grover Cleveland, and Mary Lloyd Harrison, widow of President Benjamin Harrison. At the same time the committee declined to report a bill which would place President Roosevelt on the retired list as commander in chief of the army and navy, and give him $10,000 a year for the remainder of his life.

NEW HARBOR IS STARTED

Montreal's Shipping Improvements Began This Morning.

Montreal, April 18.—Major G. W. Stephens, who returned yesterday from Europe, announced that work on the great Montreal harbor scheme was being started to-day, and that an expenditure of $1,500,000 annually will be made for about four years.

The commissioners working harmoniously with the Government, will produce results that will give Montreal an open port eight instead of six months in the year.

The section to be started this year will be the raising of the Victoria from a low to a high level wharf, giving accommodation for 25 instead of 20 large ocean steamers in the port proper, the construction of a high level double track railway from Victoria Pier eastward seven miles, to be eventually taken all round the island, besides dredging a good portion of the harbor.

The chairman says that there is no doubt whatever, with improved ice breakers, the announcement can be made to the world that two months of navigation can be added to the present time.

Two new steamship lines, the Canadian Northern and the Allan line from Naples, will send their boats to Montreal this year.

Speaking of Montreal's importance as a shipping point, he says that the terminals here of the C.P.R., G.T.R. and O.N.R. embrace 1,800 square acres.

THE MAD MULLAH.

Aden, April 17.—The fierce campaign of Mohammed Abdullah of Somaliland, "the Mad Mullah," against the Sultanates under British protection, continues unchecked. Eight hundred of the tribesmen friendly to the Sultanates have been slaughtered, vast areas laid waste and towns razed. Natives in great numbers are fleeing to the coast. It is expected here that this will lead to another expedition against "The Mad Mullah," who has caused the British government great anxiety for many years.

Mohammed Abdullah started his campaign early in February, a large force of dervishes raiding the Sultanate of the Mijertins, killing and burning in all directions. The administration of this Sultanate is entrusted to the government of Italian Somaliland. "The Mad Mullah" began stirring up the natives of Somaliland after making a pilgrimage of Mecca in 1896. After much fighting an agreement was reached in 1905 whereby the Mullah undertook to observe peace towards both Great Britain and Italy.

POEM GETS YOUNG ENGLISHMAN OUT OF A WESTERN PRISON

John Carter, Serving Ten Years For Burglary, is Pardoned Because of His Notable Contributions to Magazines Since His Incarceration.

St. Paul, Minn., April 18.—A young Englishman, known as "John Carter," who has served half of a ten-year sentence for burglary, and whose case attracted wide attention because of his poetic genius, was freed by the state pardon board Saturday afternoon. He will be released from the Stillwater Penitentiary as soon as the papers are made out, which will be Monday morning, April 18, which is his 26th birthday.

Pleas for Carter's freedom were made by Judge J. W. Willis and Rev. L. R. S. Ferguson of St. Paul. Telegrams and letters were read before the board from magazine editors.

Harry Phillips, director of music at McAlester College, who had become interested in Carter through his playing at the services in the prison chapel, and the managing editor of a Minneapolis journal also sent letters. Judge Willis read a letter from a man in England who knew of Carter as a boy, and who told of the condition of his father, the refinement of the family and the reasons the boy had been sent to Canada.

The young poet admits that Carter is not his real name, but says that he is an Englishman and of good family. He will not divulge his family name. He says that his poems, which have been published in a number of leading magazines, and have attracted considerable attention, were written to kill time and ease unhappy thought. His poem, "Ballad of Misery and Iron," won his especial recognition.

According to a statement made before the pardon board by Judge Willis, Carter was less than twenty years old when the crime was committed. His father was in an asylum, and John, who had been working in a bank building, not liking the confinement, was sent to Canada by the family, who were in straightened circumstances, to learn farming.

Being unable to secure steady employment, Carter started to "beat it" from Winnipeg to St. Paul, but during the night was put off the train at Karlastadt, Minn., having had nothing to eat for 36 hours. Carter broke into the railroad station and stole $24 and a silver watch. He was caught, pleaded guilty, and having no attorney, was given the maximum penalty of ten years.

During his confinement, Carter had been employed in the prison library cataloging books and assisting in the publishing of the prison "Mirror." He also is a pianist and plays a clarionette in the prison band.

Carter's Identity a Secret.

London, April 18.—There is little prospect of the identity of John Carter, being revealed here, as after consultation with the young man's relatives, Cyril Thomas, the erstwhile friend and adviser of Carter, said yesterday that the sacrifice would be too much.

Mr. Thomas personally favored telling the whole story, realizing that publicity might help considerably toward Carter's pardon, but he could not act without the relatives' sanction.

A family conference was held yesterday afternoon, at which it was decided that, while it might help Carter to get a release, the dragging of the family name and honor through the mud was not to be thought of, more especially as it would prejudice the young man's future.

Mr. Thomas said that Carter had been cut from his family by reason of wrongdoing. They refused to have anything to do with him personally, although very likely provision would be made for him on his release from prison.

BRITISH LIBERALS HOPEFUL AS RESULT OF VICTORY

Premier's Announcement on Thursday Has Brought Enthusiasm Into the Ministerialists in Britain—The Public Are Taking Notice.

New York, April 18.—A special cable to The Times from London says:

Premier Asquith's statement of the Government policy, made on Thursday in the House of Commons, has raised his supporters to the highest pitch of enthusiasm and has depressed his opponents to the lowest depths of desperate fury.

The Liberal leader has won a complete victory in the game of party politics which has been going on ever since the general election. He got the Unionists in a tight place between the devil of the dissolution of Parliament in the middle of the London season, which is particularly undesirable from a Conservative point of view, and the deep sea of acceptance of office under conditions precluding any possibility of carrying on the official business of the country.

In the event of another general election, he clearly defined the issues which will be fought out, and made it almost impossible for the Unionists to befog them or complicate them with questions such as tariff reform and naval extension. He has given the Opposition one solitary and very feeble battle cry. Only on Wednesday Mr Balfour begged his supporters not to allow their attention to be diverted from the questions of tariff reform to that of the House of Lords. Mr. Asquith has now succeeded in bringing the House of Lords so prominently into the foreground that the Balfourites will, in case of a general election this summer, be forced to take up the cry of "No single chamber Government!" And there is not one Englishman in a thousand who really believes that the Liberal party desires any such thing.

Another feature in Mr. Asquith's triumph is that he has enlisted the attention of the country. As a Conservative weekly yesterday admits, out of forty-five or fifty million people in the country possibly three thousand have followed the recent proceedings in the House of Commons. The public interest taken in Parliamentary manoeuvering has been infinitesimal. All the diatribes of the Unionist organs during recent weeks have fallen on barren soil. Now a note has been sounded, which all Liberal papers of all shades of opinion describe as a clarion cry to victory at the polls.

WOMAN KILLED BY STREET CAR

Welland, April 18.—Mrs. (Dr.) Hunter Robb was killed Saturday night at Cleveland, Ohio, in a street car accident. She was a prominent medical and hospital woman, at one time superintendent of the Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore.

She was formerly Miss Addie Hampton of Welland. The funeral will be held here on Tuesday.

CHURCH AND SIXTEEN HOUSES DESTROYED

Montreal, April 18.—The Protestant Church at St. Eustache and sixteen houses were destroyed by fire yesterday in that town.

The fire started in a woodyard and it soon got beyond the control of the local brigade. When firemen from Montreal reached the town by special train, they saved the town from further destruction, as there was an ample water supply.

The Anglican church was a stone building, and, although the burned houses were of wood, the loss reaches $40,000. The insurance is small. St. Eustache is an historic village, being a hot bed of insurrection in 1837, Dr. Chennier, the local leader, being shot in the church belfry by British troops.

WRECK CAUSED BY A CYCLONE

Manchester, Ga., April 18.—The Town of Woodland, nine miles south of Manchester, on the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic Railroad, experienced a destructive cyclone Saturday afternoon, practically every house in the town being more or less seriously damaged.

Five cars of a side-tracked freight were blown over on to the main line and a moment later another freight dashed into them, making kindling wood of the box cars.

Southern Illinois, Virginia, Kentucky and Missouri also report heavy damage from wind, rain and hail storms.

WAS CHARGED WITH SELLING GIFT TICKET

London, April 18.—When Mrs. Mary Fry came before Magistrate Love Saturday for trial on the charge of fraud in selling a railway ticket which Inspector Sanders of the Children's Aid Society gave her to Toronto, she pleaded not guilty, instead of guilty, as expected.

Crown Attorney McKillop, after a conference with the magistrate, decided that he could not succeed on a fraud charge. Then it was decided that no action for theft could be taken. Under the Railway Act the woman is liable for selling ticket, but no charge was laid, so she was dismissed.

CANADIAN SHOT HIS LANDLORD

London, April 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Bert Hunter, said to be a Canadian horsedealer, shot his landlord, named Charles Schofield, and his wife, at Stoke Newington, late Saturday night. Schofield is dead and his wife badly wounded. Hunter suicided. It is stated he was the owner of land in Alberta, where his wife is staying. An unlucky speculation, with a legacy, turned his head. He declared that Schofield was the cause of his ruin and left a letter for the coroner to that effect.

SOCIALISM AND ANARCHY

Toronto, April 18.—Prof. J. C. Hume of Toronto University treated the Mutual Welfare Society, Sunday afternoon, to a most interesting address on "Socialism and Anarchy," and in the course of his remarks defined nihilism as a purely destructive policy, anarchy as a system embodying greater hopes and altruism, and the socialism of to-day as a policy of more practical worth than either anarchy or nihilism. The speaker said that whilst in many ways he favored the socialistic platform of to-day, he deprecated its purely industrial basis, and advocated a greater consideration of the political and moral aspects of the situation.

WHY DECEIVE THE PEOPLE?

Mr. R. R. Hall, speaking to the Liberals of Norwood on the subject of "The Trade Relations Between Canada and the United States," said that the United States Government had made important tariff concessions to Canada in return for the tariff reductions made by Canada. Surely Mr. Hall is acquainted with the fact that the United States did not change a single item of its tariff on Canadian products imported into the United States! Why then does he try to deceive the people? Evidently he believed that the people of Norwood would not approve of Canada giving something for nothing, and so he tried to give his audience the impression that Mr. Fielding had secured tariff reductions from the United States in return for the reductions made in the Canadian tariff to please President Taft.

RECIPROCITY IN NATURAL PRODUCTS

Senator Root has expressed himself as strongly in favor of reciprocity in favor of natural products. He says:—"The time has passed for reciprocity in manufactured products. Canada has adopted a policy of protection for her manufactured products, but there is unquestionably deep interest among several millions of people of both countries in bringing about a mutually satisfactory understanding regarding reciprocity in natural products."

The old reciprocity treaty between Canada and the United States affected natural products only. No manufactured goods were included, and as a matter of fact, the Canadian tariff on manufactured goods was raised during the treaty period. The protection thus given to manufactured goods caused the establishment of a number of manufacturing industries in the country. At the time of Confederation the tariff was lowered to please the people of the Maritime Provinces, but in 1879 the National Policy tariff of Canada was adopted. That tariff contained a standing offer of reciprocity in natural products. However, the outlook of Canada has changed since then. Immense sums of Canadian money have been expended in constructing railways to carry traffic east and west. Great steamship lines have been established on Canadian routes. A treaty of reciprocity in natural products would to a considerable extent disarrange all the existing business arrangements for handling Canadian food products.

Moreover, even if the arrangement proved advantageous to Canada there would be no certainty that it would last. After inducing us to abandon our present arrangements by which we send our surplus food products to Britain, the United States Congress might suddenly abrogate the arrangement just as the old reciprocity treaty was abrogated, thus disorganizing Canadian business.

JAPAN AND PERU

If there is any truth in the statement that Japan and Peru have entered into an alliance, it is the most important news of the day. It is stated that Japan has offered aid to Peru in her threatened war with Ecuador in exchange for concessions from Peru. What the concessions to Japan are is not stated. In confirmation of the report it is stated that one thousand Japanese residents of Peru, most of them veterans of the Russian war, have volunteered their services in case of war, and a Japanese army engineer has been arrested as a spy at Guayaquil, Ecuador.

In some respects the Ancient Peruvians were similar to the Japs. In modern Peru there is a very large admixture of Spanish blood. Before the Spaniards arrived in America the Peruvians were a great people and in many respects highly civilized. Prescott's history of Peruvian civilization and the conquest of Peru by the Spaniards is as fascinating as any novel. There is little doubt that if this remarkable people had been left undisturbed by the Spaniards and allowed to become familiar with European civilization as quietly as the Japanese did, they would be as great a nation now as the Japanese are.

An alliance between Japan and Peru which would encourage Japanese emigration to that country might have momentous consequences in the future. The Japanese are multiplying rapidly. Their country is small. They need room to expand. Entrance to Canada and the United States is almost completely barred to them. If they should go in large numbers to South America they may have a very great influence there, and it is not certain that they would respect the Monroe Doctrine if the temptation to annex territory should arise in the future.

It has often been said that Germany may yet defy the United States and annex territory in South America, but Japan has not heretofore been thought of as a menace of the Monroe Doctrine.

NOT LIKE BRITISH LIBERALS

Not Like British Liberals—

One of the speakers at the Liberal meeting in Norwood Friday night said that the Liberal party of Canada was imbued with the spirit of British Liberalism. He did not explain what principles of British Liberalism the Laurier Government are carrying out. There are certain questions that divide parties in Britain that are not political questions in Canada. There is the educational question, for instance, Canada has had its educational question, but it was altogether different from that of the United Kingdom, and the only thing that can be said of the Laurier education policy is that Sir Wilfrid promised one thing while in opposition, induced thousands of Conservatives to vote against their party because of his promises, and when in got into power did exactly the opposite of what he promised to do. Did the speaker at the Norwood meeting mean that the Liberals of the United Kingdom had deceived the British people on the education question, and got into power by false promises? The British Liberals would not thank him for comparing their record on the education question with that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Then there is the liquor question! The license laws of England are so different from those of Canada that no comparison can be made regarding the attitude of British and Canadian political parties in that regard. Canada is in advance of the United Kingdom in restricting the liquor traffic. The Dominion Parliament and Government have no jurisdiction over licenses, although they have the right to entirely prohibit the liquor traffic. In the provinces the most effective work in the direction of restriction has been accomplished by Conservative administrations. Before he got into power Sir Wilfrid Laurier secured the votes of many prohibitionists for Liberal candidates by promising that if the Liberals got into power they would take a plebiscite on the prohibition question, and if a majority of the people favored prohibition he would carry out the will of the people. The plebiscite was taken, for Sir Wilfrid supposed that a majority of the people would vote against prohibition, and that he would thus be rid of an embarrassing question. But, to his surprise, the majority of the people voted in favor of prohibition, and he was obliged to let his prohibition friends know that he had no intention of giving them what they wanted. Would the British Liberals like to have it said that Premier Asquith would try to deceive the temperance men in England in the same way that Sir Wilfrid Laurier tried to deceive the temperance men of Canada?

As regards the dispute between the British Liberal party and the House of Lords, no political party in this country would favor a hereditary legislative body. There is no difference of opinion between Canadian political parties on that question. But it should be noted that when the Canadian Liberals were in opposition one of the chief planks of their platform was the complete reform or abolition of the Canadian Senate, which is the nearest approach to the House of Lords which Canada has ever had. Would the Liberals of Britain like to have it said that Premier Asquith would carry out his promises regarding the reform of the House of Lords in the same way that Sir Wilfrid Laurier carried out his promises to reform the Canadian Senate?

When the Canadian Liberals were in opposition they denounced protection in the most emphatic language, and said if they were placed in power they would give Canada "free trade as they have it in England." The British Liberals are now denouncing the Unionist proposals for protection and Imperial preference. Would they like to have it said that if maintained in office they would abandon their free trade principles and give the United Kingdom as large a measure of protection as the Laurier Government is giving Canada?

Imagine the indignation of the British Liberal party if anyone said that the British Liberal Government would follow the example of the Canadian Liberals in saying that ordinary clay should be classed as rock in excavation work, and that contractors should be paid rock prices for clay excavation, although their contracts provided that for clay excavation they should get only one-sixth as much as for rock excavation!

Would not any member of the British Liberal Ministry think he was insulted if an opponent charged that he would make such dredging contracts as are made by Hon. Mr. Pugsley with the approval of Sir Wilfrid Laurier?

What would Lloyd George say if anyone suggested that he would pay out five thousand dollars of public money or its equivalent in British gold for a useless sawdust wharf that cost only seven hundred dollars, as Mr. Pugsley did?

How many British Liberals would stand for the policy of cheating poor Indians out of their lands and allowing party favorites to acquire them for a trifling amount, and sell them at a great advance, making big fortunes thereby?

What would the British Liberals think of the disgraceful deals in timber areas that have characterized the administration of the Canadian Department of the Interior?

Would not the British Liberals be ashamed if the Asquith Government were responsible for the awful Quebec bridge disaster and the disgraceful arrangements made by the Laurier Government with the Quebec Bridge Company?

Is there, in fact, anything whatever in the whole record of the Laurier Government that the British Liberals would be proud to say that they had done themselves?

MR. STRATTON ON BETTING

(Toronto Saturday Night.)

It is not edifying to see an intelligent man, like Mr. Stratton, whose convictions against race meetings must be of very recent origin, if they exist at all, talking like a demagogue in support of the Miller Bill. Is it in the hope that people will forget some things?

SEVEN STONES IN HERD-BUILDING

Important Dairy Bulletin Issued by Department of Agriculture

1. Milking clean—To obtain all that a cow can give, and to prevent early drying off.

2. Use of pure bred sire—From strain of large producers, to acquire good qualities and perpetuate dairy tendencies. Of what value is a "scrub"?

3. Regular and careful feeding—As to time, quantity and quality, adjusting the grain ration to the production of milk and butterfat; to get the utmost value for the foodstuff grown or purchased.

4. Providing succulent feed — As roots, ensilage and soiling crops, to sustain and prolong the flow of milk.

5. Culling out poor cows—No one wants them either to feed or breed from. Beef them.

6. Good care—Including kind treatment and everything conducive to comfort, cleanliness and health so as to give the cow an opportunity to work to the best advantage. Better methods, not necessarily much outlay of cash.

Keeping records—All the foregoing naturally hinges on records; a knowledge of each cow's performance and capacity is the prime necessity for increasingly profitable production a mere estimate may be far astray and gives no basis on which to work intelligently, guess work is not unbusinesslike, but a careful record supplies information of the utmost value at every turn. Record forms are supplied free on application to the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa.

"Of course. But that's not the question any longer. It often happens in life that it's your duty to spend on some one else the money which you wouldn't be justified in wasting on yourself. That's the position here. If your only thought was of what you were to get you wouldn't do it. You'd be the man who was gaining the whole world and losing his own soul. I'm sorry to say that that was the light in which I looked at it in June. I didn't see that there was another side to it. I thought of Paula only as a Trafford, and I didn't realize that good things could come even out of Nazareth. Now I feel as if life couldn't be long enough to make her the necessary reparation."

She stopped, with a little quiver in her voice. Bending her head, she made sharp tiny strokes on the unfinished miniature before her.

"But we must be clear in advance," she pursued after a few minutes of silence, "that the price you'd have to pay would be a heavy one. You mustn't be blind to that fact now and indignant when the world calls you to the reckoning afterward. In the first place, you'll be looked upon as a successful fortune hunter. Oh, you needn't frown, because no one outside the Traffords and ourselves will have any other opinion about you. They'll ignore the fact that Paula is a girl whom any man might be eager to marry for herself. Even our own best friends won't give you the benefit of the doubt in this case."

"I shall be able to live without it," he interrupted dryly.

"Of course you will. But you won't be able to live without many a twinge of pain arising from the fact. And there'll be even worse, Roger. In our little group of intimates, where you've been the chief, where your ideas have converted so many to sane and simple views of life, where you've inspired them to go home and fight against greed and corruption and to work for whatever is pure and lovely in American life, from the aspect of the streets to the attitude of the mind—there you'll be looked upon as worse than a lost leader, as more despicable than a turncoat. After all, a man has a right to change his mind and to adopt new principles if he wants to, but they won't allow you that privilege. You'll be considered simply as a traitor—as the man who denied his faith and went over to the enemy for the sake of a big price. There again you'll be able to live without their good opinion. The very magnitude of your fortunes will enable you to do that, but you must face the trial of becoming the object of their scorn and of being made to feel it. The very fact that you'll be so far removed from your old friends in circumstances will make you want to cling to them all the more in heart, and they'll reject you."

Winship still puffed pensively at his pipe, looking far away into the dark seas of the long, dimly lighted room.

"And yet," she continued, speaking calmly, "you wouldn't be the first man to live under the unjust condemnation of the world. It isn't so hard if you once steel yourself to do it. It will be easier in your case than in most, for the simple reason that in your position you'll be surrounded by a host of new friends and flatterers who'll stand well between you and those you've left behind. Besides, there will be a lot of people by whom you will be treated with sincere respect as the man who got the best of the great Paul Trafford. You will be the conqueror's conqueror, and that fact alone will give you a high place among those whose approval you despise. But, having won that, you'll have to live up to it. Having accepted the position, you'll have to show yourself equal to it. It tasks. All your own simple tastes and habits of life must be abandoned. You'll have to give up your art"—

"No!" he thundered, bringing his clinched hand down on the table.

"Yes, Roger. You need only reflect a minute to see how incongruous your art will have become in your new surroundings. An artist is essentially a worker, a toiler and relatively a poor man. You, on the contrary, will have become one of the few very rich men in the whole world. You can see at once how absurd it would be to go on painting portraits at $5 or $10 or even $20,000 apiece. In the first place, you'd be taking the bread out of other men's mouths, and, in the second, your new duties wouldn't allow you the time. The first thought of a man as rich as you will be must be his money—the care of it, the spending of it or even the giving of it away. But, on the other hand, you'll have Paula. There'll be that compensation at least. If there's to be a revolution in your life it will be the kind of revolution that comes to a man when he's torn away from the interests of this world to go and live in heaven."

Marsh said much more, but Winship followed with only a wavering attention. When Marsh went to bed he paced up and down the studio thinking. He passed from himself to the thought of the beloved art he must abandon with the rest. He had not accepted Marsh's opinion when she first expressed it, but little by little, as he reflected, he saw that she was right. The hugely wealthy portrait painter would be futile and anomalous. Art was in some sense the daughter of necessity, and he would become incapable of work when he had entered into the Nirvana of Paul Trafford's money.

He went about the room, taking up and laying down the familiar objects connected with his painting. It seemed to him already as if he came back to them like a disembodied spirit, unable to handle them any more. He drew the cloth away from the newly finished portrait on the easel and stood gazing at it as if bidding it a mute farewell. When he lit his candle and went to bed he knew that his mind was made up. He knew, in fact, that it had been made up from the beginning. Whatever might be his pain at forsaking his old life, he could have no real hesitation when Paula had need of him to make hers anew.

On Thursday afternoon he went to give Trafford his reply.

For father and daughter the intervening time had passed in a kind of lull. From the fact that Trafford said nothing of the purpose of Winship's previous visit Paula gathered that something was in suspense. As Trafford watched her it seemed to him that she was better and brighter, as if her new freedom had brought her relief already. Her step was lighter as she went about the house, and in her cheek there was a tinge of color like the first hint of coming dawn. When at luncheon on Thursday he asked her to remain at home during the afternoon her blush betrayed the knowledge that some decisive moment was approaching.

Trafford waited in the small sitting room that had been his wife's, adjoining Paula's boudoir.

"It's a queer world," he mused, "and we old ones have tumbled into the midst of a strangely constructed generation. I'll be hanged if I can understand it. Here's a young fellow who, I suppose, is typical of the twentieth century hesitating to marry the loveliest girl and the biggest fortune in the world. By gad, it was different in my time! It's true that in my time there were no such heaps of money lying around to be scooped up with a wedding ring. I've set the new pace in that. I've piled up wealth till the very thought of it is staggering, and it's just as if nobody wanted it."

He smiled bitterly to himself as he made the reflection, while there floated through his mind a verse of the Scriptures that had found a place in his memory, he knew not how:

"For man walketh in a vain shadow and disquieteth himself in vain; he heapeth up riches and cannot tell who shall gather them."

"It's almost as if those words were written for me," he mused on. "I've done the thing, and what's the good of it after all? I've heaped up the riches, but who's to gather them? Paula would rather be rid of the money than take it; George has as much as he knows what to do with; I go begging to old Roger Winship's son to take the stuff off my hands, and he hesitates to do me the favor. Lord, if I could wave a fairy wand and conjure it all back to where it came from I'll be blowed if I wouldn't do it! It's a curious Nemesis to overtake a man like me. I've had the most stupendous luck that any one ever had on earth, and now I can only say that I've walked in a vain shadow and disquieted myself in vain."

Winship came at 4. From the manner of his entering Trafford knew that this much of the cause was won. He strode in, looking very tall, erect and grave, and held out his hand. Trafford rose and took it, with sudden gravity on his part. For a few seconds they stood with hands clasped, staring each other in the eyes. It was difficult for either to find words to express the situation.

"You needn't say anything," Trafford said at last as they moved apart. "I know you mean to do it and that you'll do it well. It will be for me to show that I appreciate your action."

"It will only be necessary for each of us to remember that whatever we do we do for Paula's sake, to make what's difficult easy."

"That's well spoken, Winship. You can trust me not to forget it, as I am sure you won't. Now let me call her."

When she appeared on the threshold the scene brought back so painfully her similar entry on the similar occasion in June that Trafford hastened forward and took her by the hand.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS

Cause. Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness.

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. I took a full dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it seizes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute.

AMOY'S GRAVEYARDS.

The City and the Cemeteries Are Hopelessly Intermingled.

The city of Amoy is on an island of the same name. For upward of 1,000 years it has been an important trading place. The population of the island is estimated at over 400,000, and it has been said that there are something like 5,000,000 dead bodies packed in its soil. For many centuries the hillsides of the city have been used as a burying ground. Now the city and the cemetery are hopelessly mixed. The graves touch one another at every point and form a solid white surface of rock, brick, porcelain and cement, covering more than 1,000,000 square feet. Near one of the less houses 30,000 bodies are buried vertically to save space. They stand on a plot of ground of as many feet square.

The wells from which the city draws its water supply are shallow and are sunk on the edge of graveyards and even among the tombs themselves. The water is muddy and is colored by the perpetual turning up of the soil. It has no sewers, and the streets vary from two feet to six feet in width. No wheeled vehicles can use them. Here and there is an open place or plaza, dug out so as to be a huge receptacle into which the streets discharge their refuse. Filth abounds, and its twin sister, disease, flourishes. The atmosphere is laden with noxious smells, and the burial of the dead goes on at an alarming rate.

The Zulu Diamond Miner.

As showing the loyalty of the Zulu diamond miners Sir William Crookes described an amusing incident which came to his knowledge when at Kimberley. The Zulu had been superintending a gang of natives on a small claim at the river, washings." It yielded but few stones, and the owner sold the claim, handing over the plant and the small staff, the Zulu remaining to look after the business till the new owner took possession. In the course of a few months the purchaser became dissatisfied with his bargain, not a single diamond having turned up since the transfer. One night the Zulu came to his old master in a mysterious manner and, laying a handful of diamonds on the table, said: "There, boss, are your diamonds. I was not going to let the new man have any of them!"

BAGGING A BIG TIGER

The Jungle Monarch Was Trapped Lolling In His Bath.

A FEAT OF MARKSMANSHIP.

Only the Brute's Head Showed Above the Water, and the Well Placed Bullet, Fired From an Elephant, Entered the Nostril and Broke His Neck.

An interesting account of a tiger hunt is given by one who had a wide experience in hunting this most dangerous of beasts. Mounted upon elephants, the writer and his companions had been beating the jungle without making a find until, as they were about to give up the search, a sudden disturbance among the elephants appeared to betoken a tiger near at hand. Giving directions to the others as to the order of marching their elephants, the writer ordered his mahout to turn into the thick feathered foliage to the left in search of a pool of water which he remembered to be there.

There was a slight descent to a long but narrow hollow about fifty or sixty yards wide. This was filled with clear water for an unknown length.

I was just about to make a remark when, instead of speaking, I gently grasped the mahout by the head as I leaned over the howdah and by this signal stopped the elephant.

There was a remarkable sight. About 120 yards distant on my right the head and neck of a large tiger, clean and beautiful, reposed above the surface of the water, while the body was cooling, concealed from view. Here was our friend enjoying his quiet bath, while we had been pounding away up and down the jungles which he had left.

"Fire at him," whispered the mahout, "or you will lose him! He will see us and be off."

"Hold your tongue!" I answered. "He can't see us, for the sun is at our back and is shining in his eyes. See how green they are."

At this moment the tiger quietly rose from his bath and sat up on end like a dog. I never saw such a sight. His head was beautiful, and the eyes shone like two green electric lights as the sun's rays reflected from them, but his huge body was dripping with muddy water, as he had been reclining upon the alluvial bottom.

For quite a minute the tiger sat up in the same position. At last, as if satisfied that he was in safety and seclusion, he once more lay down with only the head and neck exposed above the surface.

"Back the elephant gently, but do not turn around," I whispered. Immediately the elephant backed through the feathery tamarisk without the slightest sound, and we found ourselves outside the jungle. We could breathe freely.

"Go on, now, quite gently till I press your head, then turn to the right, descending through the tamarisk till I again touch your turban."

I counted the elephant's paces as she moved softly parallel with the jungle until I felt sure of my distance. A slight pressure upon the mahout's head and the elephant turned to the right. The waving plumes of the dark green tamarisk divided as we gently moved forward, and in another moment we stopped. There was the tiger in the same position, exactly facing me, but now about seventy-five paces distant.

"Keep the elephant quite steady," I whispered, and, sitting down upon the howdah seat, I took a rest with the rifle upon the front bar of the gun rack. A piece of tamarisk kept waving in the wind just in front of the rifle beyond my reach. The mahout leaned forward and gently bent it down. Now all was clear. The tiger's eyes were like green glass. The elephant for a moment stood like stone. I touched the trigger.

There was no response to the loud report of six drams of powder from the "five-seven-seven" rifle, no splash in the unbroken surface of the water. The tiger's head was still there, but in a different attitude, one-half below the surface and only one cheek and one large eye still glittering like an emerald above.

Upon examination it proved that there was no hole whatever in that tiger, the bullet having entered the nostril, broken the neck and run along the body. The animal consequently had never moved.

This tiger when laid out straight, but without being pulled to increase its length, measured exactly nine feet and eight inches from nose to tail.—Youth's Companion.

His Last Request.

Charles Dickens used to relate an anecdote of the last moments of Fauntleroy, the great banker, hanged for forgery in 1824. His elegant dinners had always been followed by some remarkable and matchless curacao, the source of which he kept a deep secret. Three of his boon companions had an interview with him in the condemned cell the day before his execution. They were about to retire when the most impressive of the three stepped back and said: "Fauntleroy, you stand on the verge of the grave. Remember the text, my dear man, that 'we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can take nothing out.' Have you any objection, therefore, to tell me now, as a friend, where you got that curacao?"

Life is fruitful in the ratio in which it is laid out in noble action or patient perseverance.—Lisbon.

The Quality of Butter.

The quality of the butter depends to a great degree upon the food and drink of the cow. She should have clean, pure water and wholesome food. Much care should be taken in the selection of the ration. The individual cow has much to do in this regard. But with respect to the part that is played in handling the product of the cow too much carelessness is evident in the processes of buttermaking. After churning is finished the butter and milk mixture should remain quiet for about ten minutes in order to let the butter come to the surface. A cup of cold water will hasten the process. An old recipe says: The butter should be carefully skimmed off into a wooden bowl half full of water. The water should be repeatedly changed until it shows no indication of milkiness. It is important that the butter should not be pressed or worked during the process of removing the milk from the butter. After this the butter may be pressed into a mass and salt to the extent of one-fortieth its weight worked into it. The water should be well pressed out, but the less worked the more perfectly its granular character

QUAKER OATS COMPANY TO BUILD LARGE ELEVATOR

Will Cost Between $125,000 and $130,000 and Will Have Capacity for 600,000 Bushels—Company Applies to Council for Small Concessions.

A vigorous policy of expansion has been adopted by the Quaker Oats Company in connection with their plant at Peterborough. The company are now erecting an $80,000 warehouse and have plans prepared to erect an immense elevator, having a capacity of 600,000 bushels, and the estimated cost of which is between $125,000 and $130,000.

This will be good news to the citizens of Peterborough, but it is not all. According to Mr. W. H. Denham's statements at a special meeting of the City Council on Saturday night the company's extensions will, in time, include a large flour mill and other buildings. In fact their operations are growing so rapidly that the company are obliged to take steps to assure their future expansion in Peterborough not being handicapped in any possible way. Hence they are now asking the council to close up Murray street along their westerly property line, and also the roadway from the southerly line of Murray street to London street, heretofore known as Mill street. Murray street apparently has a blind end at the Quaker Oats property, at any rate as far as practical use goes, while Mill street is not used by the public to any extent.

The company are anxious to commence building the proposed new elevator in two weeks' time. They also require a rearrangement of their tracks across Hunter street, and a new spur line. Their requirements are embodied in the following letter received by the city fathers Saturday night:—

To the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Peterborough:

Gentlemen,—Enclosed find blueprint showing the proposed rearrangements of our tracks across Hunter street. Also a proposed spur line to connect with the C.P.R. at Simcoe street, and with our tracks at the north of Murray street. We find it necessary to install this new siding as shown on the blue-print in order to make way for a proposed new elevator of approximately 600,000 bushels capacity.

In order to do this it will necessitate the grading down of the end of Murray street, filling in part of the raceway, and the occupation of the roadway along the raceway for some distance. Inasmuch as this roadway is only used by ourselves, and is not used by the public, or in fact by any one, we would ask that the council close Murray street along our westerly property line, and also close the roadway from the southerly line of Murray street to London street.

We have now before the Railway Commission the plans of the rearrangement of tracks, and before they can approve of them they desire a resolution from the City Council permitting them to cross Simcoe street, if such permission is necessary (as we believe the junction of the spur line will no doubt be on their right of way of 66 feet); also permission to cross Murray street at the north end of the property. We would be pleased, therefore, if you would grant us this permission by resolution, so that we can forward same to the Railway Commission immediately. Also favor us with copies of all by-laws so far passed regarding the crossings on Hunter street, and a certified copy of your resolution permitting the crossing of Simcoe street and Murray street. This will allow us to give the Railway Commission the necessary information at once, and in the meantime we will be pleased to have you grant the concession regarding the closing of Murray street and the roadway, as above noted.

Yours truly,
THE QUAKER OATS CO.
W. H. DENHAM,
Superintendent.

Aldermen Morgan and Graham did not like the idea of closing Murray street.

Ald. Morgan thought the people should have access to the river via Murray street, but the majority present could not see any virtue in that point, and it was contended that no person would wish to drive over the steep grade of Murray street on to Mill street and northward to reach London street.

Mr. Denham suggested that Murray street ended at the Quaker Oats property.

Ald. Morgan—"No, it does not; it continues on in East Peterborough."

Mr. Denham replied that it might do so, but it was not shown on the map. Besides, no one used the street beyond the company's westerly property line, or the roadway north of London street, and he thought the council might grant the small concession asked in order to facilitate the erection of another big elevator, to say nothing of further extensions in the near future.

Ald. Hicks was not quite sure of existing conditions on the locality in question and would like time for investigation before committing himself as to the closing of Murray street.

The council generally were anxious to grant the concessions asked, providing no public or private interests were injured, and passed the following resolution, which was moved by Ald. Bradburn and seconded by Ald. Hicks:—

"That the Canadian Pacific Railway be given permission to construct a railway siding across Simcoe street and across Murray street for the Quaker Oats mills on the usual terms, provided the railway company gives the city the right to extend Simcoe street across their tracks, and right of way to reach the water's edge, and that the request of the Quaker Oats Company for the closing of part of Murray street and Mill street be referred to the Board of Works to report to the Council."

This answered Mr. Denham's present requirements as far as the crossings are concerned, and he will await the report of the Board of Works regarding the closing of the streets in question.

SEVENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF ST. PAUL'S

St. Paul's Presbyterian church intend celebrating their seventy-fifth anniversary on the first and second Sabbaths of May. They will hold a series of special meetings in connection with this very special event. On the first Sabbath of May the Rev. Robert Johnson, D.D., of Montreal, will occupy the pulpit. In the afternoon a special service will be conducted for the children, and will be addressed by Dr. Johnson. On the evening, May 2nd, a public meeting will be held, at which representatives from the different ecclesiastical bodies of the city will give addresses. It is also expected that some of our public men, including Judge Hoyrke and a representative of the Council, will speak. On Wednesday evening, May 4th, the choir will give a sacred concert in the church. They will be assisted by Mr. A. L. E. Davies, basso, and Mr. Collingshead, tenor. A programme of much musical merit has been prepared. On the second Sabbath communion will be observed at the morning service. An effort is being made to invite to this service as many of the former members of St. Paul's as can possibly attend. Then on the Monday evening following this Sabbath a social will be held from six to eight o'clock, after which there will be a public meeting when former members of St. Paul's will give addresses of a reminiscent character.

A LECTURE OF INTEREST AND INSTRUCTION BY DR. MICHELL

Dr. W. A. R. Michell, who lectures before the Royal Astronomical Society in the Collegiate Auditorium on Tuesday evening, enjoys the distinction of being the surgeon to the famous Shackelton expedition to the South Pole.

Doubtless all know that Lieutenant Shackelton, who is now Sir Ernest Shackelton, commanded the English group of scientists and explorers, who in their attempt to reach the South Pole exceeded by far all previous records and came almost within hailing distance of the coveted spot. But they did not quite succeed. Just fifty pounds of solid food was the real needed feature to crown their success.

Though Sir Ernest did not quite reach the spot, the more honor is due him and in fact has been awarded him for his "English" honesty in not trying to claim a single foot more to his journey than he actually accomplished. It is quite in contrast to the jingo methods of the men across the border from us, who purposely leave behind them the associate scientific men of the expedition and pretend to accomplish great things with ignorant Esquimault as the only companions.

The Shackelton expedition is by far the greatest achievement of modern exploration. The story is one of intense interest to all and particularly so because it was under British auspices and included in the party the distinguished young Canadian surgeon, Dr. Michell.

Photographs of scenes witnessed along the route to this great hitherto unexplored region were taken in great numbers and from these a selection of fifty or more of the most interesting were converted into lantern slides. These slides will be used on Tuesday evening and the pictures in conjunction with the personal reminiscences of Dr. Michell, will undoubtedly make a most interesting as well as instructive evening.

While such a lecture means considerable expense to the Royal Astronomical Society the public are cordially invited, and no fee will be charged. Considering that Dr. Michell is personally known to a number of our citizens, and the honor he has conferred upon our city in consenting to lecture here, the society expects a record crowd.

BODY OF MRS. BEST FOUND

Special to the Review.

Detroit, Mich., April 18.—The body of Mrs. Arthur J. Best, who disappeared from her home in Detroit, March 13, was found in the lower Detroit river Sunday afternoon, and though horribly decomposed, was positively identified by members of the young woman's family this morning. The police are now looking for Mrs. Best's husband, a young man whose home is near Comber, Ont., and who was with her the night she was last seen alive.

Best was arrested a few days after his wife's disappearance, but was released because the police had no evidence that his wife was not still alive.

THE BIG SHOPS AT WINNIPEG

The big shops of the Grand Trunk Pacific at Winnipeg are rapidly taking the form of finished buildings. The roundhouse is already roofed in and more than one-half of the five thousand tons of steel used in the construction of the shops has been riveted in place. There will be thirteen separate buildings, eight departments. Eight buildings of steel construction and five buildings of reinforced concrete. The shops and grounds will cover 300 acres and there will be seventeen acres of floor space in the thirteen buildings. The main building alone will be 180 feet wide, 880 feet long and 47 feet high. These shops will employ about 3,500 men to begin with, which force will be increased to 5,000 as business justifies. All this work is being done by a Winnipeg firm, and the work is expected to be completed by the end of this year.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR LAYS CORNER STONE OF NEW CHURCH

Great Interest Shown by a Large and Representative Gathering---Presentation of Silver Trowel to the Lieutenant Governor—Honor's Address--Greetings From Sister Churches.

Another testimonial to the splendid spiritual advancement in the south end of Peterborough, was established by the laying of the corner stone of Knox Presbyterian church on Saturday afternoon. His Honor Lieut-Governor J. M. Gibson, K. C., LL.D., officiated at the ceremony and the wide interest in the important event was shown by the very large attendance of citizens of all religious denominations.

The Protestant ministers of the city showed their appreciation of the commendable progress of Knox church by their presence on the platform and the speakers for each denomination, sincerely congratulated Rev. Mr. Keith, the pastor of Knox church, and the congregation on their well directed zeal and enterprise in the establishment of such a potent agency in the interests of Christianity and good citizenship. Added dignity was lent to the occasion by the presence of Mrs. Gibson on the platform. She was accompanied by Miss Dickson, who was hostess at a charming function given in honor of the distinguished visitors previous to the ceremony.

The proceedings opened by an anthem by the choir, after which Rev. J. G. Potter, representative of the Presbytery of Peterborough, pronounced the invocation. This was followed by a prayer offered up by Rev. Mr. McKenzie, moderator of the Presbytery.

Rev. Mr. J. Keith read the list of articles contained in the tin box to be placed under the corner stone and these were as follows:—Copies of the daily papers, coins used in Canada, charter of the Adult Bible Class, which had donated the stone, historical sketch, list of office bearers of the church, those who have been united with the church, and a copy of the hymn sung at the opening of the present building.

The box was placed in the receptacle and His Honor welcomed by Rev. Mr. Keith and called upon to lay the corner stone.

The presentation of the silver trowel was made by Mr. A. McKenzie, chairman of the building committee of Knox church, and it bore the following inscription.

Presented to His Honor, Lieut.-Governor J. M. Gibson, K.C., LL.D., of Ontario, on the occasion of his laying the corner stone of Knox Presbyterian church, Peterborough, April 16th, 1910.

His Honor then performed the ceremony and this was followed by his address.

THE ADDRESS.

"It is a great pleasure for me to come to Peterborough on this occasion," said His Honor, "and apart from the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the new Knox church, it is a pleasant privilege for me to come to your city and to be received as I have been by His Worship the Mayor, and the members of the council. There are many features new to me that I have had the opportunity of seeing and the visit has been a very delightful one. One is very apt to become tired of the monotonousness of social functions in Toronto—and in coming from Hamilton—the country, as Toronto called it, it was a relief to come to Peterborough, although it could not be said that one was out in the country in getting into Peterborough.

It is indeed a great honor to have been asked to lay the corner stone of this new Knox church. As a Presbyterian from childhood I have been always interested in such movements as this. As the Lieutenant-Governor of this province, at the present time, it is a great pleasure for me to witness the extension of our church, and there are extensions in every part of the province.

The growth of this city demands increased church accommodation, and I am sure the enterprise shown in connection with this church, even if it has been forestalled by St. Paul's, will easily be justified by the activities which will be shown by its congregation, by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Keith, ably assisted by his wife, and Board of Management, and other constitutional elements necessary to a congregation.

I am a great believer in punctuality in attendance at church. I meant to say regular attendance. However, both these features should be prominent in the church work at Knox church. There is a danger these so-called enterprising days, and young men are apt to think going to church is not an absolute necessity, and are apt to regard it lightly as a duty.

The proper observance of the Lord's Day is not shown when it is, as I have seen in going to Sunday school on a Sunday, and meeting so-called young gentlemen with red jackets and other paraphernalia, going to the golf links for their amusement.

Punctuality and regularity at church will never be a source of regret to anyone who has cultivated the habit. So it will be with all other obligations pertaining to our Christian life and Christian membership.

The shorter catechism has, I think, to a certain extent, gone out of fashion, and it is not as it existed 50 or 60 years ago when I was a Sunday school pupil.

The chief order of men is to glorify God and enjoy Him forever. The view in mind in building this church is to meet week after week and worship God, and to work for the extension and development, for the promotion of the gospel and extension of God's Kingdom.

I don't know if this church has been paid for. I don't know whether you will be strong financially or not, but I am sure there are many friends in the city who are in practical sympathy with you.

The matter of giving for church matters requires development and thought.

I never knew of a case when the giving to missions or church purposes was ever a source of pain to the giver. I remember when at one time I gave much more than I had ever given I have never ceased to do it since, and looking back it gave me more pleasure than in any other experience of my life. It is like doing something for humanity, helping a fellow being, or like going out of your way to say a few words of sympathy where they are needed and where they will be most appreciated. A man who makes no sacrifice can't have the satisfaction that you will feel when you consider that in certain features of your life you have helped some good cause by a sacrifice to yourself. After all, true religion is a case of making sacrifices. I think where you find the man who is devoting himself as far as he reasonably can, to the benefitting of his fellow creatures—something to improve humanity—you have a man who must have faith, and one who is filling St. James' programme—works:

The tissues of our life to be
We weave in colors all our own,
And in the field of destiny
We reap as we have sown.

I thank Mr. Keith and the congregation for paying me the honor of laying this corner stone. I hope the superstructure will in due time be completed, and that the building will be one that you will all have reason to be proud of. I hope it will be erected without accident to the workmen, and that when you enter it as a congregation you will build up such a congregation that will be a source of strength to the Christian faith of this city and do the Master's work for all time to come.

Rev. Mr. Keith announced that an offering would be taken up, and in the course of the offertory he called upon His Worship Mayor Morrow to speak.

Mayor Morrow thanked the building committee for their invitation to be present at the ceremony of the laying of the corner stone of the new church, and which had been well and truly laid by His Honor. The corner stone, which had been laid represented the highest form of civilization of Christian progress, of civil and religious liberty, and all that yarried with it. This was the fourth church to be erected in the south ward within two years, and it represented the growth and advancement of the city. Progress had been made in material things and he was glad the city was going ahead in other directions. Spiritual matters had not been forgotten.

"We are glad to have His Honor with us on this occasion," said the speaker, "and I join in congratulating the congregation of Knox church on their enterprise and wish them every success in their work."

Mr. J. B. Stratton was next called upon. He said that under the circumstances it was hardly necessary for him to be present on the occasion. This was the first opportunity he had had of congratulating the Honorable visitor on his appointment to the position of Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario. "I know of no other man," said Mr. Stratton, "who has done more for the betterment and advancement of the people of the province, than His Honor, who had laid the corner stone this afternoon.

"Peterborough owes it becoming a city of churches. Including the Salvation Army Temple, and this new Knox church, the number of churches in the city was seventeen, and that meant one church for each one thousand of the population. The people of Peterborough in erecting churches were advancing civilization and working for the upliftment of the community. Peterborough was going ahead and it was necessary for the church to keep pace with other advances. It was necessary to place the opportunity before those who wished to work. The splendid advancement made in the erecting of churches in the south ward fully goes to show that the people of Peterborough are desirous of endeavoring to fulfill the idea of humanity. There is a great work to do and those in the churches must not shirk their duty.

"I congratulate the congregation, Mr. Keith and the building committee, and wish them all success and hope that there will be no mortgage on the church when it is dedicated," concluded Mr. Stratton.

Other speakers were: Rev. G. W. Henderson, for the Methodists; Rev. Mr. Riddiford, Baptists; Rev. Mr. Trumpour, Church of England; Rev. D. A. McKenzie, moderator of Peterborough Presbytery; Rev. J. G. Potter, Presbytery, and Rev. R. Pogue, Presbyterians.

Rev. Mr. Henderson said he esteemed it a great privilege to be present at the ceremony to represent in a humble capacity one of the denominations of the city. He sincerely congratulated Rev. Mr. Keith and those associated with him in the church that is to be. Church union is in the air these days, remarked Mr. Henderson, and if it was only a matter between the pastors and congregations of Knox and Charlotte street churches, the publishing of the bans might be proceeded with within the very near future.

Rev. Mr. Riddiford extended congratulations on behalf of the Baptist denomination. He believed that the workingmen of Peterborough were doing a great work.

Rev. Mr. Riddiford, in the course of his remarks, made the statement that in the erecting of the five churches in the south ward, the workingmen of Peterborough had contributed $170,000, and they were to be congratulated.

Rev. Mr. Trumpour added his congratulations and well wishes. Those who were proceeding with the work of erecting the new church had his warmest sympathy. "Building a church is no joke, as I am well aware of by my own experience," remarked Rev. Mr. Trumpour.

Rev. Mr. McKenzie and Rev. Mr. Potter expressed the greetings and congratulations of the Presbytery. A good work had been done in the past but greater accomplishments would be brought about in the near future.

Rev. R. Pogue was the last speaker called upon, and he congratulated Rev. Mr. Keith and the congregation of Knox church on their enterprise, which was for the best interests of the city. He hoped that much good would be accomplished in the future.

On the benediction being pronounced by Rev. R. Pogue, the gathering dispersed and the important and interesting function was over.

THE NEW CHURCH.

The new church is being erected at a cost of $23,000, and when completed will be a handsome edifice. It will have a seating accommodation of nine hundred. Which will be evenly divided between the pit and a gallery, the latter running along both sides and at one end. There will be two main entrances in the front, which faces Rubidge street, and two others at the side and rear. It is joined to the present edifice, and two doors will allow of an entrance from one to the other. The Sunday school will be held in the present building. There will be a ladies' parlor, pastor's room, and one each for the young men and boys, the latter being in the basement, where a kitchen will also be included. The windows will be of stained glass, and there will be two towers in the front, a vestibule in the main entrance, and a special arrangement to prevent drafts. The church will be lighted with electricity and in a modern manner.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

1872—Interdenominational Ladies' District Visiting Association was formed at suggestion of Mrs. Renaud. Two ladies, the late Mrs. Jas. A. Hall and Miss Charlotte Dickson were appointed to district south of Charlotte street, where they found a large number of children in that section were not attending Sunday school. Mr. Jas. A. Hall and Mr. T. W. Nisbet agreed to assist in the undertaking to secure a building for a Sunday school. An unoccupied building on the east side of Aylmer street between Charlotte and King streets was found and secured for this purpose. This building was originally the first Presbyterian church in Peterborough.

1872—The school was opened with T. W. Nisbet as superintendent. The same year he was removed to Montreal, and Mr. W. W. Johnston succeeded him and continued as superintendent until 1892.

1873—This year found the school had outgrown the place of its birth. A building was erected for Sabbath school purposes on a vacant lot on Dalhousie street, between Stewart and Rubidge streets, the owner, Mr. Walter Patterson, granting the trustees a twenty-year lease on the property at a rental of one dollar a year. Mr. T. W. Nisbet sent a donation of $100, and the balance, $500, was raised by local subscriptions, not more than $50 being given outside St. Paul's church. Some of the ladies who assisted in the work at that time as teachers were Miss Baptie, Miss Grundy, Miss Gilmour, Miss Veals and Miss Patterson. The infant class was taught by Miss Moffat.

1892—The lease had expired, and in the summer of the year the property now occupied by Knox church was purchased for $1,250. Of this amount Mrs. Nicholls donated $600. Arrangements were made for the erection of a school, but the scheme was abandoned on the objections made to the Presbytery being decided by that body as reasonable.

1902—The subject was brought up again in the Presbytery. No opposition being made, the building was erected in the fall of the year, at a cost of $4,037.

1903—As St. Paul's Mission, it was opened on February 1st. The Sabbath school, under the leadership of Mr. Jas. A. Hall, made rapid progress, increasing at the rate of 40 per cent. a year, until it has now an average of 220.

1904—First communion service held in March.

1905—On June 6th the Mission was set apart and Rev. Geo. Yule appointed moderator.

1906—On October 25th the recommendation from the Presbytery to become independent was considered at a meeting in the church, when an unanimous resolution in favor of this was carried. In November a meeting of the sessions of St. Paul's and Knox churches decided in favor of the proposed separation, the same to take effect January 1st, 1907.

1907—On January 1st candidates were heard, and at a meeting of the congregation on January 3rd Rev. Henry J. Keith, B.D., M.A., was called as the first minister. He was inducted on April 11 of this year. Since that time the congregation made rapid progress, the membership being nearly 400.

1909—In January it was decided to erect a new building.

St. Catharines police are enjoined to keep vigilant watch upon speeding autos during hours when children are going to or coming from school.

April Rod and Gun

The manifold delights of the days with the rod and line, the season for which is now so near at hand, finds some able exponents in the April number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Woodstock, Ont. The immense advantages of Algonquin Park for fishing, vacations and descriptions of some of its many wonderful lakes, is given prominence in a beautifully illustrated article, the writer having had the privilege of accompanying the hardy Rangers on some of their rounds. The veteran angler, Mr. C. W. Young gives an account of some of the new waters along the line of the new Transcontinental in Northern Quebec and many a fisherman will hope that during the coming summer he may possibly repeat Mr. Young's delightful experiences. The wanderings of a fishing party lost in the Rockies are well told by Mr. E. M. Allworth, the story illustrating the difference between fishing in the north and in the west. Mr. Allworth and his party had to walk home from the mountains to their prairie town. A defence of the catfish will be read with interest. Two good bear stories, one of duck hunting, a tale of a good dog and grouse bird hunting by motor car add variety and give increased interest to an excellent number. Not merely no fisherman but no sportsman should be without its bright, informative companionship.

Baby Shoots Father.

Binghampton, N.Y., April 18.—Dominic Frits of Corbettsville, nine miles east of this city, aged 29 years, died early yesterday morning from the effects of a bullet wound in his head. He was shot on Friday by his eighteen months' old child, which had been given an old revolver, supposed to be unloaded, to play with.

Gananoque Sailor Killed.

Rochester, N.Y., April 18.—David Daryaw, a seaman of Gananoque, Ont., was instantly killed at the docks of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg Railroads at Charlotte. Several men were working near the free end of a heavy coal conveyor when a strap broke and let the heavy chute fall on Daryaw's head.

Monterey, Mexico, April 18.—An antiquated locomotive exploded instantly, killing eleven employes. Two others were horribly injured.

The screwing down of the safety valve in the engine after it had been run out of the roundhouse caused the explosion.

Willing to Sign Anything.

Brockville, April 18.—The fact that it is easy to get signatures to a petition is shown by two documents just filed with the license commissioners of Leeds district. The application of R. H. Serviss for a license at Rockport is supported by a majority of voters in the polling subdivision. There is also a petition against granting the license signed by an equal number of the majority of eligible signers.

Minnehaha Goes Ashore.

Power of Growing Trees

The Ottawa Citizen says:—Those who wish to see the enormous power of a growing tree can do so by going to the north side of Albert street. Two trees that were enclosed by the cement sidewalk when it was built many years ago have split the slabs like fragments by huge cracks extending in several directions.

The breaking tensile strength of neat cement as used for the city is 500 pounds per square inch. With the mixture as used in the sidewalks an expert estimated it would be about 160 pounds per square inch. There are several of these cracks, so the pressure must have been still more than for one fracture. The trees are a chestnut and a soft maple. A point worthy of note in this connection is that when healthy trees are enclosed by concrete walks space should be left for expansion at least equal to the average size of the full growth of the tree.

TOLD OF BONAR LAW.

Canadian In British Commons Is a Man of Ready Wit.

Probably more good stories are told of Mr. Bonar Law than of any of the politicians of first rank on either side of the British House of Commons, says a writer in M.A.P.

At the time of the last General Election, Mr. Bonar Law was speaking in Glasgow and happened to refer to the attitude Mr. Balfour then took on the fiscal question. He pointed out that the "English people love compromise," and instanced the course taken by Henry VIII. at the time of the Reformation.

Whereupon the following question was handed up to be answered: "Is the candidate aware that Mr. Balfour is a bachelor and that Henry VIII. was much the reverse?"

"Yes," replied the candidate—"but possibly Mr. Balfour might not be a bachelor if he could be sure of getting rid of his wives as easily as Henry VIII.!"

As a platform orator Mr. Law is undoubtedly one of the best half dozen speakers in Britain to-day. In appearance he is a spare, upright man of average height, with reddish brown hair, a moustache, and kind eyes.

Although he is a Scotsman by parentage, he was born in New Brunswick, Canada, in the year 1858, the son of Rev. James Law, Presbyterian minister in that province, and of Eliza, daughter of the late Mr. William Kitson, an iron merchant of Glasgow.

His boyhood until the age of twelve was spent in Canada; and this partly accounts for the keen interest he takes in all that makes for the welfare of the Dominion. At twelve he went to Glasgow, presently to attend the commercial section of the High School, being destined for commerce.

Of this stage of his career, Mr. Bonar Law himself gives an interesting note. "As a boy in the High School I remember being told by one of the masters: 'You have every kind of sense except common sense!'—a character sketch which I hope now could be reversed with more truth."

Premier Roblin's Bowling Boy.

All Manitoba is tittering over the funny mistakes which have been made by a number of eastern papers in confusing Premier Roblin with his youngest son, George, in imagining that the first Minister has been on a bowling trip east. George, or as he is better known in Winnipeg, "Jake," who is a reporter—and a good one—on the staff of The Winnipeg Telegram, is an enthusiastic bowler. He is a member of the Winnipeg Wanderers, one of the teams which made the trip recently to the big Detroit tournament and played at a number of other points including Hamilton and London.

At the Forest City an enterprising reporter became seized with the idea that the western Premier was a member of the visiting team and sprung a sensational scoop the day before the match by announcing that "Twenty-seven Winnipeg bowlers, including Premier Roblin of Manitoba, will bowl against the locals, etc." It was headed up "Premier Roblin will bowl against the locals." Just what was said when the reporters met the train and sought an interview with the Premier is not on record.

As a matter of fact, the Premier is at present at Hot Springs for his health and is not even able to attend the Legislature which is now in session, let alone bowl.

Long Sessions of Parliament.

Long sessions of Parliament are becoming an evil in Canada, and despite the months of talk business is not advanced. The insurance bill is an example. For three seasons it has been on the Parliamentary program and is still before the Senate. The Banking Act is also due for its decennial revision this session, but from present indications it, too, will be among those matters of business relegated to another session.—London Free Press.

One Reason Why.

Combines and scores of other great public curses exist in this country because we have in Canada millions of people who are party mad, and who are frequently led by unscrupulous men.—Winnipeg Tribune.

For Good Cause.

It is said that the United States are unwilling to impose their maximum tariff upon Canada. They have ample reason to be so.—Halifax Herald.

Jose Valdez, the crack shot of Santa Fe, N. M., recently discovered a cave twenty miles from Santa Fe that showed unmistakable signs of being the winter habitat of bears. He started a fire at the mouth of the cave and smoked out the bears. There were just thirteen of them in the cave, and as they came out one by one Valdez killed them, the job occupying less than one hour.—Argonaut.

LOST HIS BONNET.

Disappearance of Speaker's Tile Nearly Upset Empire.

Anyone who has visited the House of Commons when that body is in motion, and has gazed from the galleries on the legislators busily engaged at $2,500 per head, in escaping work, has noted with feelings of curiosity, not unmixed with awe, Mr. Speaker seated in his carved oak chair, with lions and unicorns rampant all over it. In his progress to and from his chambers to the House, Mr. Speaker wears a curiously shaped cocked hat, resembling nothing so much as those mysterious three-cornered pies which made Banbury famous. Every first Commoner has worn one, but the present occupant of the Chair, the Honorable Charles Marcil, when he came into office last year, ordered at vast expense a most rakish looking tile, with less severe lines, which he generally wears on his passage to and from the chamber with a distinct list to starboard. It is this hat which the other day was on the verge of precipitating a Parliamentary crisis, compared to which the Canadian navy and the Lumsden charges are mere child's play.

The Honorable "Charlie" lost his hat, and he did not know it was missing until a few minutes before the House was due to meet at three o'clock. The peg on which it hung, with the equally famous silk gown, was empty. Colonel Smith, the genial Sergeant at Arms, bearing on his shoulders the mace, was waiting at the door to lead the procession. But where in the world was that hat? A whole army of messengers started in to turn the apartments inside out. Cupboards were rifled, drawers were ransacked, but no sign of the hat. The very constitution was quivering, as there is no precedent on record of any Speaker opening the daily sittings of the Commons without his traditional headgear. The crisis was so grave that even the famous British North American Act on a dusty shelf in the library stirred uneasily inside its vellum bindings.

Up in the clock tower, Big Ben boomed the hour of three. Members gathered in the chamber for their daily religious exercises—which exercises, by the way, are carefully hidden from the view of ordinary plebians. Still the procession was delayed. The Sergeant at Arms got so excited that the end of the mace nearly extinguished an eye of the guardian of the Speaker's rooms. Had the underling been engaged in any other exercise but that of rubbing his eye, in an effort to keep awake, the consequences might have been serious. From the apartments came the sound of furniture being violently moved and the dulcet tones of the Honorable Charlie wondering what had happened to his tile. Then from the interior came a shrill note of triumph, Madame Marcil appeared, bearing in her hand the derelict headgear. It appeared that a little girl relative had taken the hat in which to put her doll to sleep, and the three-cornered tile was discovered under a bed, and inside it was cuddled up the little rag baby. Thus was the constitution saved in the very nick of time, and the procession hastened into the Chamber with all the pomp and panoply of state.

Graham the Jester.

The chief "jollier" in the House of Commons is Hon. George Perry Graham, the Minister of Railways and Canals. His good humor is irresistible, and he escapes from many a tight corner by reason thereof. The Graham smile is different from the sunny one which made Sir Wilfrid famous. It is a broad, big-hearted grin. An instance of the Minister's "jollying" tactics, successfully employed, was given recently during an animated talk over the question of granting water powers to private individuals. This is one of those bugbears of Parliament, and frequently raises its head. The Opposition argued long and lustily against neglecting what they thought were the people's interests, although Mr. Graham pointed out that these were adequately safeguarded by the Railway Commission. Two hours were consumed. Provincial rights were dragged in, and eventually the talk concerning water powers died of exhaustion. The next bill on the order paper was that standing to the name of Mr. Alexander Haggart, of Winnipeg, to incorporate the Congregational Union of Canada.

"Any water powers asked for in this?" enquired an Opposition member, facetiously.

Boulevard For Montreal.

An ambitious scheme for the construction of a boulevard from Montreal to the northeast extremity of the island of Montreal has been planned by a number of Montreal financiers, who will apply for the necessary authorization by an act at the next session. These gentlemen, Messrs. J. A. Prendergast, manager of the Banque d'Hochelaga; Jos. Versailles, broker; J. T. R. Laurendeau, financier; G. Hurtubise, civil engineer, and Jean Versailles, broker, seek incorporation under the name of the Montreal East Boulevard Co. They wish power to construct the boulevard and the following rather wide powers are then described—"with tramways, electric light, waterworks, parks, basins and private residences and with right of expropriation and other accessory rights and for other purposes."

The Deadly Revolver.

A cheap revolver can do more deadly work, with less preparation, than a subtle poison. The sale of poisons is at least under restriction, but any desperado who can beg, borrow or steal the price is able to make a human battery of himself on five minutes' notice.—Toronto Telegram.

A CARELESS REMARK.

Jab at Salvationists Helped to Defeat Labor Lawyer O'Donoghue.

It does not pay for politicians, to speak carelessly, and it certainly behooves the man seeking the popular franchise to treat the Salvation Army with respect. Mr. J. G. O'Donoghue, the barrister who ran for South Toronto on the Labor ticket with the Liberal organization at his back, says that he made this discovery when he went down to defeat before Mr. A. Claude Macdonell, M.P., at the last Federal elections. Two or three years ago one or two so-called socialists, who were merely malcontents with no formulated economic views of any kind, got into trouble with the police by insisting on addressing public meetings at street corners and refusing to move on when rudely interrupted by the men in uniform. They were arrested and were defended by Mr. O'Donoghue, who is counsel for most labor sympathizers when they get into trouble. In the Police Court, in combatting the allegation that these orators were a public nuisance to those doing business in the vicinity of their meetings, he remarked that they were no more of a nuisance than the Salvation Army with its outdoor services, or words to that effect. The remark was made off hand with no desire to offend the religious convictions of anyone, but with a view to helping his clients. An evening paper, however, being short of a subject took it up editorially, and administered a castigation to Mr. O'Donoghue for speaking disrespectfully about the Army.

The episode was apparently forgotten by the time that the elections of 1908 came on and Mr. O'Donoghue found himself a candidate, making a house-to-house canvass in South Toronto, in which the electorate is almost without exception poor. Then he found that the casual remarks thoughtlessly made in the Police Court had proven veritable dragon's teeth and had roused up a host of enemies. He encountered the story that he was an enemy of the Salvation Army on all sides, and many of the poorer classes of his constituents were outraged at the idea.

"I attribute to that matter more than anything else the size of the majority against me," said Mr. O'Donoghue recently.

GERM INOCULATION.

Late Nicholas Murphy, K.C., Tried Hard to Prove a Grave Charge.

Readers of the daily papers are aware that in one of the large American cities a doctor was recently on trial on a charge of murdering his wife's uncle by inoculating him with typhoid germs. Such charges, which seem fantastic but are not beyond the region of possibility, have been made not infrequently since the germ theory of disease became accepted by scientists. Over fifteen years ago the late Nicholas Murphy, K.C., had a case of the kind which he desired to have ventilated in the public prints. It may be said that he did not succeed, for the most sensational editor then would have shied at such a story and there would have to be a prima facie case of overwhelming strength before a Canadian newspaper would touch such a story to-day. The case in question was one that involved a politician long since dead, who was at that time very prominent in Ontario. Charges of disreputable conduct in his private life were made against him, and the chief witness against him was a young woman who lived in his home as a sort of companion to his wife. Her own character, which was good, was not involved, and she was apparently in good health also when she fell ill with some slight sickness and was treated by a physician who was related to the politician in question. She never rallied, and before the criminal charges and the libel actions arising from the charges came to trial she had succumbed to galloping consumption.

To his dying day Nicholas Murphy, who was counsel for the young woman and who was responsible for bringing the original charges to light, averred that she was a victim of tubercular inoculation at the hands of the physician, but he could obtain no credence for his theory in any quarter.

Another Carrie!

An unrehearsed comedy, in which the chief actors were a slightly inebriated Italian, a quart bottle of whiskey and a disciple of Carrie Nation, took place in the Toronto Union Station recently.

While the native of Sunny Italy was inviting some companions to share in a bottle of rye, a representative of the W.C.T.U. arrived on the scene and at once took in the situation. Snatching the bottle from the hand of the astonished Italian, she ran to the track and dashed it on the rails.

When asked the reason for her action she replied that she was only doing her duty by removing temptation, adding that she wished she could break the neck of the saloonkeeper who had sold the whiskey as easily as she had broken that of the bottle.

London's Latest "Princess."

Miss Isabel Jay, who is to take the leading part in "The Balkan Princess," at the Prince of Wales' Theatre, London, made her first appearance on the stage in the summer of 1887 in the revival of "The Yeoman of the Guard." "An awful panic seized me," she says, "while I was waiting to go on the stage. Just as I felt that nothing could ever induce me to go on, Mr. Walter Passmore took me by the shoulders, and with a kind word literally pushed me on to the stage. The effect of suddenly facing the footlights and the audience was like an electric shock, and seemed to brace my nerves. I was told afterwards that I did not miss a note of my part, though to this day I cannot tell what I did that night."

MAKING A MILK BOTTLE

UNFAMILIAR Story of the Production of a Familiar Article in Which There Is Much That Is Instructive, Spectacular and Often Dramatic

NEW YORK, Saturday.

"A little sand, a little limestone, a little alkali, 3,000 degrees of heat and an awful lot of human interest," mixed thoroughly, properly and according to Hoyle, and the result is a glass bottle (a milk bottle, for instance), the ordinary milk bottle that you find on your back stoop in the morning, or on the dumb-waiter if you are a town dweller.

To see a bottle made is to witness one of the most interesting sights in all manufacture. This holds, no matter whether the bottle be machine made or man made. The machine operates in a wonderful way, but the man—well, in bottle making the labor of the human worker is spectacular always, dramatic very often.

The old question regarding the ultimate destination of all the pins might be applied to the bottles, except that the answer in the latter case is much easier. The pins are lost, the bottles are broken. That is why 2,500,000,000 bottles were made in the United States last year. Of course, these figures mean very little to the man who does his reckoning in thousands or even millions, but they convey a very good idea of the vastness of the bottle making industry of the country. Also, between 1900 and 1905 there was an increase of fifty-five per cent and the expansion since has been very great.

The man who gave the recipe quoted for the production of a milk bottle is superintendent of the Long Island City plant of the Bottlers and Manufacturers' Association and the Bottlers and Manufacturers' Supply Company, of New York. He knows all there is to know up to date about the making of bottles, and can tell you of the steps marked by the industry from the days of the Colonials, who began making their own bottles down on the sands of Southern New Jersey, near the place so appropriately called Glassboro.

An Artist at Work.

Up to 1890 the actual framing of a bottle depended principally on the craft of the hand, but along in 1895, at a little factory in Beaver Falls called "The Yellow Cow," a machine was set up for the production of small, wide mouth ware like the familiar little vaseline bottle. Then came an appliance that turned out the wide mouth fruit jar, and then came an improvement which permitted the manufacture of bottles with narrow necks. To-day there are hundreds of machines making all sorts of bottles, but the machine is not the man, and to see the latter in action is to witness one of the most fascinating operations in which a deft hand, a quick, sure eye and an active, steady brain can be employed.

The man who makes bottles is an artist. He is well paid—$12 a day is a fair wage for him—and he is all the while making a display of dexterity and cool nerve that not only amazes but thrills the onlooker.

There are bottlemakers who are so deft, so keen of eye, so accurate in judgment that you can place before them a bottle of any size or shape you desire, and before your very eyes these men will reproduce your model exact as to size, color, form and even weight.

So when the superintendent of the Long Island City plant spoke of the awful lot of human interest attaching to the making of a bottle he knew, because, after all, it is the personal element that lends the fascination that surrounds the making of even such a commonplace article as your everyday milk bottle.

Well, let's see just how they make bottles in this Long Island City place. You enter a group of huge, high roofed sheds extending from a pier on the East River back to Vernon avenue and near Webster street. One shed is full of coal and the materials of which glass is made. In another is a furnace, gas retorts and their apparatus; a third holds the output of the factory ready to go to the bottle market.

But all these sheds are merely subordinate to the big central one where the bottles are made. Men, bear eyed and pleasant voiced, move from one shed to another, each on his own task intent and all working with the cohesion that is necessary where the product depends on the quick thought, the crafty hand and the keen eye.

The principal apparatus in the main shed consists of two low chambers made of fire brick—not the kind in your stove, but a brick specially prepared to resist intense heat. Built close together, these chambers are connected at the bottom by a small pipe. Ten feet high, the chambers are eight by ten feet within end circular. One is called the melting tank, the other the gathering tank. These two tanks are the points of interest, for on them depends the success or failure of the bottle we are about to see made.

The Ingredients.

"A little sand, a little limestone, a little alkali." In a cellar a man shovels sand into a wheelbarrow and weighs it. He tips it on the floor in a heap. Another man adds the limestone, another the alkali, all properly proportioned to the quantity of sand. Almost any kind of sand will do, but the cleaner it is the better. Very good sand is found in the Berkshires and some in Pennsylvania, but that which the man is wheeling to the heap on the floor came from Belgium. It was brought over as ballast and transferred by lighter to the East River pier.

Two other men tackle the heap on the floor. Each has a shovel and they work opposite each other in criss-cross fashion and very carefully mix the mass, making the blend uniform throughout. These men must not shirk their task. Very soon the material they are at work on will be the groundwork of the bottle, and unless the shovelling is done with skill and care the subsequent operations will fail.

Machines have been used for the work those two men are doing, but here is where the personal equation is above mechanism. The law that drives the one part of the mass to the outer edge and keeps the other in the centre works against the proper blending of the ingredients. Shovels wielded by men must be employed.

So these two men carefully mix their various parts of sand, alkali and limestone. Also there are soda, potash, lime, alumina and oxide of lead.

Soon the men with the shovels have done their work and the "batch," as it is now called, is carried from the mixing place by an endless belt to a point near the melting tank in the main shed. Here it is deposited automatically in the open and is ready for the Plutonic breath of the 3,000 degrees of heat.

Next in the process comes a man who is called a "shearer." He, also with a shovel, places enough of the "batch" in the tank to keep the contents at a uniform depth of about forty-two inches. And over this mass steadily pours from above the terrific heat that registers 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit. Some idea of 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit may be had by recalling a summer day when the mercury reaches the 100 mark.

"This heat blast," says the superintendent, "comes from an apparatus known as the Siemens regenerative furnace. It is the invention of the great engineer of that name and has been improved and adapted by Andrew Ferrari and other American experts. We keep the furnace in an adjoining shed, as you will notice, and we convey the heat to the melting tank by a conduit.

The Terrific Heat.

"Intense heat is necessary to fuse the materials in the 'batch,' and the Siemens furnace creates this heat by a combustion of superheated gas and superheated air. It is just the same as if you were to feed your stove with heated air.

"You might have noticed," adds the superintendent, "that the man we call the 'shearer,' while feeding the 'batch' into the melting tank, threw in with it a few bits of broken bottles collected for remelting. This is called a 'cullet,' there being a theory that it will cause a better grade of glass to be produced. This is one of the odd things about glass bottle making, for we do not really know whether it is a help or merely a legend—a sop to superstition, as it were. At any rate the broken bottles go with each 'batch' as a sort of ceremony. If they help well and good. At any rate they can do no harm."

Meantime the men at the big tanks are watching the fusing process with practised eye and managing it with deft hand, and as the melted mass, fused by the savage blast from above, pours to the bottom of the melting tank it flows on through the passage already mentioned to the adjoining gathering tank. This molten mass is now liquid glass, and, being heavier than the ingredients of which it is made, easily finds its way to the second tank, where its arrival is carefully watched and noted by men and boys, who work in squads of six, each squad being known as a "shop." These "shops" succeed one another ceaselessly day and night almost the whole year round. They surround this marvellous caldron, and from its contents make their bottles.

The mass we have followed to the gathering tank is now viscous and sticky and ready for the experts, who fulfil the promise that there is "an awful lot of human interest" in the bottle recipe.

The "Blower"

Feeding the "Batch" Into the Melting Tank, Where the Terrific Heat Registers 3,600 Degrees Fahrenheit

There are holes in the caldron wall through which the molten glass can be seen. Around the tank and two feet off the ground is a narrow platform. On this stand the men who are now to do their part in the making of the bottle. The holes through which you can see the red mass are called "rings." Each is about a foot and a half in diameter. Two men are at each "ring"—one the "gatherer," the other the "blower."

And thus is reached the fine point in the making of our bottle. Keep your eye on the gatherer first. He is an artist—a master. In his hand he carries what the superintendent tells us is a blowpipe. It is a metal rod five feet long, about three-quarters of an inch in diameter and hollow. The artist jabs this rod through one of the holes in the tank, sticks its end into the molten glass, deftly twists it until he has a certain absolute quantity of the red viscous mass attached to the end. He quickly pulls the rod out with its clinging burden and steps lively until he reaches a small tub of soapy water, close at hand. In this tub partly immersed is fastened half of a small hollow steel sphere. The man gives to his melted glass a quick turn or two in the hollow sphere. The glass takes on a shape like a ball on the end of the pipe. This man, you recall, was called the "gatherer."

The Blower at Work.

Now comes the other man we noticed—the "blower." It is his turn. He reaches for the hollow rod with its ball of glass on the end, lays the glass globe against a slab of marble or metal—they have both kinds—called a "marvering stone"—gives to it a few certain and absolutely correct revolutions and, behold! the glass globe takes on a cylindrical form, something like a great pearl, and also there grows a pear shaped end that ultimately will be the neck of a milk bottle.

Then the blower proves his right to $12 a day as wage. He lifts his mass of glass from his marvering stone and puffs just a little air through the other end of the pipe. This air gathers in the centre of the mass of glass. It becomes a bubble, to be expanded in an instant to the full size of the bottle about to be made.

"If an amateur were to take a rod and try to do what that man has done," says the superintendent, "there would be serious trouble, because the amateur could not possibly cause the molten glass to adhere to the blowpipe. He might twist and twist, but the mass would drop off, and the chances are there would be a nasty little explosion. Because our man knows how to do the trick is why he earns his very big wages, and with his partner is capable of making 240 dozen quart bottles a day. Rarely do these two have an accident in their gathering, their marvering or blowing. All they show besides their dexterity and skill is an earnest desire to do their work well. They take a pride in it and their ability for rapid, precise skill."

The air bulb is formed. The blower moves on. He inserts the glass in a metal mould, set a few inches below the platform which runs round the tank. This mould is in two parts, one immovable, the other hinged and controlled by a foot lever. The glass is still sticking to the end of the hollow rod and the little bubble in the centre is intact. The glass is shut in the mould by the foot of the blower on the lever. The man then blows in his pipe's end until the glass has expanded to the side of the mould. A portion of the glass projects above. The blower jerks his pipe away with a queer little twisting motion and passes it back to the gatherer for a repetition of that artist's part in the making of the bottles.

So far, so good. The neck is next. In the mould the glass cools very rapidly and it is not left there very long, only for a few seconds. Along comes another artisan, a "snapping boy." He has a little clutch in his hand and he pries open the mould. Out he takes the potential bottle, sets it on a scale to test its weight, and, noting this, carries it, fastened in an iron case with a very long handle, to another expert, who is seated quite comfortably in front of a small but very hot furnace. This man, too, has his queer name. He is a "gaffer," and his business is with necks. His furnace has many openings, called "glory holes," and into one of these he shoves the bottle and its iron case as they are handed to him by the "snapping boy." In a jiffy what is to be the neck of our bottle is reheated into a plastic state. Jerking it from the furnace, the "gaffer" jams the end of the bottle into a parent stopper so adjusted as to absolutely make the size of the neck. This stopper has arms of iron and revolves. And in a few motions your milk bottle is complete.

The Finishing Touches.

Ready for the market? Not quite. Another man, highly paid and skilled in the knowledge of what goes to make glass extremely brittle, or otherwise, is in the running. He takes the bottle, still very hot, and puts it in a brick chamber, or oven called a "lear," and here it is cooled gradually. The chamber over which he presides is from seventy to ninety feet long, and this part of the process of bottle making is called annealing. First comes 1,000 degrees of heat for our practically finished product, and then it is pushed along down through this chamber and into a passage way. With each move the temperature reached is lower, and for twelve hours the bottle is thus moved along through the gradually cooling passage until at the end it is ready for delivery.

"Did you notice the boy who weighed the bottles?" asked the superintendent. "Well, it may add to the interest you are taking in the making of bottles to know that the weight must not vary more than an ounce in seventeen. It rarely ever does. So you can see another angle of the skill of the gatherer in taking his material from the molten mass.

"For the making of bottles," the superintendent added, "it is not necessary as a rule to have the highest grade of glass. For instance, if we wished to get a bottle glass of a sea green tint we would use a different blend of sand and alkali and limestone from that used in our milk bottles, but if we wished a flint glass bottle we would use just about the same substances, but would choose them more carefully and then use antimony to bleach the mixture. Bottle glass runs through many shades, from pure white to deep black. If amber is wanted we add a few ounces of black lead to a hundred pounds of sand. If we want blue we throw in some peroxide of cobalt.

"Long ago the substances we mix with the sand were prepared by grinding in our own factories, but nowadays we get them from men who make a specialty of preparing them for the glass workers."

And as the man who knows how to make bottles concluded he returned to his task of overseeing the men mixing the "batch," the gatherers load their pipes, the blowers deftly starting their bubbles, the boys hurrying hither and thither and the various interlocking devices that work together can be seen smoothly for the production of an article which is so common and so well known that it scarcely seems worthy of even a passing thought—the milk bottle of commerce.

ANTS' NESTS UNDER GLASS.

A NOVELTY in London is the "Lubbock formicarium," a portable ants' nest filled with the living insects. The nest is enclosed in a frame ten inches square, shaped like a picture frame. When it is desired to observe the ants engaged in their occupations the opaque cover of the frame is removed and a glass one is substituted. Besides ants other small insects naturally associated with them are enclosed in the nest. Each nest is supplied with a queen ant, or without, as may be desired, and complete directions are given for managing the nest, which, it is said, may be kept in good condition for several years. These formicariums not only afford pleasure to children, but offer opportunities for scientific study.

ERECTION OF A LARGE MILL

Toronto is vieing with Montreal to be the headquarters of some of the largest Canadian milling concerns. It is indicated by the developments that have occurred during the past few weeks in Toronto, resulting in the entrance into the milling industry of some of the biggest of the younger capitalists of the Queen City. It is understood that two of the largest Ontario companies have been acquired as going concerns, and that the investment of a large amount of additional cash capital will enable the new company when arrangements have been completed to go ahead with the erection at a point in Ontario of what will be one of the largest and most modern mills there in Canada.

The rivalry that has always existed between Toronto and Montreal in the larger financial transactions will result in the developments in connection with the new consolidation being watched with a great deal of interest.

EARL GREY WILL VISIT THIS CITY

Governor General to Spend a Few Hours in Peterborough on Saturday and Fitting Reception is Being Arranged---Will be Given Freedom of the City.

Peterborough is to be signally honored next Saturday, April 23rd by a visit from His Excellency Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada. It is expected that the Vice-Regal party will arrive on the 11.26 C.P.R. train from Toronto, and arrangements are being made to give the representatives of royalty a hearty welcome to the Electric City. It is likely that the Governor-General will be accompanied by Lady Grey and probably by their daughters, Lady Evelyn and Lady Sybil Grey. They will return to Toronto on an evening train. His Excellency having been requested to unveil a memorial to South African heroes in that city on Sunday afternoon.

The City Council met on Saturday night to arrange a reception for the distinguished visitor. There were present, Mayor Morrow, Aldermen Gillespie, Butler, Phelan, Morgan, Graham, Duncan, Hicks, Bradburn, Duffus, Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., for West Peterborough, and Lieut.-Col. Stevenson.

The following programme was roughly outlined:—

Guard of honor, consisting of troopers infantry and band.

Reception at station.

Civic address of welcome at armories when the freedom of the city will be formally tendered His Excellency, if fine in front of the building, if wet inside the armories.

Luncheon.

Over the lift lock, up and down—in the "Bessie Butler."

Drive around the city to principal industries, such as the Quaker Oats and the C.G.E.

It is not yet known how many will constitute the Vice-Regal party, not the exact hour at which they will leave Peterborough, hence it was not possible to go into details of their reception and entertainment on Saturday next. The meeting was unanimous that Peterborough do the thing handsomely and rise to the occasion in a manner befitting so important an event as a visit from Canada's Governor-General.

Earl Grey is being corresponded with as to whether the outlined programme will meet with his approval, and the city officials will probably receive an answer by Tuesday, embodying other information that will assist the Reception Committee in arranging all details. Mr. Stratton will also interview His Excellency either to-night or Tuesday morning in this regard.

As soon as all local arrangements are decided upon, the public will be notified of the exact details through the press.

SHAREHOLDERS WILL HAVE TO PAY DOUBLE LIABILITY

Toronto, April 18.—The Court of Appeal handed out a decision this afternoon, compelling shareholders of the defunct Ontario Bank to face double liability on their holding.

A LETTER TO CITIZENS REGARDING THE CHIMES

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I venture to address a word to my fellow citizens on the subject of the chimes, for which a public canvass is now being made. After interviewing many of our citizens I cannot but conclude that there is a consensus of opinion that Peterborough needs a set of chimes, and it seems to be generally conceded that the central and commanding Tower of St. John's is the best available position for them.

A former resident of Cobourg remarked that while there might be more activity and stir in Peterborough on week days, there was certainly greater evidences of life and brightness and cheer in Cobourg on a Sunday. The absence of bells here was an unfortunate feature tending to lack of sentiment and feeling.

As there is no movement to place chimes elsewhere and as a good set is beyond the power of any one congregation, with their present obligations, it would seem advisable to make it a public cause, as it seems indeed to be generally regarded. The music of the bells will not be confined within the tower of St. John's nor gladden only the ears and hearts of St. John's congregation. This church undertakes to operate the chimes for all time to come as a public trust, and the congregation have already subscribed $788, other citizens swelling this amount to $1,038, not to be paid until at least $1,550 has been fully subscribed and not until October 1st, if subscribers wish, though amounts can be paid any time after the project has been made public. At present it hangs in suspence, the last $500 being naturally the hardest to raise.

We shall be doubly thankful, accordingly for subscriptions during this week, within which by a sharp, decisive campaign we intend to decide the issue.

Everyone says Peterborough wants only the best, but this depends entirely on the amount of money raised. We shall not stop at $1,550, if more be offered. As a public cause the subscription list will be published in full when complete and will always be available for inspection in the church porch, where amounts of $10 and upwards will be chronicled in separate lists of churchmen and citizens.

Should any subscriber regret afterwards giving his subscription for any reason it may be withdrawn during this week on application to Mr. Alex. Elliott or myself.

We want this to be a matter of pleasurable satisfaction to all who unite in this public undertaking and of regret to none.

With warm gratitude to our supporters.

Respectfully yours,
J. C. DAVIDSON.

The finest three piece orchestra in the province will be employed and five and ten cent prices will prevail.

The management are of the opinion that there is an excellent field there for clean, superior and utterly inoffensive vaudeville, and no doubt will be given a generous patronage.

Four bills will be presented each day, two in the afternoon and two in the evening, commencing Monday, May 23rd.

St. Andrew's Church

A most interesting programme has been arranged for the open meeting in St. Andrew's church to-night, when the Rev. Harold Clarke, B.A., of Honan, China, will give an address on the important features of his work in the Orient. Mr. Clarke has had exciting and hazardous experiences during his service in the far east, having acted as interpreter for a distinguished explorer through the western part of China into the borders of Thibet. The address will be illustrated by lantern views shown by Mr. H. O. Fisk. There is no charge for admission. Everybody will be made welcome. An interesting musical service has been arranged and an opportunity for a free-will offering for missions will be given.

Michael Urlocker, an aged resident of Merrutten, saw Halley's comet when a 6-year-old lad at his home in Alsace.

Churches Helping Each Other

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—It is God's gift to Peterborough that we are are all working in harmony to support the churches, not only one, but all of them. Every man is free to put his hand in his pocket and subscribe his good money to any of the churches. This is true unity. It shows that no matter what may be said in or out of the pulpit the churches are one. For, if the members of each support the others they must be one. A chime of bells for St. John's is the latest. Hereafter it will no longer be known as "Ring out wild bells," but "ring in the true." It is a nice thought and shows that the church is founded on "the rocks," no matter where they be found.

"PORTRAIT OF A WOMAN," BY FRANS HALS
REPRODUCED BY PERMISSION OF THE AMERICAN ART ASSOCIATION

Greater already than any public sale of artistic property ever held in the United States, although it is far from finished, the selling of the treasures of the late Charles T. Yerkes has so far reached $1,627,400 with the close of the third session, recently, at New Yorks Forty-nine Paintings were disposed of in Mendelssohn Hall, No. 113 West Fortieth street, under the auspices of the American Art Association, for $595,250, among which was a portrait of a woman by Frans Hals, which brought $137,000, the largest sum ever paid for any canvas at auction in America. This overtops the record of the night before, when Turner's "Rockets and Blue Lights" brought $129,000 under the hammer, $769,200 being the total of that session.

CLARKE'S LIPS ARE SEALED

President of Great Waterways Railway Does Not Want to Testify.

Edmonton, Alta., April 19.—It is now almost certain, it is stated on good authority, that President Wm. Clarke of the Great Waterways Co. stayed away from the Edmonton investigation in order to escape the writ issued by Hawes of Toronto, who claims $250,000 from him, and in order, to avoid giving evidence in public which might give Hawes' lawyers here opportunities for a stronger case against him.

This is all alleged by friends of Clarke's, who state that he would be willing to give evidence in Winnipeg behind closed doors, where Hawes' lawyers could not get at him for his evidence.

W. L. Walsh yesterday produced letters between J. K. Cornwall and Messrs. Minty and Biggar, written at various times, which showed that he gave up hope of securing a subsidy or guarantee. Mr. Biggar had written Mr. Minty that the Provincial Governfent did not want to guarantee a northern line because they weresafraid they would lose their southern support.

Mr. Cornwall told R. S. Bennett that he never owned any land or mineral claim on the route of this railway.

The afternoon session was occupied with the examination of J. A. J. Waddell, engineer of the Great Waterways Railway, but it did not reveal much. Cross-examined by Bennett, he admitted he was to get a salary of $25,000, but stated his income had been between $25,000 and $30,000 for years.

"Yes, that was for building bridges, not railroads," commented Bennett.

Waddell had previously confessed he had but little experience on railroad construction, although he is one of the foremost bridge experts in America. He said Clarke had three Albertan railway projects, but only the Fort McMurray route proved feasible.

TO MAKE CALGARY UNIVERSITY CITY

Calgary, Alta., April 19.—A movement has been started by a number of Calgary's millionaires and near-millionaires to make this a university city.

It is probable that if present plans are carried out, Western Canada College will be absorbed. An effort will be made to secure 160 acres for a site, with a view to allowing theological colleges, schools of practical science and like institutions to affiliate.

The project will be financed by a joint stock organization, and tuition fees will be adjusted so that students will pay the entire cost of their individual education.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Neil C. Polson, jr., has cabled to his friends in Kingston that he passed safely through the earthquake at San Jose, Costa Rica.

I. D. Neilson, late of Toronto, has been elected to a sub-wardenship of the late Robert Browning Settlement at Walworth, Eng.

Sir Edward Morris, Premier of Newfoundland, and Lady Morris is leaving for a two months' stay in England and The Hague.

Alex. Jamieson, Chatham's dog-catcher, was fined $25 in the Police Court for assaulting Mrs. Frank Ford while attempting to take two of the defendant's dogs to the city pound.

As a result of the big inrush of newcomers, the demand for farm laborers is now being filled to a large extent, but at least 4,000 are wanted at the present time for work in all parts of the west.

TRAIN SWEPT DOWN RAVINE

20 Italians, 3 Englishmen and 2 French-Canadians Are Reported Dead.

Quebec, April 19.—Word was received here yesterday to the effect that a landslide had taken place on the Transcontinental, on M. J. O'Brien's contract, carrying to death 20 Italians, three Englishmen and two French-Canadians.

It appears that a small slide had taken place at Corcpocache, about 200 miles from Three Rivers.

Yesterday morning a train with 25 hands was sent out to the place of the reported slide, and came to a stand under a cliff, and looking down into a valley or ravine.

All at once te entire side of the cliff gave way, taking train and men to the valley below.

As there is no telegraph station, the news came by special train to the nearest station, hence the lack of details.

The country where the landslide occurred is very remote, a hundred miles away from telegraphic communication, and with only telephonic communication by the contractor's line to La Tuque, which was broken by the landslide, while communication with La Tuque is very difficult. The country there is considered by engineers to be the most difficult this side of the Rocky Mountains, consisting of a series of badly-broken and precipitous hills, through which the railway pursues a tortuous course in search of low grades.

Apparently the side of one of these sandy mountains became loosened with melting snow and frost coming out, and so loosened the soil that it rolled over the track.

The train was in charge of Dick Dooner, a brakeman. Physicians and a rescue crew left La Tuque for the scene of the disaster at eight o'clock yesterday morning.

THE DALAI LAMA.

The accompanying illustration is from the first photograph of the Dalai Llama, of Tibet, who is supposed by his followers to be the intimate incarnatic representative of Buddha, and who was recently deposed by China as head of the civil government of Thibet and of the Lamaist faith. The Dalai Llama then fled to India. The photograph was taken at Pharijong, in Thibet, by a correspondent of the London Sphere, who writes:—"I have much pleasure in sending you the first photograph of His Holiness the Dalai Llama, of Thibet, who is both the real spiritual and temporal ruler of all Thibet.

He has done a record journey from Lhasa to Pharl in three days, a distance of 153 miles. He was averse to showing himself in public. He is a very intelligent and sharp looking man, and is a little over thirty! He is very short and dark. Like other Llamas, he was very plainly dressed. The Dalai Llama has now returned to Darjeeling from Calcutta. The mystic words, "Om mani padme um" (O jewel in the flower of the lotus), appear over his head.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT JOLLY HON. SYDNEY FISHER

Opposition Benedicts Say He Should Get Married—Is Too Slow and Needs Prodding all the Time, Declares Conservative Critics—East Peterborough Member Asks a Question.

Ottawa, April 19. Hon. Sydney Fisher, a staid bachelor, had some jibes thrown at him in the Commons yesterday by resentful benedicts.

It began in this way. W. D. Staples, a Manitoba Conservative, who is a farmer and has views of his own regarding Mr. Fisher's administration of the Agriculture Department, accused the Minister of being "too slow in action" and "content to ride along behind the provinces." He declared also that Mr. Fisher was "not possessed of the originality that a Minister of Agriculture should be possessed of," and suggested that he was "always slow in moving, unless prodded up by Opposition members."

"Why don't you get married?" suggested David Henderson (Halton) with a thoughtful air.

"Haven't the time, too busy," returned Mr. Fisher in a burst of confidence.

"That's your trouble," diagnosed Dr. Schaffner. (Souris). Mr. Fisher blushed becomingly, while the Premier relished his Minister's confusion.

There was an illuminating discussion, initiated by J. A. Sexsmith (East Peterboro), who said he had visited the hog pen at the central experimental farm and found it in a deplorable condition of filth.

"Oh," said Mr. Fisher, "that was an experiment. We were trying dry black muck to see if it could be used for bedding, but the results have not been satisfactory."

On an item of $57,000 for cold storage, Mr. White of Victoria said that the ranchers of Alberta would have to go out of business if something was not done to encourage the chilled meat business. If the Government would agree to guarantee the bonds of the company, which proposed to go into the business on a large scale, chilled meat could be profitably placed in European markets.

Hon. Mr. Fisher said that while he sympathized with the objects of those behind the industry, the proposals which had been made to him were on so large a scale that he could not consider it.

There was some discussion on the vote to cover the cost of taking the next decennial census. Sir Fisher said that the actual work of enumerating the people of Canada would probably take about a month. No estimate had been made as to the probable total cost, Mr. Fisher said.

In committee on Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux's bill to amend the postoffice act regarding salaries of inspectors, etc., David Henderson moved as another amendment that, in cases where there is no delivery of letters by letter-carriers, the rate should be half a cent.

Mr. Lemieux declared this was irrelevant, and appealed to the deputy Speaker to rule the amendment out of order. Mr. McIntyre declined, and Mr. Lemieux then refused to accept it.

Mr. Borden asked why there was discrimination against people in the rural districts. Mr. Lemieux contended there was no discrimination.

Mr. Henderson disagreed. Letters were delivered in the cities for one cent. Letters in the country districts were charged one cent, but were not delivered. The amendment was lost.

George Bradbury of Selkirk, read a letter from D. McGregor, secretary of the Stone Cutters' Association of Tindall, Man., endorsing a resolution passed by that association, as well as one passed by the British Columbia Association, in which request was made that the duty on stone be made equivalent to the duties paid on the necessaries of life. If this is not done, then the duties on the necessaries of life should be reduced.

Mr. Bradbury said the stone cutters were not getting proper pay, owing to the large amount of foreign stone being imported, and complained that imported stone had been imported in connection with construction of public works, while right in Ottawa, close to the Parliament Buildings, imported stone was being used to construct the new central station.

He hoped that if there were any tariff negotiations with the United States leading to tariff changes, the Government would not forget the stonecutting, and likewise the market gardening interests of the Dominion. There was no Ministerial reply.

In the House yesterday morning T. W. Crothers (West Elgin) corrected a statement attributing to him an attack on the chief justice of Ontario during his remarks on Friday last. Mr. Crothers said that the report was presumably based upon an attack made on him by the Minister of Justice, "an attack unworthy of the position he holds in turning the words I used."

He said his declaration was that even if the judiciary had been brought under the blighting influence of the system of partisan appointment.

Hon. Mr. Fisher announced that the appointment of census clerks will be contingent upon passing a special examination to be set by the civil service commission.

Whirled Around Shafting.

St. Catharines, April 19.—After being caught in a belt and whirled about a shaft at the St. Catharines Woollen Mills, James Stiven of Port Dalhousie, is at the hospital. Stiven made the trip about the shaft once, fell to the floor and escaped with one broken rib and a badly-bruised foot. An iron casting struck by his foot was snapped like a twig.

Stabbing Affray.

Ottawa, April 19.—Yesterday afternoon James Belangerie badly stabbed Cosmio Mangiona behind the ear. The two got quarrelling and one drew a knife. The police have arrested Belangerie.

BEST NOT TO BE RE-ARRESTED

Detroit, Mich., April 19.—The police will not re-arrest Arthur J. Best, the young Comber tinsmith, whose wife's body was found recently in the lower Detroit River, and identified yesterday.

Captain of Detectives McDonnell said yesterday "I don't believe that there is any prospects of Best's re-arrest. Since we had Best under arrest and questioned him, our investigation seems to have weakened the case against him. Many of the statements he made to us have been found to be true."

Mrs. Best's body will be taken to Comber for burial. It had been thought at first that Best might have thrown her in the river, following a quarrel, the marriage having been a secret one.

HUMAN "MATERIAL" FOR EXPERIMENTS

New York, April 19.—The Herald yesterday printed a Philadelphia despatch which says:

As the result of investigation, it has been revealed that 160 children, inmates of Blockley, the great Philadelphia Hospital, and of St. Vincent's Home for Orphans, mostly very young children and even babies less than a year old, have been used as human "material" for purposes of experimental research by physicians of the William Pepper Clinical Laboratory of the University of Pennsylvania.

After these experiments were concluded it was announced by the physicians in the Archives of Internal Medicine, published by the American Medical Association, that the results were such as to render part of the practices unjustifiable in medicine, it being admitted that on beginning the tests the experimenters had no knowledge of the serious results their use entailed.

It is admitted that permanent disturbance of vision was sure to follow in one of the experiments practiced upon an orphan and that one test if pursued might lead even to the destruction of the eyesight.

BLOCKADE OF VESSELS AT THE "SOO"

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 19.—The anticipated blockade is here. Vessels are coming up the river in a steady stream, and below the lock at noon there were 40 anchored, while a large number are en route to Lake Superior. The Canadian Government has a patrol boat notifying boats as they pass the Little Rapids cut, the position to take in the line for locking. It is figured now that the American locks will not be opened before the first week in May.

PUT POISON IN FOOD OF CATTLE

Brantford, April 19.—During the absence of David Gee, a prosperous farmer, near Scotland Village, some one took a quantity of Paris green and mixed it in the food for some cows and horses. On his return, Gee found three cows dead in the field and three horses suffering in the stable. Gee lost three cows and a horse last fall in the same manner.

No motive is known for the deed.

ECUADOR CALLS OUT RESERVES

Guayaquil, Ecuador, April 19.—The Government has called into service the first reserves. About 1,000 reservists paraded the street Sunday night, shouting for Ecuador and demanding war with Peru.

The return of Ecuadorean families from Peru has been made the occasion for great patriotic demonstrations.

Canoe Upsets; Two Drown.

Sherbrooke, Que., April 19.—An overturned canoe on Lake Massawippi tells the story of a drowning accident which befell Arthur Tomkins and Hubert Moyle, two young men of Coaticooke. Early in the morning cries were heard by neighbors, who, however, paid little attention.

GIVEN THREE YEARS FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Port Arthur, April 19.—Hugh Harmon, second engineer of the steamer Andrew Carnegie, was yesterday evening convicted of manslaughter in causing the death of Albert Walner, wheelsman on board a steamer, in Port Arthur harbor, the night of Aug. 16 last. He was sentenced by Justice Latchford to three years in the penitentiary.

The charge against Harmon was murder, but the evidence showed conclusively that it was not a premeditated affair, but the outcome of a quarrel after the men had spent the evening uptown and returned, both under the influence of liquor, and decided to fight out an old score.

Harmon's own story of the affair was dramatic. He said he was sure Walner intended to kill him, and decided to shoot first. He called to others of the crew nearby, Pray for us, boys, one of us must die, and I would rather be a live coward than a dead hero," whereupon he whipped out a revolver, beating Walner to it, and fired, killing him instantly. Harmon was defended by T. C. Robinette, K.C., of Toronto.

CANADIANS WERE IN THE WRECK

Hughtown, St. Mary's, Scilly Islands, April 19.—The passengers of the Atlantic Transport Line steamship Minnehaha, which struck on the submerged rocks near Bishop Rock, in a heavy fog, at two o'clock yesterday morning, have been removed to safety. The vessel is badly damaged.

Scarcely had the steamer climbed upon the rocks, when urgent wireless messages were being sent to Lloyds signal station at the Lizard, from which point they were passed on to Falmouth. Signals of distress were also picked up on the islands and in a short time fishermen's boats had put out to the wreck. These boats took off the passengors and landed them at Bryher.

From statements by the officers, it appears that they had been unable to take observations for the last three days and all were anxiously watching for the light house on Bishop Rock.

The Minnehaha struck at almost the identical spot where her namesake, a sailing ship, was driven ashore thirty-seven years ago.

Among the passengers were Charles Walter and Blanche Walter, elocutionist, of Toronto; H. P. Hemming, of Hamilton, and Brabagan Lawther of Winnipeg.

LLOYD-GEORGE AND WM. O'BRIEN DISAGREE OVER THE IRISH "BARGAIN"

Chancellor Denies That He Made Any Offers for the Irish Support—O'Brien in a Rage Accuses Him of Telling an Untruth and Details the Interview.

London, April 19.—Wm. O'Brien, leader of the Independent Irish party, had it out with Chancellor Lloyd-George yesterday over O'Brien's recent statement at Cork that the Chancellor had offered him certain concessions in the way of modifications in the budget, in return for the support of the Nationalist party which Redmond had neglected to demand.

In the House last night, when Lloyd-George replied to the interview, denying that he made such offers, and accusing O'Brien of breach of faith, O'Brien, white with rage, took the floor, gave a detailed story of the interview, and added:

"Lloyd-George has taken advantage of the fact that there were no witnesses to issue a denial. I do not know what the Chancellor's code of honor may be, but I am certain it is not mine."

Lloyd-George in reply did not deny that he had the interview with O'Brien, but declared O'Brien's account of its purport was grossly inaccurate.

"O'Brien talks about honor," he said, "but admits publishing a confidential talk without permission."

Redmond denied that any bargain existed between the Irish and the Liberals, declaring the Irish supported the budget of their own accord.

In the Commons, it is generally admitted that Lloyd-George's reply adequately disposed of them, so that the eagerly awaited incident closed. O'Brien, however, made a clever attack on the Redmondites, wherewith he is probably satisfied, charging them with losing great concessions to Ireland.

Premier Asquith was enabled to get a majority of 23 of his motion guillotining discussion on the practically unaltered budget. As its passage is now assured, the road is now clear for the great fight on the Lords' veto.

Redmondites' Program.

London, April 19.—The Redmondites of the House of Commons yesterday decided to support the budget in all its stages, they also resolved to ask "our fellow countrymen in the United States to exert their influence with that Government with a view to the retention of Queenstown as a port of call for the fast mail steamers of the Cunard Steamship Co. on its east-bound passages."

WILLIAM O'BRIEN.

Guilty of Grafting.

Buffalo, N.Y., April 19.—The jury in the case of Daniel P. Murphy, former town engineer of West Seneca, yesterday evening reported a verdict of guilty. Murphy was charged with grand larceny in the first degree for making a false estimate for extras on sewer work.

C.P.R. BUYS COAL MINES

Victoria, B.C., April 19.—The Western Fuel Co., operating coal mines at Nanaimo, has given an option to the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. for the purchase of its properties for $2,500,000, according to a report here yesterday.

It is reported here that this is the answer of the C.P.R. to the purchase of the Dunsmuir coal mines by the Canadian Northern Railway. The C.P.R. has a contract with the Wellington Colliery Co., the assets of which have been sold to the Canadian Northern, which has still several years to run.

FLAGMAN IS HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 19.—Isaac Wright, 50 years old, of No. 192 Ryerson avenue, Niagara Falls, Ont., was arraigned yesterday before Coroner Scott on a charge of manslaughter in the second degree, as a result of the death of John Finleyson, a tailor, of St. Catharines, Ont., who was killed at the North Main street crossing early on the morning of April 10. Wright was flagman and was asleep instead of protecting the tracks.

ALL MISSIONS ARE DESTROYED

Philadelphia, April 19.—The officers in this city of the China Inland Mission yesterday received the following cablegram from Shanghai:

"All missions rioted at Changsha. All destroyed. Friends safe. Personal effects all lost. China Inland Mission workers arrived safely at Hankow with exception of Dr. F. A. Keller and O. Hollenweiger, who are remaining there for present on steamer. Position is not encouraging in the whole district.

ULCERATED TOOTH CAUSE OF DEATH

Lindsay, April 19.—Blood poisoning, resulting from an ulcerated tooth, caused the death in the Ross Memorial Hospital here of Harvey Reesor, an electrical engineer of Toronto and Cobalt. Mr. Reesor came to the home of his father a week ago suffering from an ulcerated tooth, symptoms of blood-poisoning were revealed and he went at once to the hospital.

Tethered Bull Attacked Vet.

Woodstock, April 19.—Dr. Rudd, V.S., is suffering from severe injuries from an attack by an infuriated bull at the farm of W. Teeple, Currie's Crossing, yesterday morning. The bull, which was tethered, charged him, throwing him against a cement wall, and breaking several ribs and inflicting many bruises.

Murdered as He Slept.

Macon, Ga., April 19.—J. W. Toney, a well-known merchant, was assassinated early yesterday at his home here.

He was asleep at the time and was shot from the street by an unknown party.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

NAVAL ADVERTISING

In referring to the naval strength of the various powers as shown by the number of dreadnoughts built and being built the New York Herald includes New Zealand and Australia in the list, but makes no mention of Canada. The Herald is merely following the example of Mr. McKenna, in the British House of Commons, when measuring the strength of Imperial naval forces he considered Australia and New Zealand worthy of honorable mention but said nothing about Canada. It was the silence of contempt. He could say nothing good of the Laurier navy and so he said nothing at all. Australia and New Zealand are getting the worth of their money in advertising. The Laurier Government prefer to spend the money of the people of Canada upon out-of-date warships that will be of no use to the Empire in time of war and in time of peace only advertise Canadians as a mean and backward people.

BETTER HERE THAN THERE

"Would the citizens of Peterborough and the farmers round about it prefer to have Canada supplied with cereals from the United States or from the big branch plant which has been erected in that city?"—Industrial Canada.

Undoubtedly it is better to have this great industry here in Peterborough than to have it over there. The industry creates a home market for a large quantity of Canadian cereals. The workmen employed in it buy their supplies of meat, eggs, vegetables and fruits from Canadian farmers. They patronize the grocery, dry goods, furniture, hardware, drug and general stores of Peterborough. They give employment to Peterborough carpenters, plasterers, plumbers, tailors, milliners, shoemakers, real estate agents, school teachers, music teachers and preachers. All these people consume food produced by the farmers of Peterborough county.

But for Canada's protective tariff all this activity would be going on in the United States instead of in Canada, and what is true of this industry is true of many other industries in towns and cities throughout Canada. The farmers of Canada do not fully realize how greatly the protective tariff benefits them.

THE NEW TIMBER REGULATIONS

The Peterborough Examiner yesterday denounced the new timber policy of the Ontario Government describing it as "petty tyranny." The Toronto Globe on the other hand thinks that the policy is so good that it claims that it is merely a continuation of the Liberal policy. The Globe says:—

"The Ontario Government have decided to continue and carry out the policy of their predecessors in securing for the public a share of the increasing value of timber on Crown lands. The Province has three methods of securing income from timber: the bonus or sale price when limits are transferred to the lumbermen, the ground rental, and the stumpage dues. The bonus is fixed by competition when the limits are disposed of by auction, and while the rental and stumpage dues are always definitely decided, the Government retain the right to make advances when convinced that the price of timber and just claims of the public warrant a change. The ground rental continues independent of lumbering operations, and may be used to prevent the idle holding of timber limits when the time is opportune for development. In 1867 the Liberal Ministry increased the ground rental from $2 to $3 per square mile, an advance of 50 per cent. The latest increase by the present Government is from $3 to $5 per square mile. This will tend to prevent injurious idle holding, and will secure for the Province a larger share in the unearned increments from limits held by lumbermen who are waiting for the timber to grow in size and value. The fee for a transfer has also been increased from $1 to $5 per square mile. This will not entail any serious impost. The stumpage dues were increased in 1867 from 75 cents to $1 per thousand feet board measure, and the latest increase brings the dues up to $1.50 per thousand. With regard to square timber there has been an increase sufficiently sweeping to indicate a desire to discourage this form of manufacture or otherwise to influence lumbering operations. The dues have been advanced from $20 to $50 per thousand cubic feet. There has also been a change in the same direction with regard to square timber there has been an increase sufficiently sweeping to indicate a desire to discourage this form of manufacture or otherwise to influence lumbering operations. The dues have been advanced from $20 to $50 per thousand cubic feet. There has also been a change in the same direction with regard to fire-ranging. The entire cost will in future be charged against the limit-holders, but the service will be carried on by the department. Under the system formerly in operation the cost was divided evenly between the Province and the limit-holders. It is estimated that these and a few less important advances which have been made will increase the Provincial income by about $300,000. Changes of this nature are certainly warranted by conditions in the lumbering industry, and it is well that the Province will receive a larger share of the returns from her timber wealth."

It is hardly to be expected that speculators in timber lands will be pleased with the new regulations, but the consensus of opinion seems to be that they are fair to the lumbermen and calculated to conserve the forests of the Province. The Examiner says it is sordid policy to make the holders of timber limits pay the cost of protecting them from fire. Why should the people be expected to pay when the lumbermen get the benefit? The fire protection service is still to be conducted by the Government, although the lumbermen will pay for it.

The Globe is not exactly correct in saying that it is a continuation of the Liberal policy. It would, perhaps, be more accurate to say that it is in accord with the policy adopted by Sir Oliver Mowat twenty-three years ago, and there is very little doubt that if Sir Oliver Mowat were alive to-day he would approve of the new regulations.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Hamilton's police magistrate evidently believes that laws are made to be enforced. He fined, three dog owners who allowed their dogs to go unmuzzled in the streets one hundred dollars each the other day.

When the Government majority in Parliament votes that there is nothing in a charge of wrongdoing and no necessity for investigation the Liberal newspapers say the charge has been disproven and call it an "exploded scandal."

In the central part of the city of Toronto there are a large number of foreigners. They are divided into two constituencies and there are not quite enough of them in either constituency to elect a Liberal, so the Liberals are talking of hiving them in one constituency in the next gerrymander in order that Toronto may have a Liberal representative.

A New York veterinary died of hydrophobia the other day. Several months ago he was slightly bitten or scratched by a dog which afterwards died of rabies. In England recently a man died of hydrophobia who had been bitten by a mad dog two years before in India. English doctors have no doubt that it was a case of hydrophobia. These two cases seem to indicate that hydrophobia may lurk in the system for some time before developing into the awful disease.

ONE BAD MISTAKE

Is Frequently Made by the Wisest of Peterborough People

It's a serious mistake to neglect backache. Backache is the first symptom of kidney ills. Fatal complications may follow. Doctor's Kidney Pills act quickly to overcome kidney ills, do not delay until too late, it may mean Diabetes, Brights Disease. Read what a Peterborough resident says:—

Mrs. R. Duncan, of 115 McDonnel street, Peterborough, Ont., says:—"Some thirteen years ago I suffered with a severe attack of La Grippe that had until this spring left me in weakened and miserable condition. The kidneys had been disordered through this and became so inactive that doctors had pronounced Bright's Disease and termed my case incurable. My back was very weak and the pains across the kidneys were most excruciating. The urine was highly colored and contained a quantity of whitish sediment. I had become so discouraged through my years of suffering that I had no care for anything. Doctor's Kidney Pills were advertised at Madill's Drug Store and I tried them. The first box convinced me of their merits. I used five boxes of the remedy and I have been entirely cured. I am like a new person, well and strong and can sleep through the night and awake refreshed and ready for the day." Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., sole Canadian agents.

The lecture promises to be of great interest and much profit to every home-maker and every one interested in house-furnishings.

Mr. E. D. Wilde, president of the Ontario Marble Table Advertising Co., with head offices in Peterborough, will start at once to solicit advertisements for the two marble tables of the same attractive design as the table in the writing room of the Hotel National, which will be placed in the library at the new T. The new company will spare no expense to make these tables ornaments to the library as well as effective advertising mediums.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Prices have scored another advance of ½c per cwt. since this day week, due to limited supplies and high prices ruling thruout Ontario, on account of keen competition on the part of American exporters for supplies. Offerings were small, nothing was left over. Choice steers, sold at 7½c to 7¾c; good, at 6¾c to 7c; fairly good, at 6¼c to 6½c; fair at 5¾c to 6c, and lower grades at 5c to 5½c per lb. Hog prices show an advance of 10c to 25c. The supply was fair and demand good from packers and sales of selected lots were made at $10.20 to $10.25, weighed off cars. Cables from Liverpool, London and Bristol on Saturday for Canadian bacon noted a decline of 3c to 6s per cwt. for the week.

Trade in sheep and lambs was quiet on account of continued light receipts and there is a scarcity of supplies. The demand is good and sales were made at 6c to 7c per lb., and lambs at from $8 to $9 each. Calves are fairly plentiful, but owing to beef being so dear the demand is greater than ever. Sales of large lots were made at from $5.50 to $6 each for ordinary to good stock and as high as $10 for choice. At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market receipts last week were 1600 cattle, 125 sheep and lambs, 500 hogs and 1650 calves, while offerings this morning were 250 cattle, 125 hogs and 101 calves.

The Giant's Strength

...By...

BASIL KING,

Author of "Let Not Man Put Asunder," "The Steps of Honor," Etc.

Copyright, 1908, by Harper & Brothers.

"Come here, dear," he whispered. "Let me lead you to him. There, take her," he added to Winship, "and no man on earth ever received so rare a gift."

"No man on earth could value it more preciously," Winship returned. Taking her hands gently in his own, he stooped and kissed them both.

The whole action was so sudden that it took Paula by surprise. With her hands still in Winship's, she looked at her father and from her father back again to Winship.

"What does it mean?" she asked. Whatever color had been in her face died away now.

"It means, dear," Trafford replied, "that the two hearts who love you most have become one in you."

"Is it true, Roger?"

"It's true, Paula—after all."

With her hands still in his, she looked once more toward her father.

"You wish it, papa?"

"I do, dearest. In going to the man you love you go with all my good will."

"And without—without the money?"

The question was unexpected. For a moment neither of the men replied. When Trafford spoke it was stammeringly.

"He's—he's going to take it, dear."

"Then I can't let him," she said firmly. She withdrew her hands and fell back a step or two. "It's what I was afraid of," she went on, speaking in tones of quiet decision. "I thought he had come to say so the other day. But I could never consent to it."

"But, darling"— Trafford began to implore.

"No, papa. I've thought it all over in the last two days, and I see what he would be doing for me. He knows how I've been suffering, and to save me he'd willing to commit a great apostasy."

"But, Paula"—

"You needn't speak, Roger. I know your heart better than you do yourself. No one has firmer convictions than you. No one is more sure of what he considers right. And yet for my sake you'd renounce what you believe in just as in a time of persecution some Christian might renounce his God and his eternal hopes for the sake of a heathen maiden. But how can I accept such sacrifice? The Duke of Wiltshire wouldn't let me do far less than that for him. Papa, dear," she pursued, "you mustn't be offended at anything I say, but it must be clear to us all that Roger hasn't the same ideas about life that—that we have. I don't say that his are necessarily right and ours wrong. They're only different. He couldn't possibly give up his and accept ours without doing violence to his nature. He may pretend to be a convert, but he isn't, and we know that nothing is so hollow or so hard to keep up as a conversion in which there's no faith."

"But I should put faith into it, Paula."

"Don't say that, Roger. It pains me. I like to know that you're living for your own aims and for nothing else. For you to abandon them would seem to me a good deal more than a desertion. I could never lend myself to such a plan or be satisfied to see you carry it out. No, Roger. Your way isn't ours nor ours yours."

"You didn't think so six months ago," Trafford broke in despairingly.

"I've learned a great deal in six months, papa. I understand now things that I know nothing about then."

"What things?" he demanded, with the quickness of one who feels touched where he is sensitive.

"Very serious things. I've thought about them and read about them and prayed about them until I've obtained some small degree of insight. I know that some are higher and some are lower and that Roger's are the higher. How could I ask him to come down? How could I bear to be the very instrument of such a renunciation? You mustn't feel hurt, papa, at my saying this. Your life is my life, and I'm going to lead it, but I couldn't let Roger come and share it. He'd be wretched with us, and when we saw it we'd be wretched with him. Better let each live for his own—he in his way and you and I together."

"You and I together—in the lower way," Trafford said sadly.

"I don't say so, papa. I've been thinking that over, too, and it seems to me that different generations have different uses. You belong to the great age of material effort. That's the age we've been living in, and there must be good in it. It hasn't only made the country rich and powerful, but it has developed the great storehouse God has kept laid up in it until mankind had need to come and use it. That's been part of your work, papa, and it would be wicked to say that it hasn't its noble aspects. But mayn't it be that, now that so much of it is done, we're passing on to other phases—phases in which we shan't have to think so much of the material and so may be free to lift up our hearts to something else? Aren't there signs of it everywhere, among all classes of our people? I can't help the conviction that our whole country is groaning and travailing in pain together to burst its bonds and let its soul go free."

"How?"

"By getting beyond the idea that the greatest thing in the world is to make money and live in luxury," she replied promptly. "We've only had to do it to see how unsatisfying it is, and we're feeling after something better. There are people going before us to show us the way, and the impulse is coming to the rest of us to press in behind and follow on. Roger's one of them, and I couldn't call him back. He has his word of the message to deliver, and I couldn't ask him to be silent. I can see now that what happened last June was for the best, the very best. Roger, dear," she continued, turning toward Winship, "I thank you for what you're willing to do for me. You know I love you, that I shall always love you. I haven't made a secret of it, and I never shall. But I couldn't—I couldn't!"

She faltered, her hands crossed on her breast and her lips quivering.

The two men looked at each other helplessly.

"You see that you and I have to live for such different things that no marriage— Papa, darling, don't turn away," she implored as Trafford took two or three strides toward a window. "You mustn't be angry with me. You mustn't think I don't want to stay with you. I do. I do. With love like Roger's and mine we can be happy even if we're apart, can't we, Roger, even if we never see each other any more? Our being married is of no consequence, papa," she went on, following after him. "It's one of the beauties of such a great, great love that it doesn't want anything but to do the best. Papa, papa," she begged, clinging to his shoulder, "turn round, look at me, kiss me. Don't think for a moment that I can want anything in this world half so much as to see you happy in the love of your little girl. Roger doesn't want it, either, do you, Roger? Look at me, papa, and kiss me and make me feel that you want to keep me at your side."

For a long half minute Trafford remained motionless. When he turned it was so suddenly that he shook her from him. His face was crimson, but he astonished them both by bursting into a loud and pealing laugh. Paula stepped back from him, half afraid, half wondering. Trafford smote his hands together and laughed again, louder and longer than before.

"Gad!" he cried, as if stifling in his mirth. "Gad! How easily the little thing is taken in! Didn't you see, dear? Didn't you understand? Why, it's all a trick—it's all a bit of play acting. 'Pon my soul," he continued, coming nearer to her, "I didn't think you could be imposed upon like that. Roger isn't going to take the money," he roared, seizing her in his arms with a passion that almost hurt her. "He isn't going to take the money, and I don't mean to offer it. You're to go to him without it. It's all settled and understood. You're to live anywhere and anyhow that suits you, and the money can go to blazes. There's only one thing that matters on God's earth—that my little girl should be happy and that she should owe some of her happiness to her old papa. Here, Roger"—

"No, no, papa!" she cried, clinging to him. "Don't let me go. I'm afraid. I'm afraid. Don't let me go."

"Here, Roger," Trafford shouted again, "take her!"

He flung her from him with a wild force that would have been brutal had not Winship caught her in his arms. He laughed again as he groped like a blind man, feeling his way from the room; but, being unused to comedy, he betrayed himself by stopping too abruptly when he had banged the door behind him.

Within the room the silence was strange and sudden. Paula hung panting and helpless in Winship's arms, while Winship rained kisses on her lips and eyes and hair in the unloosed passion of his long pent-up love.

CHAPTER XXVII.

"THAT'S done," Trafford panted to himself when he was in the corridor. "It's done and settled for ever and ever. By heaven, I did it well! Very few men would have pulled it off like that. I don't believe there's another father in the world who would sacrifice himself as I've done. It's all over. I've lost her. I'm beaten. I had to let her go. There are very few men who would have done it like that."

Though he was strained by a sense of his own heroism, the way seemed long between Paula's room and his own library office. He stopped at every few steps and muttered to himself.

"That's it. I've lost her. Oh, there's no use trying to shirk the fact. She'll go her way and I'll go mine. There's nothing else for us to do. I've lost them all now. Let me see. It was Harry first, then Arthur, then Constance, then Jessie, then poor Julia, and now—now—she's gone and I'm all alone. I've walked in a vain shadow and disquieted myself in vain. Well, all right, all right. If nobody wants to gather the riches I've heaped up, then at least I can give 'em back. By George, what a stir it would make if I did it—Paul Trafford resolving his immense fortune into its constituent elements! Andrew Carnegie wouldn't be in it beside me. Well, it would be occupation for my lonely old age at any rate. But what's the use of dreaming? Money can no more be returned to where it came from than a rose could be reduced to the earth and water from whence it grew."

He tottered on a few paces farther and stopped again.

"It's hard, though. What's the world going to be to me now? I've got an income that I can't count and nothing to do with it. I've got half a dozen big houses stuffed with luxury and no one to live in them. She'll go back to New York and stifle in a six room flat at Harlem, while I shall be alone in my sixty rooms in Fifth avenue. Why? Why? Why?"

He smote his hands together and groaned.

"Why? Why? Why?" he repeated. "And yet I suppose I know why. She won't put it into words, but she means it none the less. I seem born to be misunderstood. Even she misunderstands me. After all the good I've done, after the churches I've built and the institutions I've endowed, I'm still looked upon as a sort of monster, living for nothing but his money. Well, they shall learn better. I'll teach them. I'll show them that I made money just because I chose to make it, and I'll fling it back among them and laugh to see them scramble for it. It'll be sport for me to watch them squirming in the mud to pick up what I disdain and chuck away."

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

AFTER SUFFERING YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fox Creek, N.B.—"I have always had pains in the loins and a weakness there, and often after my meals my food would distress me and cause soreness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better, and I can walk with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it, as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N.B., Canada.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure those obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

DIPLOMACY AT HOME.

If Your Wife Asks the Right Question All Is Easy.

"Did you read that article in the paper the other day about the age at which a woman is most lovely?" asked Mrs. Dingleham.

Mr. Dingleham had been out very late the night before, and these were the first words Mrs. Dingleham had spoken to him since she had declared that the explanation which he had attempted to give was wholly inadequate.

"Yes," he replied. "I read it."

"What is your idea about it?"

"I think," he said very gravely and very earnestly, "that a woman is loveliest when she is just your age."

For a moment all was still in the Dingleham household. Then Mrs. Dingleham put her arms around her husband's neck and said:

"Henry, will you please forgive me for what I said last night—or this morning—when you came home? It was foolish of me, but I love you so that I am often unreasonably jealous and suspicious."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Pity the Postman's Bride.

A clergyman, noticing the simple appearance of the couple he had just married, decided to give them a few words of advice.

He explained to the young man his duties as a husband and then told the young lady how she should conduct herself, winding up with the old injunction that she must look to her husband for everything and, forsaking father and mother, follow him wherever he went.

The bride appeared very much troubled at this and faltered out:

"Must I follow him to every place he goes?"

"Yes," said the clergyman, "you must follow him everywhere until death doth you part."

"Gracious!" cried the girl. "If I had known that before I would never have married a postman!"—Spare Moments.

LUNG TROUBLE

Mrs. Bliny Brown, of Tenscape, N.B., Was Cured by Catarrhozone of Lung Trouble and Catarrh, After Hundreds of Other Remedies Failed

If your lungs are weak; if there is consumption in your family; if Colds, Catarrh, and Bronchitis bother you, be sure to use Catarrhozone. It is especially adapted for these diseases and cures every time.

Mrs. Brown took cough mixtures, but they made her sick. Then she used an atomizer, but, after resorting without benefit to poultices, she tried Catarrhozone.

"I used Catarrhozone Inhaler," writes Mrs. Brown, "five minutes every hour, and soon recognized that it was going to cure me. I could feel the soothing medicated air spreading through the air passages of the throat, and it touched the sore spots in the lungs that other remedies failed to reach. Catarrhozone seemed to go just where it was needed most, and soon put a stop to my cough. It restored me to perfect health, and I am convinced that no cough, cold, or catarrh can exist if Catarrhozone is used."

No treatment is so clean, so pleasant, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. By means of the Inhaler, the local symptoms, such as coughing, inflammation and congestion are speedily corrected. Ferrozone tablets, which are taken after each meal, purify and cleanse the blood of all poisons, and build up and strengthen the system.

This local and constitutional treatment is always effective, and cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. Money can't buy or produce anything better, and to get cured it is absolutely necessary to use Catarrhozone.

BACH'S MUSIC.

Some Advice as to How It Should Be Interpreted.

The interpretation of Bach must always be noble, broad and firm, rather too hard than too soft, explains Ferruccio Busoni, the great pianist, in the Delineator. Affected methods, such as a "soulful" swelling of the phrases, coquettish hurrying or hesitating, too light staccato, too smooth legato, pedal debauchery—all these are vicious and out of place here. If used with a proper sense of proportion a certain elasticity of the tempo, giving the interpretation greater freedom, will improve the playing of Bach materially.

The modernization of Bach's compositions by such masters as Liszt and Tausig and many others is accepted by all clear thinking musicians as not derogatory to the master's style. It affords rather a completeness of expression. Witness the fact that Raff has orchestrated Bach's "Chaconne" without making it seem ridiculous. Many others have followed with happy results Raff's example of arranging Bach's music for the modern orchestra.

The ease with which Bach's music lends itself to this adaptation is proof of his comprehensive genius. He was not for his day, but for all time.

Bach's "Prelude" and "Fugue No. 10," important and not too difficult, show the many sided branching of the present day piano technic. The legendary tradition of playing Bach without the use of the damper pedal is obsolete.

HOUSES OF SCUTARI.

A Possible Reason Why Their Windows Are Iron Barred.

Of all villainous roads those outside of Scutari are the most depraved. They are not roads at all, but just washes and wallows and ditches and stone gullies. I have seen bad roads in parts of our own country, roads surveyed by George Washington and never touched since, but they were a dream of luxury as compared with these of Turkey. Our carriages billowed and bobbed and pitched and tramped themselves until I got out and walked to keep from being lamed for life.

And then the houses—the villas I had expected to see—dear me, how can I picture those cheap, ugly, unpainted, overdecorated architectural orgies? They are wooden and belong to the jigsaw period gone mad. They suggest an owner who has been too busy saving money for a home to acquire any taste, who has spent his savings for lumber and trimmings and had nothing left for paint. Still he managed to reserve enough to put iron bars on his windows—that is, on part of the house, the harem—every man becoming his own jailer, as it were, I remarked:

"I suppose that is to keep the neighbors from stealing their wives."

But the horse doctor, wiser and more observant, said:

"No; it is to keep a neighbor from breaking in and leaving another."—Albert Bigelow Paine in Outing Magazine.

King and Commons.

King James I. of England, although keenly alive to his own divine right, yet recognized the power of the house of commons. Sir Robert Cotton was one of the twelve members to carry the famous declaration against monopolies to the king at Newmarket. When the king caught sight of them he called out, "Oh, chairs, chairs, here be twal' kyngs comin'." His majesty mounted his horse on one occasion to find his usually quiet steed in a restive mood. "The de'il s' my dool, sirrah," said the king to the prancing brute, "and you be no quiet I'll send you to the 500 kings in the house of commons. They'll quickly tame you."

Crossroads Burials.

Formerly it was a general custom to erect crosses at the junction of four roads on a place self consecrated according to the piety of the age. Suicides and notoriously bad characters were frequently buried near to them, not with the notion of indignity, but in a spirit of charity, that, being excluded from holy rites, they by being buried at crossroads might be in places next in sanctity to ground actually consecrated.—Westminster Gazette.

All Broken Up.

Author—Why did you draw my heroine with a piece of court plaster on her cheek?

Artist—Why, in the last chapter her face fell, didn't it?

One Proof.

"Jones is certainly crooked."

"What makes you think so?"

"He nearly had a fit when I accused him of it."—Cleveland Leader.

SENTENCED TO JAIL

Harry Hardin Was Given Three Months Term With Hard Labor

Three months in the county jail, with hard labor, was the sentence meted out to Harry Hardin, by Magistrate Dumble at the police court this morning.

He had been previously found guilty on the charge that he stole a watch and fob, and $30.00, and had been remanded to give him an opportunity to return the $30.00 to the complainant. This he failed to do.

The watch and $12.16 found on the prisoner after being arrested, were returned to the owner, together with a grip and several articles of clothing which Hardin had purchased after the theft.

Hardin says his home is in Detroit, Mich.

TRUSTEES OF BOTH BOARDS TO MEET FOR DISCUSSION

At Suggestion of House of Refuge Committee of City Council—Plan for Isolation Hospital Accepted by Property Committee—Two More Parks for the City

No headway was made in regard to the matter of building a house of refuge for the Protestant poor of the city, at the meeting called for last night, and after a discussion amongst the members of the House of Refuge Committee of the City Council, and trustees of the Hall Poor Trust and Protestant Home, the chairman of the House of Refuge Committee, Ald. Morgan, suggested that the trustees of the Hall Poor Trust and Protestant Home meet and discuss the question amongst themselves, and then have the Council meet them. It was decided to act upon the chairman's suggestion.

PLAN ACCEPTED.

Mr. W. Blackwell presented a plan for the isolation hospital to the members of the Property Committee and it met with their approval. Ald. Graham moved that the plan be accepted, and that the committee ask for authority to advertise for tenders and award the contract. The motion was seconded by Ald. Morgan and carried.

The plan calls for an expenditure of $10,000 for the building. The equipment will cost $2,000.

The site of the hospital is not definitely decided on, and the committee will, at the notice of the chairman, make another inspection of the property, known as Hilliard's farm.

SOUTH END PARK.

Mayor Morrow suggested that the property set aside for a park in the south end of the city be ploughed, and levelled, and that some trees be planted, the committee to secure estimates, with power to act, and made a motion to this effect.

"Never mind the trees," said Ald. Bradburn. "Leave it for the boys to play baseball on."

Mayor Morrow's motion was carried, but the boys will receive consideration.

ANOTHER PARK.

Ald. Morgan wanted the drill hall on Mark street in Ashburnham removed, and the property converted into a park. The building is government property. A motion to the effect that the chairman interview Mr. J. R. Stratton with a view of having the building removed and the property made into a park was carried.

Mr. Blackwell was instructed to see that the heating system at the new public library is tested at once. The chairman brought the matter up and emphasized the necessity of the test being made immediately.

CATCHIEST SCORE OF MERRY MUSIC

There is every indication of a notable opening at the Grand Opera House on Monday, April 25th, when "The Soul Kiss," one of the most successful musical comedies in years, will make its initial bow before local theatre-goers. "The Soul Kiss" has been popularly classified as the most gigantic musical entertainment ever seen inside the four walls of a theatre. Although there is a dash of daring in the title of "The Soul Kiss," yet the character of the entertainment is nevertheless one of absolute purity and inoffensiveness. The merit of the different songs and dances which are heard and seen in the performance, lies in their novelty and uniqueness. Mlle. Pertina, who essays the leading role of "The Dancer," in the piece, has been especially imported from Paris to assume this role. She is conceded the most successful dancer throughout all of continental Europe and will introduce in one of the scenes of "The Soul Kiss," the different alluring and vivid dances which startled all of Paris this last spring. Julian Mitchell has staged this massive production in his usual tasty manner. A competent company of seventy-five funmakers will be found in support of Mlle. Pertina, including a beauty chorus of forty and a "corps de ballet" of ten.

Military drills, fancy drills, marches and exercises, will be given at the Y.W.C.A. Gymnasium closing on Friday evening, April 29th.

WHEN THE GOVERNOR VISITED PETERBORO' IN YEAR 1826

The visit of His Excellency, Earl Grey, the Governor-General, on Saturday is an occasion on which Peterborough will be proud to welcome the distinguished visitor. The event recalls a visit made in the years long past by of a former Governor, and at a time when the Province was sparsely settled, and those who were here were hewing out a living amongst the forests that covered the territory. It is eighty-four years ago, and that is a very long time. But the span of man's life is really longer, on the average, than we assume it to be, for on the streets of the city, well and hearty, and bidding fair to live for many years yet, was a resident of the district, who was taken by his mother to pick berries on the ground now covered by the Oriental Hotel, Hunter street, the summer of the year of the Governor's visit, 1826.

The Chronicle of those days, after referring to the object of the visit, (now eighty-four years ago) says; — The reader's mind must go back, in order to realize the exact condition of the town at the period of the visit of His Excellency, Sir Peregrine Maitland, which took place in the winter of 1826, and just one year and a few months after the arrival of the immigrants (the Robinson immigration). It may be said that very few houses (and those only of the most common description) besides those erected by Mr. Robinson, then existed here. The portion of the site of town then cleared, was still disfigured by stumps, occasional brushheaps, etc., and altogether the scene was far from attractive, presenting but little accomplished in the present, and leaving a very wide margin for hope or despair in the undeveloped future.

His Excellency was accompanied on this occasion by Col. Talbot, founder of the Talbot settlement in Western Canada; by the Hon. John Beverly Robinson, then Attorney-General, afterwards made Baronet and Chief Justice of Upper Canada at the time of his decease. (Sir John was a brother of the Hon. Peter Robinson.) George G. Bethune, Esq., and the Hon. Zaccheus Burnham accompanied the party. The journey from Cobourg was made in sleighs and across Rice Lake, in the early part of the winter season. Passing up through Otonabee they stayed at the house of Captain Rubidge, R. N., for dinner, and on their arrival here they were met by Mr. Robinson, Col. Mcdonell, and the chief settlers adjoining the place, and entertained in the best manner circumstances would permit, in the log building already referrred to, where their entertainers resided. The Governor and his friends remained a few days, during which they were waited on by Capt. Rubidge, Robert Reid, Esq., the Hon. T. Stewart, M.L.C., and the few other gentlemen in the neighborhood. The central room of the government house, already described, was used as a reception room, in which a sort of rude levee was held. His Excellency was seated at the further end, and the settlers, who attended in considerable numbers, were presented to him, and then retired by another outlet. The occasion of this visit was seized to present to the representative of royalty sundry local and patriotic addresses. In one of these from the "Magistrates, clergy and other inhabitants of the county of Northumberland," the high sense of the honor conferred on the Newcastle district and the interest shown by His Excellency in the prosperity of the Province, in this visit, was acknowledged in suitable terms. Testimony was also borne to the good conduct of the immigrants during their residence at Cobourg, which was said "warrant the expectation of their becoming a valuable acquisition to the Province." This was the substance of their address.

A deputation from "the colony" in Smith, as the settlement there was called, was also appointed to wait upon the Governor, and Mr. Wilson, one of the early settlers, undertook to present a verbal address, the gentlemen of which had been previously agreed upon. The spokesman had proceeded but a little way, when his utterance became confused, and he broke down ingloriously. Turning around to Mr. Jacob Bromwell, another settler, who was of the deputation, he said;— "Speak it yor sir."

Mr. Bromwell continued the address to His Excellency, in which the difficulties and occasional distress were plainly portrayed, and the absence of milling facilities especially deplored. Wilson had told the Governor "We hae the mill, and we hae nee mill," but Bromwell, as a practical illustration of the necessity of better accommodation in this respect, added;—"Save in your presence, sir, I have to get up at night to chew corn for the children;" a statement which no doubt was literally true. His Excellency returned a gracious reply, in which he promised them assistance; a pledge which, ere long, he fully redeemed, to the great joy of the settlement.

A written address was presented on behalf of the Irish immigrants by Patrick Barragan, a schoolmaster, by whom it was read. As it is the only address from the neighborhood which has been preserved, the formal one being entirely verbal, and is, moreover, highly characteristic of the people from whom it emanated, we cannot refrain from presenting it entire:

To His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, etc.:

"We, the Irish Immigrants recently brought out by Colonel Robinson, feel grateful to our gracious good King, and to His Majesty's worthy, good and humane government, for all they have, and we hope, yet intend, to do for us.

"We also are are well pleased, and entertain the best wishes for our worthy Chief, Mr. Robinson, for all he has done for us, and we are fully sensible that his fine and humane feelings will not permit him to leave anything undone that may forward our welfare.

"Please Your Excellency, we are totally at a loss for words adequate to express our thanks and gratitude we owe Dr. Reade, for his active, skilful and unremitting care, etc., of us. We are likewise thankful to and well pleased with, the officers placed over us.

"Please, Your Excellency, we agree very well and are pleased with the proceedings of the old settlers amongst us, as it is in the interest of all to do the same. And should an enemy ever have the presumption to invade this portion of His Majesty's dominions, your Excellency will find that we, when called upon to face and expel the common foe, will to a man follow our brave commanders, not an Irish soul shall stay behind; and if we have no better weapons in our hands, mow them down with our Irish shillelahs.

"Please, Your Excellency, we labor under a heavy grievance which we confidently hope your Excellency will redress, and then we will be completely happy, viz.: the want of clergymen, to administer to us the comforts of our holy religion, and good school-masters to instruct our children.

"We now beg leave to retire, wishing your Excellency long life, good health and every success.'

"God Save the King.'

The Governors reply does not appear among the official records, and at this remote period it would be would be useless to attempt to gather up its precise terms from the memories of the survivors to whom it was addressed. It was, no doubt, as in other cases, gracious and encouraging.

During the brief stay of the Governor on the "plains," he had a number of gentlemen who accompanied him, drove out to see the settlement in Ennismore. The Hon. Peter Robinson and Col. McDonnell acted as their guides on this occasion. Mud Lake was crossed on the ice, and the party put up at the shanty of Mr. Eugene McCarthy, father of Jeremiah McCarthy, Esq., reeve of Ennismore, where they partook of such refreshments as their entertainers could procure.

During the same season other addresses, numerously signed, from the various townships in which the immigrants were settled, and breathing a similar spirit of gratitude, loyalty and devotion, were forwarded to the Right Hon. Earl Bathurst, Colonial Secretary, to whom they were addressed.

The infant settlements around Peterborough were greatly cheered and encouraged by this visit of the Governor-General proving, as it did, the paternal care of the government and the interest felt in the success and well-being of these hardy settlers. Not only was the moral effect beneficial, in increased confidence and hope, but its practical and material results were of the most gratifying character as the sequel will show.

It was soon after that at a meeting of a few gentlemen residing in the vicinity, the name of "Peterborough," was selected for the future town, the compliment to the Hon. Peter Robinson, to whose exertions in promoting the settlement of the neighboring townships they felt so much indebted. The selection was at once ratified by general consent, and "Scotts Plains" ere long ceased to be associated with the prosperous town. Before the opening of the next season the spring, 1826) it was announced that the government had undertaken the cost of the erection of a mill within the limits of the town, and tenders were asked for this work as well as well as for the construction of the necessary mill fam. Mr. Thos. Harper was among those who tendered on this occasion, but the contract was awarded to Mr. Horrace Perry, and the work immediately commenced.

THE VICE-REGAL PARTY TO CONSIST OF THREE

Word was received to-day from Rideau Hall, Ottawa, the residence of the Governor-General, that Earl Grey and party will arrive in Peterborough on the 11.20 C.P.R. train from Toronto, and will leave here for Ottawa on the mid-night C.P.R. train. He will be accompanied by the Earl of Lanesborough, Military Secretary, and Captain Fife, A.D.C. The letter received states that the programme drafted at the special meeting of the City Council on Saturday night, is satisfactory to His Excellency.

A meeting of the Reception Committee will be held this evening to make further arrangements for the reception to the vice-regal party.

OPERA WILL BE REPEATED FOR GOVERNOR GENERAL

Mr. R. J. Devey and the Peterborough Amateur Operatic Company will again present The Geisha at the Grand Opera House on Saturday evening.

At 7.30 last evening Mr. Devey received a telephone message from F. C. T. O'Hara, Esq., hon. secretary of the Executive Committee of the Earl Grey Musical and Dramatic Trophy Competition, stating that His Excellency and suite would be pleased to have an opportunity of witnessing production of this opera by the Peterborough Amateur Operatic Company.

It will be remembered that Mr. Devey and his company of local amateurs staged and sang this difficult opera at Toronto recently in competition with the whole of Canada, for the Earl Grey musical trophy, and while award went to Ottawa Symphony Orchestra, the Governor-General expressed his high approval of the work of the Peterborough Operatic company, and regretted that he had not had the privilege of seeing more than one act.

PERSONAL

Mr. James Deegand Ellegville, O., is in the city to-day on business.

Dr. Michell will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick while in the city.

Miss McGiverin and Miss Lafleur have returned from attending the summer millinary openings at Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Olin C. Bissell, of Peterborough, two former residents of Brockville, are shortly to again take up their abode here and Mr. Bissell will make Brockville his headquarters as travelling representative of the Ogilvie Milling Company, of Montreal. —Brockville Times.

Suggests General Turnout

It is suggested that when the Governor-General is taken from the Wolfe street wharf over the lift lock on Saturday afternoon that the private owners of launches, canoes and other smaller craft turn out in numbers befitting Peterborough's reputation as a boating and canoe town.

CONSOLIDATION OF MILLING CONCERNS

For some days past there have been reports in trade circles that an important consolidation might be looked for in the near future of two of the largest flour milling concerns of Ontario, and that prominent Toronto capitalists were becoming identified with the enterprise, and would place in the new company $1,000,000 of additional cash capital, which would result in the new concern being able to show just as large an output as any other Canadian milling concern. Enquiry at the offices of the companies reported to be in the deal failed to elicit much information regarding the details, but it is understood that an important announcement in regard to the consolidation will be made within a few days.

Geisha Rehearsal

A special rehearsal of the Geisha will be held to-night at 7.30 prompt in the Grand opera house, on account of the visit of Earl Grey next Saturday. All members of the company are earnestly requested to be on hand.

AN INTERESTING DEMONSTRATION

At the regular meeting of the Epworth League of George St. Methodist church last evening, the large number present were greatly interested in the demonstration by Mr. Roy Powell of wireless telegraphy. The demonstrator, who is also the inventor of a system, which he has had in operation at his home for some time past, explained the manner in which messages are sent through the air, and he received close attention throughout.

About the Chimes

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I trust I will not be considered as meddling with the affairs of others when I write a few words regarding the installation of chimes into St. John's church tower. It seems to me that it is not merely a congregational affair, but rather a matter of civic interest. Everybody would benefit by it, special and public occasions could be emphasized by the joyous pealing of the chimes, and the Lord's Day could be greatly enhanced by the sweet sound of hymns of praise pealed forth from God's house. Therefore, I would like to see the good people of Peterborough give every possible support to this undertaking.

E. A. LANGFELDT.

CANADIAN A WINNER AT BOSTON

Special to The Review.

BOSTON, APRIL 19.—THE FIRST THREE MEN TO FINISH IN THE BOSTON MARATHON THIS AFTERNOON WERE:

1. CAMERON, Nova Scotia.
2. DEMAR, Boston.
3. CORKERY, Toronto.

THE WINNER'S TIME WAS 2.28.52.

Boston, Mass., April 19.—Thirteen Canadians are taking part in the Marathon race. Cameron of Nova Scotia, sprang ahead at the start and took a big lead at a pace that the rest could not follow. At 45 minutes his time was equal to Longboat's phenomenal record. At 75 minutes Cameron was away ahead. Corkery, of Toronto, was second; Ryan, of New York, third, and Appleyard, of Yonkers, 4th. There is tremendous excitement over the international contest.

Boston, Mass., April 19.—Nearly a quarter of a million people are watching the race, but the roads are heavy, and Longboat's record cannot be broken. At 1.23 Cameron was still holding the lead, with Corkery, of Toronto, at his heels, and the race looked sure for the Canadians, and Mike Ryan (was third, Demar, of Boston, fourth, and Maloney, of Worcester, fifth. The latter is a dark horse and looks good for one of the leading positions.

With only last lap run Cameron romped past Collidge corners at 2.12, only 5 minutes behind Longboat's time. Demar, now second; Corkery third; Ryan, fourth, and Moloney fifth.

AMONG PROUD RAJPUTS

BRITISH LABOR M.P. TELLS OF VISIT TO FEUDAL INDIA.

Old-Fashioned Warrior People of Rajputana Are Proud of Their Mediaeval Customs and Have No Wish to Change—Chivalry Reigns There as in Europe Five Hundred Years Ago—Swords Everywhere.

North from Baroda the country becomes a great grassy plain, very much like the South African veldt, particularly between the Modder River and Magersfontein. The men change. They become more jaunty in their carriage.

They part their beards in the middle, and comb back the sides to their ears. They carry ancient guns and old-world scimitars. When the sun sinks in the evening a thousand herds of cattle wander home over innumerable tracks converging on the villages. This is Rajputana, the home of proud warriors and brave women.

Baroda, with a smile, says, "I am modern"; Rajputana, with a haughty sniff, says, "I keep the old ways." Commerce and politics have both invaded parts of it; some of its chiefs hanker after English Philistinism. But these degeneracies are still exceptions.

The first Rajput chief I met, says J. Ramsay Macdonald, M.P., in The London Chronicle, the well-known Sir Pertab Singh, of whom so many romantic tales are told, was deploring the fact that the hand of age was upon him, that there was no chance of another war, and that the probability therefore was that he would have to die on a bed.

Pax Britannica was nothing to him except an evidence that the Golden Age had passed. He was praying to be allowed to lead his polo team against Bengal politicians, and was promising to do the necessary damage with the mallets off the sticks. Two or three days under the same roof as Sir Pertab made me understand his spirit of Chitor.

Whoever comes to India and does not sit down on the plain below Chitor with a history at his elbow and a plan on his lap, and then go up the hill—on an elephant if possible—to the ruined temples, palaces, bazaars, tanks, and the still almost perfect towers, might as well have stayed at home. My friends are dinning it into my ears that there is no India. I do not know, but Chitor gives me something to go upon.

Round these walls tradition has woven most sacred garlands. Winding one's way up the long zig-zag road, which is flanked all along by massive walls and spanned every now and again by a frowning gate, one may still imagine that he hears the tramp of the Rajput cavalry going out to die, and it is easy to translate the hum of voices and other sounds which come down and go up from the villages at the top and bottom of the hill as the bridal song of the women going to their awful death by fire in the cavern of the palace rather than become prisoners in the hands of the Moguls.

The whole place is a vast temple of chivalry. Through these narrow lanes and over these ruined heaps one should go bare of head and foot. The sun set whilst we lingered there. Suddenly the land was filled with the beating of tom toms; lights flickered from the temples; the hum of prayers rose on every hand; queer forms moved in the gathering gloom. The spell of the Mighty Past fell upon us. At Chitor the past is dead, and only comes from its grave at nightfall. But not far off, in the new capital of the state, Udaipur, the Old Time still lives in the light of day.

The railway stops far out from the confines of Udaipur as an unclean stops at the threshold of a temple, and you have to drive for a mile or so to get to the city. Towering over the city are great white palaces and temple domes. The hills around are capped by palaces and forts, and temples. Holy men wander unkempt, ash covered, almost naked, in its streets, or sit beneath its trees, contemplating the Eternal and the all-comprehending Void.

Hardly had we arrived when we were told that a religious procession had started from the palace. Then they came blowing horns, beating drums and cymbals, on foot, on horses, on elephants, the Maharana under a golden umbrella near the rear.

The rains were over, and the time had come when the chiefs gathered round their ruler and prepared to go out with him to give battle. But before they went they had to propitiate the gods, therefore a holy man came and sat for ten days in a temple without food or sleep holding a sword on his knees, and every evening before the sunset the Maharana and his warriors went to do homage before him. They used to chant sacred songs and recite sacred verses on the way.

The sword of a long dead ancestor had been sent from the palace the day before, and the Yogi sat with it in the temple as though peace had not been declared, and as though other sounds than those of reaping still followed the rains.

Next morning the Maharana sent for us. Inside the palace all was Oriental bustle. Camels, horses, fowls, elephants wandered in the courtyards, the white walls of which simply flared with purity in the sun. A perfect maze of moving humanity, from whining babes to the decrepit, aged moved about.

Suitors with their petitions sat at the doorways, soldiers paced up and down in the arenas, with swords on their thighs, scribes and courtiers lounged against pillars, and stretched themselves on marble benches. Through endless passages, up innumerable stairs we were taken, and at length were ushered into the presence of a small, keen-eyed, grey-bearded, dignified man. He explained that he had been busy with his devotions. He toyed with a sword which lay across his knees.

We were away back in the Middle Ages in the presence of a man whose greatest boast was that no Moslem blood ever tainted his own, and that he had been true to the Rajput motto, "He who keeps the faith is preserved by God." He stood for the old ways, he told us. When he goes out into his domain 3,000 retainers follow him.

He sacrifices every morning to his gods; he sits on his judgment seat and hears the petitions of his people; he keeps his sword arm strong and crafty by hewing at clay images. Even his clocks decline to bow the knee to Calcutta, as his ancestors declined to accept the yoke of the Mogul—so he lives half an hour behind official time. I do not know to what enormities of heathendom I committed myself, but I said it was well that the old should not die.

He smiled approvingly, murmured that some of his chiefs were not so faithful as himself, shifted his sword, held out his hand, and we returned through the courtiers, the soldiers and the suitors into the noisy and the crowded courtyards far below.

Rural Dean Hewitt, of Hamilton, and Mrs. Hewitt have just celebrated the 25th anniversary of their wedding.

CLEVER MANCHESTER BOY.

How Many Grown-Ups Can Take This Exercise In Spelling.

A Manchester schoolmaster the other day gave out the following as a dictation exercise. One of the boys got it all right with only three mistakes. We always had a high opinion of Manchester youngsters, and consider that this dictation feat was something of which both master and boy should be proud. Schoolmasters in other parts of the country please copy.

"A much-maligned cobbler was a skilful gauger, who possessed a poignant disposition and drove a pedlar's wagon, using an alpenstock as an instrument of coercion to tyrannize over his donkey. He was a Galilean and a Sadducee, but phthisical catarrh, diphtheria, and a bilious, intermittent erysipelas occasioned him annoyance.

"The gipsy with the sobriquet of Sibyl went into an ecstasy at seeing him measure some saccharine tomatoes without either dyeing or singeing the ignitable queue that he wore; but he remarked that he would have preferred a woollen surtout.

"His choice was not referable to a vacillating, occasionally recurring idiosyncrasy. Therefore he woefully gave utterance to the following apophthegm:

"'Life is chequered, but schism, heresy, apostasy, and villainy shall be punished.'

"The sibyl, becoming paralyzed by haemorrhage, lifted her eyes to the cupola of the Capitol to conceal her unparalleled embarrassment, making him a rough curtsy, but not harassing him with mystifying, rarefying, and stupefying innuendoes. She gave him a bouquet of fuchsia, mignonette and dahlias, and a portmanteau containing this heterogeneous collection: a treatise on pneumonies, an Apocrypha, a book of hieroglyphics, a lecture on Mendelssohn, a kaleidoscope, a drachm phial of ipecacuanha, a clarionet, a violoncello, a cornelian of symmetrical proportions, a daguerreotype, and a guitar.

"The gauger, who was, by the by, a trafficking rectifier and a parishioner, thanked her cordially. She, apologizing, answered:

"'There are various degrees of wisdom, all problematically tuneable, but none comparable to the syllogism existing between an eligible ellipsis and a trisyllabic diaeresis.'"—Tit-Bits.

A Pugilistic Opera Singer.

Mr. John McCormick, the well-known English opera singer, is passionately fond of boxing. "It's the greatest sport in the world," he says. When Sam Hague and Langford met at the National Sporting Club a short time ago, Mr. McCormick was singing in "Rigoletto" at Covent Garden. He was so interested in the fight that he made arrangements with the fireman to let him know how the fight was going. Mr. McCormick was singing when the fireman appeared after the first round and beckoned him to the wings. Mr. McCormick kept on singing, and backed across the stage where he could hear him without the audience knowing. "Hague was knocked down in the first round," whispered the fireman, hoarsely. Then he sped back to the ringside again.

"It so happened," says Mr. McCormick, "that every time he reached the wings I was singing, and we went through the same performance. Hague was knocked down five times in the second, half a dozen times in the third, and so often in the fourth and last round that everybody lost track of the number. All this was whispered to me between the acts, the knock-out coming appropriately enough during the last act, when Rigoletto drags the sack containing the body across the stage." Mr. McCormick's sympathies were with Hague.

Pulling Him Through.

Mr. Melton Prior, the war artist, tells how during the Ashanjee War, on going up the hill into the town of Kumassi with the troops under Lord (then Sir Garnet) Wolseley, he was so tired and "done up" that he could scarcely walk. He was struggling along, when Lord Wolseley, mounted on a mule, passed, and without more ado he laid hold of the mule's tail. He had been assisted thus for but a short distance when Lord Wolseley turned round and saw what he was doing. Of course, he apologised, but Wolseley only laughed, and replied, "Hold on, Mr. Prior, we will pull you in."

Australia's Stony Desert.

The great stony desert of north Australia was discovered by Captain Sturt, an Australian explorer, in 1845-6. It is north of the river Darling and is about 300 miles long and 160 broad, consisting of sandy dunes or ridges. Its want of trees, except along the creeks, gives the country a sterile appearance. These ridges were probably formed by the joint effect of winds and a gradually retiring sea.

New Santa Fe Trail.

A modern highway, 275 miles long, through the "short grass country" in western Kansas would not only prove an illuminating object lesson for the entire state, but for all the country as well. The people of western Kansas have started a movement to afford the world just that object lesson in road building. From Newton to the Colorado line it is proposed to construct a continuous boulevard along the Arkansas river and call it "the new Santa Fe trail."—Kansas City Times.

Graceful and Distinctive Models in Spring and Summer Evening Gowns

BY A. T. ASHMORE.

THE fashionable, popular woman of to-day finds she must keep herself provided with smart evening gowns all the year round if she would be correctly "turned out." Consequently the constantly changing fashions in this style of gown are always eagerly sought, and the dressmaker who can cut the best dinner and ball gowns can always be sure of a desirable clientele. It is not such an easy matter to get satisfactory evening gowns as is generally supposed, for so much depends upon the figure of the wearer. A model that will meet universal approbation and be eagerly chosen by the majority will prove most unsatisfactory to one out of three purchasers, for color, material and design each and all have to be studied by the individual. This is one reason why there are always so many different designs in evening gowns.

The black evening gown has not of late been nearly so popular as a few seasons since. Certainly every well gowned woman includes at least one smart evening gown in her season's outfit, but no longer is it possible to feel smartly gowned in a black gown for any and every occasion. To be effective now the black gown must be of the richest quality and must be conspicuously trimmed to look as smart as the gown of light color. The crystal, steel, silver, gold and diamante trimmings will transform any black gown, and the embroidered tulle tunics are of immense assistance this season in giving the desired note of effectiveness.

A revival of a charming fashion of many years ago is seen in the evening gowns that are cut round instead of square and finished with the plain bertha of chiffon or tulle, edged with fringe of silver, crystal or gold. A black satin gown made in this fashion with a tunic or borders in black tulle and the bertha edged with silver, bead fringe and silver roses where the bertha fastens is most becoming. The same model, however, carried out in rose pink or a light shade of nattier blue is more effective. This season great attention is paid to the lines as well as the trimming of the waists of evening gowns; there are several attractive styles with the square lines, but among the newest are more with the round off the shoulder cut; the kimono effect is again given by the surplice folds of chiffon over the shoulders or by the lace that goes over the shoulders and finishes the top of the waist. The fashion still prevails of the sleeve dropping below the shoulder quite apart from the gown, but the lace that trims the waist shields the arm itself and softens the rather too eccentric effect wonderfully.

Lace is used this season more lavishly than ever and flounces, berthas and shawls of real lace, family heirlooms are now being brought out from treasure boxes and made use of.

Flounces with berthas to match, trim satin voile de soie gowns of all shades, and the lace is so used that its beauty of design and texture is displayed to the best advantage. Embroidered nets and laces that are not to be found in any treasure box, but are of the most recent manufacture, are in great demand for the summer evening gowns, and there are many women who contend that the modern laces can be utilised to far better advantage than can the most valuable old family lace, especially as one of the strongest of unwritten laws, to the effect that real lace must never be cut, causes the most extraordinary measures over-women. The embroidered nets and laces of the moment are certainly beautiful enough to satisfy the most capricious critic, and it must be conceded that it is far simpler to deal with the new than with the old.

Silver and gold laces are extremely fashionable and are well adapted for the trimming of all evening gowns. There are many different designs and textures, some light and fine with more net than design, others heavy of mesh and heavily embroidered as well. There are shaped tunics and garnitures of net and lace, embroidered in gold or silver, that transform the simplest satin or voile de soie gown into a superb and costly ball gown. border of gold beads are effective with a gown of satin made with draped skirt. These metal laces are quite transparent and, lined with pale pink chiffon, give the effect of a much lower cut waist than if the waist were of satin, and it is surprising how soft and pliable are the laces for it is not difficult to drape them in fichu or bertha effect.

They are to be had also at such a wide range of prices that they can be utilised with even a comparatively inexpensive material or in freshening a gown that has had hard usage and needs doing over. At the same time the most inexpensive gowns can be suitably trimmed with the expensive embroidered gold or silver laces. All kinds of embroidered nets and laces are smart this season, and heavy silk embroidery, colored, is combined with the finest lace net in a most novel and picturesque effect. Over a pale pink satin will be a tunic of gray tulle or voile de soie. This will be finished by a broad band extending half way up the skirt of a gray embroidered lace. Wandering across the original design of the lace—there is no other way to describe it—is a vine of pink roses worked in silk, shaded from palest to deepest pink. In description this may sound too heavy; in the material it is most charmingly light and airy, only the coloring of the pink against the gray, and this in turn shading into the pink of the satin.

Green is a popular color this season, and is to be worn not only in the day time but at evening as well. Nile green, fashionable twenty years ago, is now most popular and is a most effective and becoming color under artificial light. Covered with voile de soie the same shade or lighter, or with silver or crystal embroidered tulle, it seems most appropriate for the summer, while when intended for the most elaborate gowns it is trimmed with heavy gold, silver or crystal lace. Silk embroidery on the satin gowns was most fashionable last summer for the many elaborate gowns that were designed for the late summer season and will now be very smart for several months.

It is a mistake to combine any color with green in the embroidery on the satin, but two or three shades of green are much smarter. When the embroidery is on the tunic of transparent material or in bands of embroidery, color can be introduced, but at its best it is rather a dangerous experiment and not to be readily recommended.

Crystal, pearl, silver and gold embroidery on the material has been fashionable all winter, and it was thought that there would be a marked change in the fashions for summer evening gowns, but as yet there has not been any radical change in materials intended for the spring and summer evening gown. As has been already stated, the embroidered tunics of tulle, net, lace and voile de soie are to be used, but when the embroidery is used on satin designs are much smaller, less embroidery is used and every effort is made to have the general appearance less heavy. Trifling details, and yet all important in the woman who knows clothes and prides herself on always being correctly gowned.

Practical Fashions for Home Dressmaking.

EVERY self-respecting woman wants to be well dressed, but every woman is not blessed with an unlimited income, nor, alas! is every woman endowed with taste and talent for dressmaking. When the wardrobe for summer or winter, not to mention spring and autumn, has to be planned the time and thought that have to be directed to the important subject would scarcely be believed. This year the planning for the summer outfit will include a lot of making over—that is, for the great majority of womankind, who cannot buy recklessly.

A careful consideration of what there is on hand must be the first step, then the weeding out of the impossible, and be it understood there is no greater extravagance than spending time and money on a lot of hopelessly shabby old gowns. Two or three in good order are worth half a dozen that have seen so much hard wear and tear that they can only be made to do duty three or four times more before they literally fall to pieces. If a gown fits well and hangs well it is worth while to pay for the time of a good seamstress for two or three days in first carefully mending and repairing all damage; then, with either home or professional cleaning—the latter often well worth the extra cost—a careful study of the latest fashion cuts often will reveal a new fad as to trimming or draping that for little expense will make the gown like new. But before deciding upon any new trimming or material count the cost and see if the gown cannot be changed in appearance by some trimming already on hand, for if care be not taken the extras for making over gowns may run into many dollars that could far better be applied to the purchase of an entirely new one. The trimming from a gown that has been discarded can often be used in another that only needs the trimming to look fresh and smart.

REV. FATHER CASEY'S ADDRESS ON "IRELAND AND HER IDEALS"

Masterly Paper at Meeting of Ladies' Literary Society at the T.A.S. Rooms on Friday—Ireland's Staunch Clinging to Her Faith and Ideals.

Far out in the western sea, where the mighty waves of the Atlantic break upon her rocky shore, there lies a little island, the Dark Rosaleen of her poetic chroniclers, known on the world's map as Ireland. A tiny speck on the earth's surface, insignificant if measured by miles and leagues, and yet mighty with strange happenings in this Isle of Destiny. Its place in the great library of nations is beyond all superficial comparison, empires of which it would have formed but an insignificant province have risen up and lived and died, leaving behind them but scant memories of their greatness; but this strange land of a strange people has its record in the imperishable pages of time. It is a strange story, this story of Ireland. In it the smile and the tear, the light and the shade are inseparably blended as the sunshine and the shadows in the skies that overhang her sacred soil. And as in the Irish sky the cloud and the sunbeams play hide and seek with each other, so that you are never sure what any day is going to be like until it is over, in like manner when you turn over the pages of this Island's annals you can never reckon beforehand what any entry will be. For, if to-day it speaks of glory and the bright records of success and victory, to-morrow it may be the wail of her children in your ears and their piteous, appealing faces before your eyes. But one thing you can be sure of—one thing even the most cursory glance will reveal, and that is, that through smiles and through tears, through weal and through woe, Ireland has been faithful to her ideal. Ireland, as one of her poets beautifully said, lives and breathes for heaven above. Alone amid a materialistic world she seeks the Spirit. Along she recognizes that there is no god but God, and Mammon is but an idol made by the sordid hands of men. The prayer of Mangan has been upon her lips since first the apostle wrought with God upon the western mountain.

O, Ireland, be it thy high duty
To teach the world the might of moral beauty,
And stamp God's image truly on the struggling soul.

Other peoples have been busy about many things, Ireland has ever sought the one thing necessary, and for that she is willing to sacrifice everything—riches, prosperity, life itself. The world cannot understand her point of view. Grasp the present good, they say, we know not what the future brings. Faithless themselves, they would fashion God, even as they are—faithless too. But the breeze that plays above the martyred dead in the lonely graveyards, speaks to Ireland of an eternal promise. And like the murmur of her limpid streams or the joyous paean of her feathered songsters deep in sequested glens, is her unceasing credo.

It is not my intention to speak to you to-night of the story of Ireland from a political standpoint. That would be an interesting study. But I prefer to treat of another aspect of Irish history—that summarized in the title of this paper. We all have ideals—consciously or unconsciously we set for ourselves a model and we strive to imitate that model more or less successfully. It is with nations as with individuals. And Ireland in common with all other peoples, has her ideals. Come with me to-night while we turn over the pages of her history, and we will see what is Ireland's ideal.

That thou sought'est
Shall not lack consummation. Many a race,
Shrivelling in sunshine of its prosperous years and was [illegible]
Shall cease from faith, and, shamed, though shameless, sink
Back to its native clay, but over thine
God shall the shadow of His hand extend,
And through the night of centuries teach of her,
In woe, that story which, when the nations wake
Shall sound their glad deliverance. Nor alone
This nation from the blind dividual dust
Of instinct, trade, thoughts drifting in wills,
Be Thou evoked and shaped by thy hands
To God's fair image, which confers alone
Manhood on nations, shall to God stand true;
But nations far in undiscovered seas,
Her stately progeny while ages waste,
The kingly ermine of her faith shall wear.

Fifteen hundred years have passed away since the great Victor thus spoke to our national apostle at the end of his forty days wrestling in prayer with the Almighty, on the summit of Croagh Patrick, overlooking the Western Sea. This people whom the had by his own hands formed to the image of Christ, would come well or come woe, "to God stand true." The lamps of faith would never be extinguished upon the altar of Erin. Persecution and suffering she would endure the red hand of war, the black shadow of famine would shut out the sunshine from the fair hills and convert the smiling valleys into a land of horror; foreign foes would come, but Erin would still stand true.

In the old days when the fierce barbarian hordes swept down on western Europe like a swarm of locusts, eating up and destroying every vestige of culture and religion, burning schools, devastating churches, destroying books—when the darkness of a new paganism was settling down on the fair provinces of Austria and Germany and Italy and Spain, and France, all eyes turned, as to their only hope, to the insignificant island that lay far out beyond Britain, they looked to Ireland to re-kindle anew the lamps in the desecrated churches, and to relight the torch of learning in the dismantled halls of the universities. Ireland — poverty-stricken, famine-stricken Ireland, had the great mission given her to spiritualize, to Christianize the world.

Now it is all very well to take pride in our country's glorious past, but what of the present. What will the future bring forth? Will Ireland be true to her vocation? It is for us to decide. We are the link between the past and the future. If we fail in our duty to Ireland our glory is gone forever. Shall we alone of all the generations that have looked upon these green fields and heard the rushing of the mighty waters through these smiling valleys, shall we prove faithless to the heritage of the ages? No! A thousand times no! Ireland saved Europe from Hun and Vandal. She will save the world from the new paganism that worships matter and images before success. We need have no fear if we are only true to our country and true to ourselves. True to our country; remembering her ancient glory, believing in her vocation, proud of the fact that we are Irishmen, but at the same time not hating other nations. If we have our national virtues, so have we our national defects. Let us never have our national virtues, so have we our national defects. Let us never be ashamed of our Motherland, but let us always respect those that differ from us in nationality. It is the Irish ideal, the open door that signifies "a hundred thousand welcomes" to the stranger, it is the Christian ideal—"I became all things to all men that I might gain all." Respect for ourselves—love for our country. Freedom for mind, heart, conscience—that is the mission of the Irish race.

In fifteen hundred years Ireland has pursued that ideal unflinchingly and unwaveringly. And to-day when the other nations and other peoples have made for themselves graven images—when other peoples offer incense at the shrine of Mammon and grovel before the fetich self, Ireland still cherishes in her heart this, her ideal, and all that it means.

Ladies and gentlemen, for a few minutes we have dipped into the story of the Isle of Destiny. We have tried to discover what is the explanation of her wondrous fidelity and her deathless faith. We have asked and answered the question, "What is Ireland's Ideal?" And we have found that it is symbolized in the one word "Spirit." Ireland cares nothing for material greetings or worldly success. She understands as only God's people can understand that the fashion of this world passes away; and she knows that in the great day when the Ruler of Nations will hear the causes of men, that colonies and possessions, vast armies and great fleets, and mighty cities will count as nothing compared with one soul taught the way to truth and brought nearer to life.

The Gaelic League has revolutionized Ireland. It is teaching her self-respect and self-reliance. It is teaching her to live up to her ideal because it shows her that her greatness and her glory are altogether in this ideal. Within the last year we have seen inaugurated in Dublin the New National University, which gives us reason to hope that in a very little while Ireland will be again the Teacher of Nations—the Island of Scholars. A new soul is abroad in Erin. The old days are gone forever—the old days of despondency and hopelessness and despair, when

"Each morrow brought sorrows and shadows of dread,
And the rest that seemed best was the rest of the dead."

The future is bright for our dear country—it is a future of hope. The Gaelic League has done more to perpetuate the living faith of Ireland than all the sermons that could be preached in a generation, for it has interested our people in this country, it has encouraged them to go teach or study her history, and in the study they cannot fail to see that Ireland's greatness lies altogether in her fidelity to the faith, and that any divorce between faith and nationality would rob her of the brightest gem in her emerald crown.

The programme for the evening was as follows:—

Instrumental duet—Misses Pierce and Giroux.
Vocal solo—Miss E. Delaire.
Vocal solo—Master J. Clancy.
Recitation—Miss K. Derocher.

At the conclusion of the lecture a vote of thanks, moved by Rev. Father Meagher and seconded by Miss E. O'Connor, was tendered to Rev. Father Casey for his very interesting address.

LAST OF FAMILY RETURNED HOME

Four Members of Hastings Family Who Were Stricken With Typhoid Fever Have Recovered

Miss Stella Sharpe, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. Sidney Sharpe, of Hastings, who with her mother and two sisters was brought to this city about two months ago suffering with typhoid fever, returned to her home this morning, having recovered from a severe and lingering illness. All four patients were under the care of Dr. Leach. The youngest, a baby of eighteen, with Mrs. Sharpe, and a daughter of nine years, had previously returned to their homes. The case when first reported by the Review, was a particularly sad one, and the splendid record made is a matter of much satisfaction to Dr. Leach and thankfulness to the family.

ADDRESS WAS EXCEEDINGLY INTERESTING

It was an exceedingly interesting address that was given at St. Andrew's last night under the auspices of the Y.P.S., by Rev. Harold A. Clarke, B.A., of Honan, China. Mr. Clarke has done splendid work in that far-off mission field and his story of life, conditions and the work of the missionaries there was followed with the deepest interest. Mr. Clarke organized the mission to which a substantial bequest was made by Mrs. Maxwell, of Peterborough, and his address was of more than ordinary interest to Peterborough people on that account. It was illustrated by stereopticon views, the lantern being operated by Mr. H. O. Fisk.

The musical programme consisted of a piano duet by Miss E. Kelly and Miss Dawson and two violin solos by Master Roy Rankin.

BUILDING SHOOK WITH APPLAUSE

Of the famous Australian soprano, Miss Margaret McCann, who has sung throughout the British Empire and United States, and been most enthusiastically received, and who appears in this city at the opening of the new T.A.S. hall on the evenings of April 27th and 28th, the New York Daily News says:—

A feature of the Emmet Celebration at the Brooklyn Grand Opera House was the appearance of the famous Australian soprano, Miss Margaret McCann, who was introduced by the chairman, David Healy, as a "singer of international renown who came all the way from the Antipodes to pay respectful homage to the memory of Emmet." Miss McCann received a welcome from the great audience which has seldom or never been equalled in the case of any other stranger. The building fairly shook with applause as she was escorted to the platform by Mr. Healy.

Miss McCann is a beautiful woman with a gracious manner, a graceful carriage and great personal magnetism. But the beauty of her voice is the greatest of all. It has a golden warmth, a limpid crystal purity and a sympathetic quality which is lacking in many great artists. Her vocal method is the perfection of art. She has an exquisite tone production, perfect command of sustaining power, even to the vanishing point of tone, and her phrasing is artistic and finished in every detail.

BY THE WAY

Peterborough ladies are hoping that the tail of Halley's comet will sweep the earth.

Some men think they are in love when they are only lonesome.

Regina has fifteen miles of street, mostly clay. Peterborough has fifteen miles of streets, mostly mud.

Many Peterborough gentlemen are wondering how they will look in a stovepipe hat on Saturday.

Lady Grey will not visit Peterborough on Saturday. Likely she has to stay at home to get something ready for the Sunday meals.

CANARY BIRDS.

The Care That Should Be Bestowed Upon These Songsters.

Those who are charmed by the singing of the canary will find in the following directions much that will increase the happiness of the songster, provided the hints are heeded:

Place the cage so that no draft of air can strike the bird. Give nothing to healthy birds but rape and canary seed, water, cuttlefish bone and gravel paper or sand on the floor of the cage; no hempseed; a bath three times a week. The room should not be overheated—never above 70 degrees.

When moulting (shedding feathers) keep warm, avoid all drafts of air. Give plenty of German rape seed. A little hard boiled egg mixed with crackers grated fine is excellent.

Feed regularly at a certain hour in the morning. By observing these simple rules birds may be kept in fine condition for years.

For birds that are sick or have lost their song procure bird tonic at a bird store. Very many keep birds who mean to give their pets all things to make them bright and happy and at the same time are guilty of great cruelty in regard to perches. The perches in a cage should be each one of a different size and the smallest as large as a pipestem.

If perches are of the right sort no trouble is ever had about the bird's toe nails growing too long, and, of all things, keep the perches clean.—Exchange.

At the Prune Club.

"Now, who can tell me why a submarine is like a good man?" asked the thin boarder at the breakfast table.

"'Cause it can't be shut up, I suppose," suggested a married man.

"Not right."

"Because it goes better if it has a mate," came from the newly married man.

"Nope."

"We'll give it up!" came the chorus.

"'Cause you can't keep a good one down all the time."—Yonkers Statesman.

Sedan and Bath Chairs.

The sedan chair, so called from having been made at Sedan, in France, was introduced into England in the time of King Charles I. Often this chair was most ornate without and luxurious within, for an ancient poet speaks of one—

* * * Covered with velvet red,
And cloth of fine gold about your head,
With damask white and azure blue
Well diapered with lilies new.

Seated in their sedan chairs in all the glory of paint, powder and patches, the belles and ladies of fashion of the eighteenth century were carried from rout to rout by two stout lackeys in livery. As all people who love their Dickens are aware, these chairs were still in use in the days of the Pickwick club.

The origin of the bath chair is "wropt in mystery." We are told that it was "much used by the inhabitants of Bath," probably for the purpose of getting to and from the pump room. Nowadays the use of the bath chair is confined chiefly to invalids.—London Mail.

Frank Green rescued Mrs. Branton, of Wallaceburg, from drowning in the Sydenham river by plunging in after her.

GERMANY MAKING HELIGOLAND NAVAL BASE

GERMANY'S IMPORTANT NORTH SEA NAVAL BASE.

HEAVY WINTER SEAS A MENACE TO HELIGOLAND.

ATTRACTIVE RESORT IN SUMMER.

WALLS BUILT BY GERMANS.

ISLAND CONSISTS OF LAYERS OF RED CLAY.

Heligoland, a small island in the North Sea, formerly belonging to Denmark, was taken by the British from the Danes in 1807 and was ceded to Germany in 1890 in return for concessions made to Britain in East Africa. The resident population of the island is something above two thousand, though in the bathing season Heligoland is visited by upwards of twelve thousand summer visitors, attracted by the admirable facilities which it affords.

Germany has spent an enormous amount of money on the island. The first step was to protect the land itself from the sea, which had made very serious inroads; thus the island is heavily armored, chiefly with cement, to keep the place together. Then followed the fortifications, which have so changed the character of the island, and the harbor, which will provide a base for the Kaiser's torpedo and submarine craft, that Heligoland is destined to play no small part in any war in which the German navy may be engaged in the North Sea, and for such a small place it has had an exceedingly interesting history.

In recent years Germany has devoted much attention to the island, and it is being developed as an advanced torpedo base. Nominally it will be the centre of the German coast defence naval organization, with warlike arms stretching out to every port of importance along the North Sea Teuton shore. Actually the island will be the point of concentration for the mosquito flotillas of destroyers, submarines and mining craft which Germany has or is preparing to station at Emden, Wilhelmshaven, Bremerhaven, Cuxhaven, Brunsbuttel and Sylt.

An enormous sum has also been spent upon a harbor and for torpedo craft, while magazines have been set up for the storage of fuel, ammunition, torpedoes and submarine mines.

MADE TWO REPORTS

Alberta Engineer Made Different Ones for Company and Cabinet.

Edmonton, Alta., April 20.—On the stand yesterday morning before the royal commission, Engineer A. L. Waddell told much of interest relating to the A. & G. R. He practically admitted giving a report of the estimated cost to the Government that was higher than a report, supposed to be similar, which was on the previous file with the company.

He said all his estimated figures were higher and on the safe side, but he was working for Clarke and endeavored to protect him. He admitted making a private confidential report to Clarke for the Royal Bank, in order to get the bank to finance for them. This report had shown a probable profit of $1,000,000, based on a cost of $17,000 a mile, or a profit of $1,000 a mile on the 350 miles of the road. Waddell said he was going to build a better road than the specifications called for. The Government had practically forced the specification on him when he had better ones to produce.

In answer to a question as to why he wired in cipher to Clarke, warning him against guaranteeing the operation of the road, Waddell said he knew that the million-dollar guarantee promised by Clarke in his letter to the Government was foolish, as it would prevent getting money from the bank, since it was different from the agreement with the bank. He admitted that the A. & G. W. R. Co. is paying a salary of $12,000 to its general manager.

Speaking of the specifications which have been accepted by the Government, for the construction of the road, he said he would be ashamed to build a road under those specifications, and that the Alberta Government had forced the specifications on them.

The specifications now in effect allowed for the building of a road $1,000 cheaper per mile than those he proposed.

He said also that they had bought 56-pound rails for the $38 and $40 per ton laid down in Edmonton.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Belleville's tax rate will be 27 mills.

Premier Roblin of Manitoba denies that the provincial elections will be held in June.

The Paris Society for the Protection of Animals has awarded a grand diploma to Edmund Rostand for writing the Chantecler.

"The greates living soldier in the world," was the tribute paid by J. H. Choate, the brilliant New York lawyer, to Lord Kitchener, field marshal of Great Britain, at the dinner given in his honor by the Pilgrims at the Waldorf-Astoria.

With a force that shook the surrounding country, dynamite was exploded in a summer cottage owned by John Payne, widely known in racing circles, at Hyland, Ky. The cottage was destroyed. No clue to the dynamitor has been found.

SIR WILFRID REFUSES TO LET FLEET OUT OF CANADA'S CHARGE

He Declines Absolutely to Allow the New Navy to Automatically Engage in Britain's Wars---Must Have Orders From Home Before Fighting—Amendment is Made to Vested Authority.

Ottawa, April 20.—Interest in the navy bill is not yet dead, so far as the Commons are concerned.

The fight in committee on the bill yesterday was fiercer than ever, and Mr. Borden and the Premier, with Mr. Fielding as his quick-firing gun, had many warm exchanges.

Mr. Borden and Mr. Doherty, who, by the way, yesterday occupied Hon. Mr. Foster's accustomed place at Mr. Borden' left hand, had an Opposition victory over the clause which professes allegiance to the crown, their suggestion that words be inserted similar to those of the Militia Act, making the royal prerogative very clear, being accepted by the Premier.

But in regard to the question whether the Canadian navy should assist the Empire automatically when at war, the Government would yield nothing. The Premier insisted that there would be no delay in the hour of danger, but that Canada should retain complete control of her own navy.

W. F. Maclean suggested as a compromise that in time of emergency Parliament could, by order-in-council, place the fleet temporarily under control of the British Admiralty.

The effect of the day's battle on Sir Wilfrid was plainly visible. He was very hoarse and very tired at the end of the day.

The House lost no time in getting down to business yesterday morning, and the Premier soon explained the proposed creation of the naval service department. The Department of Marine and Fisheries was already overburdened and it had long been desired to sub-divide it, if it could be possibly done. The new Department would be under the control of the Minister of Marine, with a deputy, and would administer the navy, the fisheries protection service, the hydrographic survey, the tidal observation service and the wireless telegraph service. These plans were approved.

W. B. Northrup objected to clause 4, which vests in His Majesty the King the control of the naval forces, through the Governor-General as his representative. It was explained that the wording was similar to the Militia Act, and as embodied in section 9 of the B.N.A. It could not be expected that under the constitution of Canada or any of the young daughter nations of the Empire the king could exercise his authority directly; that must be done through his representative.

"The clause is, in fact, a guarantee of responsible Government," said W. F. Maclean, Mr. Northrup, however, argued that the King alone could delegate his authority, and that the Parliament of Canada has not that power.

Sir Wilfrid went on to say that the prerogative of the crown over the army and navy had long passed into Parliament, and as the British constitution was introduced into Canada by the British North America Act of 1867, and as the authority of the crown over the army and navy was then limited, he contended that we had complete control.

The Minister of Justice, after declaring that he would not remain for a day in the Government if he thought there was an intention in this bill to undermine Canada's connection with the Mother Country, pointed out that in 1865 the British Parliament declared that with the consent of the King-in-council any colony could establish a navy and two years later the same body had declared that the Canadian Parliament could establish a navy.

Mr. Doherty said Canada had not the power to determine where the command of the forces should be. That question had been disposed of by the British North America Act. It was noteworthy that when the militia act was framed, no attempt was made to determine where the command rested, and he suggested that the wiser course would be to follow the framework of the B.N.A. Act.

R. L. Borden agreed Parliament had no legislative authority to enact as regards command. He quoted from a speech by Sir Charles Fitzpatrick in the House in 1904, when he expressed a similar opinion, and also quoted from Hansard, Sir Wilfrid Laurier agreeing with the then Minister of Justice.

The Imperial Parliament, continued Mr. Borden, could deal with the prerogative of the crown in any way it saw fit under modern conditions, but this Parliament could go no further than the limits of the B.N.A. Act. He quoted also from a work by Judge Clements, who was explicit.

The Premier eventually agreed that the following words should be inserted in the clause, "declared to continue and be," the clause, therefore, reading: "the command in chief of the naval forces is declared to continue and be vested in the King, and shall be exercised and administered by His Majesty's or by the Governor-General as his representative."

The clause was then adopted as amended.

There was a conflict between Mr. Borden and the Premier over clause 18 which reads: "In case of an emergency the Governor-in-council may place at the disposal of His Majesty for general service in the royal navy, the naval service or any part thereof," etc.

Mr. Borden asked what would happen supposing an emergency occurred, and the Governor-in-council did not agree to place the Canadian naval service at the disposal of Britain.

The Premier replied that the ships would then remain at home. It did not follow that Canada should take part in all the wars in which Britain was engaged. If the Government of the day did not do its duty, it would be responsible to the people.

Mr. Borden pointed out that the whole fate of the Empire might be decided while the Government was making up its mind. What would the fleet do if they met an enemy at war with the Empire?

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the question was whether Canada should exercise judgment or should mechanically take part in every war in which Britain was engaged.

Mr. Borden: "What position would Canada take in a war with a great nation?"

Sir Wilfrid replied that Canada should not be called upon to take part with an older nation, like England. But if a war arose which would put England in the scale of destiny, a wave of enthusiasm for the Motherland would pass over Canada. If ever the day came that the naval supremacy of Great Britain was challenged, all the resources of Canada would be placed at her disposal.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the vessels would defend themselves if attacked, but would not make an attack unless ordered to do so. In the event of an emergency, there would be no doubt about going to the assistance of the British fleet.

Hon. W. S. Fielding argued that it was only on rare occasions that a British ship acted without orders. The provision was essential to the bill, because if Mr. Borden's scheme were adopted, it would mean that the Canadian fleet would be called upon, if an insurrection were to break out in any part of the Empire, because "emergency," under the act, included invasion and insurrection.

BUDGET IS INTRODUCED

Last Year's Measure Again Brought Into the British Commons.

London, April 20.—Mr. David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, reintroduced last year's Budget in the House of Commons yesterday. He declared he realized that the present deficit of $131,240,000 would be more than wiped out when all arrears had been collected, and that there would be an actual surplus of $14,800,000. If the Budget had been passed as usual last year, he said, there would have been a surplus of $21,000,000.

The Chancellor commented upon the remarkable decrease of thirty-two per cent. in the consumption of whisky, which he attributed mainly to the extra duty imposed.

The famous Budget of 1909 was presented to the House of Commons by Mr. Lloyd-George a little less than a year ago—on April 29, to be exact. The debate began in the Commons on May 3, but the measure was hung up on several occasions, and it was not until Nov. 4 that the lower House passed the third reading by a vote of 379 to 149. Then it went to the Lords, and after three weeks' discussion was rejected on the last day of November by 350 to 75.

In order to meet the demands for increased expenditure which the more extensive naval program and the new scheme of old-age pensions adopted by the Government created, and which rendered necessary the raising of $80,000,000 more than the amount of any previous Budget, Mr. Lloyd-George had recourse to various expedients. He placed heavier taxes on incomes over $25,000 a year; he added a third to the whisky duty; put eightpence additional upon tobacco; subjected motor cars to heavier taxation; increased the death duties, and placed a small tax on Stock Exchange transactions.

UNIVERSITY IS PLANNED FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA

Victoria, B.C., April 20.—Under authority of legislation of last session, the British Columbia Government has named a special royal commission to select a site and formulate general plans for the establishment of a provincial university, intended to rank second to none, while leading the world in facilities for instruction in certain technical branches, such as mineralogy, forestry, mining, engineering, horticulture, etc.

The personnel of the commission includes Dr. Pritchett of New York, president of the Carnegie endowment establishment, Dr. Weldon, of Dalhousie University, Nova Scotia; Canon Duthie, of Laval University, Quebec; Dr. O. E. Skellon, professor of political science of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., and Principal Murray of the University of Saskatchewan.

The British Columbia University will from its inception be relieved of all money worries, the Government having years ago adopted the policy of setting aside tithe of all public lands for higher education purposes, so that the endowment yesterday represents scarcely less value than forty to fifty millions. Both academic and specialized education will be amply provided for.

CONSTABLE AT VANCOUVER WAS KICKED TO DEATH

Vancouver, April 20.—Answering a summons for aid by railway officials, Constable Lane was killed Monday evening by a band of hoboes numbering at least seven, who had boarded the Seattle express as it pulled out of the Canadian side of Sumas.

The constable boarded a southbound train and met the express two stations south of Mission. The hoboes were seated at their ease and defying the conductor in the smoking-car when the constable arrived. He at once ordered them off, but his orders were met with a volley of oaths. The constable seeing that further parley was useless, resorted to force, and with the help of the train crew grabbed two of the men and rushed them towards the door.

In the melee which followed, the constable was thrown to the floor and was lost to view. The brakeman, conductor and fireman finally succeeded in getting rid of the men, who, by this time had taken up their position on the vestibule. A hasty examination of the constable on the floor revealed injuries inflicted by may feet. He died later.

The three men have been arrested and charged with murder.

ONLY FOUR MEN KILLED

Ten Others Were Injured in the Quebec Landslide Which Struck Train

Ottawa, April 20.—E. B. Doucet, N.T.R. engineer on district B, yesterday afternoon got into communication by telephone with La Tuque, Que., and got definite details as to the exact nature of the accident resulting from an embankment sliding away on Monday, carrying a work train with it.

According to information received by Mr. Doucet, from engineers on the spot, four men only were killed, and ten injured.

The train, which fortunately was a short one, and made up of flat cars, so jarred the top of the embankment that the top of it gave way. Cars, engine, workmen and all were hurled violently over the edge, where four were crushed to instant death, and ten seriously injured.

"It is only an ordinary accident that will occur on any road," said Mr. Doucet. "Our men or our engineers were in no way to blame for loss of life that occurred."

Of fourteen men killed or injured in the wreck nine were Italians. The others were French or English. Eleven workmen escaped without injuries.

Quebec Says Many Fatalities.

Montreal, April 20.—Superintendent H. Downey of McDonald & O'Brien, contracting firm, stated yesterday evening that two Poles were killed and an Italian, but they have not been identified.

WAS GOING TO BRIBE JUDGE

Brantford, April 20.—Harry Gourijian, leader of the local Armenian colony, and Police Court interpreter, was charged with fraud in court yesterday, and committed for trial. Chas. Garo, a storekeeper, against whom an action for debt was pending swore that Gourijian secured $45 from him to bribe the judge of the county court. Garo wanted to withdraw the charge in the morning, but the crown would not consent.

Local Englishmen are aroused over a recent comparison made in the Police Court by Chief Slemin between a certain class of English and foreign immigrants. An indignation meeting has been called by the presidents of two lodges.

JAMES K. HACKETT CANNOT RE-MARRY

New York, April 20.—A final decree of divorce for Mary Mannering the actress, from James K. Hackett, the actor, was signed by Justice Fitzgerald in the Supreme Court yesterday.

The decree provides that Miss Mannering shall have the custody of the only child. Hackett is prohibited from re-marrying and Miss Mannering is permitted to retain the name of Mary Mannering. No mention of alimony is made in the decree.

THIS WILL PLEASE THE SUFFRAGETTES

Washington, D.C., April 20.—The Senate of the United States has promised to report the arguments on the petition in favor of woman's suffrage.

This is the first time this body ever promised to report a woman's suffrage deputation. The deputation to both the Senate and House were the largest in the history of the American movement, although not as large as the deputation last year to the Ontario Legislature at Toronto.

This closes the largest and most representative convention ever held in the United States.

SOME KNOCKS FOR MR. BALFOUR

London, April 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Canadian Associated Press has heard that agricultural societies in England are likely to protest against Balfour's proposal to admit colonial wheat free.

G. N. Broomhill, the well-known trade statistician, expressed the opinion that one effect of exemption would be to disappoint British agriculturists and offend American; another would be the production of inferior flour, as the British miller would be unable to make as good flour out of colonial as out of the combination of colonial and foreign.

A MONUMENT TO TECUMSEH

Toronto, April 20.—That a public subscription list should be inaugurated for the erection of a monument to the great Indian chief Tecumseh, same to be unveiled in 1912, the centenary of the war in which he played such a great part in saving Canada to the crown, is the timely and patriotic suggestion of F. O. Loft, himself a prominent representative of the Six Nations' Indians.

It was Tecumseh, chief of the Shawnees, whose efforts united the various tribes as allies of the British. Military writers have since declared that had it not been for this valuable aid, that the United States forces would have triumphed. Tecumseh was killed in battle at Thamesville in 1813.

Mr. Loft's idea is that a statue should be erected in Queen's Park, as the centre of the province.

The Canadian clubs will be asked to consider the proposal.

MISS PRIESTLAND IS LOCATED

Montreal, April 20.—Nellie Priestland, the young lady from Jarvis, Ont., who has been missing from her boarding house here since March 24, is alive and well, according to detectives working on the case. They say that they have traced her as far as Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Minnehaha Deemed.

Hughtown, Scilly Islands, April 20.—There appears to be little chance of saving the Minnehaha, and she probably will go to pieces within a few weeks, and in the event of bad weather will not hold together for more than a few days.

MANITOBA STOCK SOLD IN ENGLAND

Winnipeg, April 20.—Hon. Hugh Armstrong, Provincial Treasurer, has received a cable from the Government agent in London, stating that a million dollars of new Manitoba stock had been underwritten at 103. This is the first sale of stock since the new plan was inaugurated. Formerly each issue of provincial bonds was sold separately, but now all the provincial loans will be simply Manitoba stock, and listed accordingly. It was thought this would appeal to the investor and place the provincial credit on a more substantial basis.

J. A. RODLER DEAD AT MONTREAL

Montreal, April 20.—J. A. Rodler, one of the pioneers in the labor movement in Canada, died in Montreal yesterday. He was labor editor of La Patrie for past nine years. He was one of the organisers of the Knights of Labor twenty years ago, and when they were thrown out of the convention at Berlin, Ont., ten years ago, he told Ralph Smith, president of the congress, and now M.P. for Nanaimo, that he would give ten thousand dollars to be able to tell him his opinion of him in his own language.

Abbot Resigns.

Rome, April 20—The Giornale Italia says that because of his visit to ex-President Roosevelt in Rome, Abbot Lawrence Janssens, secretary of the congregation of the affairs of religious orders, has resigned all the positions held by him and the headquarters of the church. The paper adds that the Pope has not yet taken any decision.

THIS COUPLE CAN REPENT AT LEISURE

Brantford, April 20.—The Penman Co., the big woollen manufacturers of Paris, are minus one of their English girls to-day, and thereby hangs a romance.

One day last week a man, apparently 25 years old, secured employment at the mills. Looking over the factory girls, of whom there are about a thousand, he singled one out, asked her address, called on her Friday night, and married her on Saturday afternoon. The couple left that evening for their new home in Seattle, Washington, where the young man, who gave his name as George West, is said to be a civil engineer.

The girl was a Miss McMillan, who came out from England only three weeks ago. The groom, who secured employment merely to pick out a wife, refunded to the Penman Co. $40, the amount of the passage money which had been advanced to bring the girl to this country.

A Good Guesser

Jack Riley won the set of dishes at the Brock street roller rink last night. The number of beans in the jar was 2,400 and the winner's guess was 2,399.

On Friday night a ladies' skating competition will be held, and the winner will receive a handsome hat pin, valued at $3.50.

MGR. BRUCHESI EXPLAINS WHY HE OBJECTED

Montreal, April 20.—In a statement last night, Mgr. Bruchesi says that his reason for notifying Justice Lemieux that he should not give his temperance address in St. James' Methodist Church Sunday evening, was simply out of respect to the church discipline. The address was to take place after the regular service, with the regular congregation, and the regular pastor presiding. It would have been just as wrong for a Methodist to have been asked to occupy a Catholic pulpit.

PRINCE OF WALES ASSISTS THE WEST

London, April 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Prince of Wales has contributed $2,500 to the Archbishop's Western Canada fund, as expressing his deep interest therein, and having visited western Canada he realizes the difficulties arising there from the extraordinary immigration, and trusts the appeal in connection with such a noble work will receive generous support.

The fund has reached over $70,000. It is estimated $1,125,000 will be needed.

BLOCKADE AT PORT COLBORNE

Port Colborne, Ont., April 20.—The drifting and huge cakes of ice driven into the harbor Monday night has caused a blockade at the entrance of the lock here. Up-bound boats are unable to force their way, unless a change of wind from the north returns it to the lake. The following steamers are detained: Paramount, Ungava, Arabian, Keyport, Keywest, Burlington, and Imperial and Barge.

CHURCH HONORS FOR A BAD MAN

In the United States at present an active discussion is in progress as to whether it is right for a church to accept money which has been acquired by wrong methods. Some American ministers go so far as to say that a gift should not be accepted from a man like Mr. Rockefeller, although his private life is known to be pure and irreproachable, because of his connection with the great Standard Oil Trust. This is an extreme view. A more moderate opinion is that no church should accept money from a man whose life is known to be corrupt. Certainly if, for the sake of the money he contributes or may contribute, a church honors a man whose public or private life is known to be corrupt by giving him prominence in its functions, it says in effect to the young people of its congregation: "Be as vile and corrupt as you please, provided that you pay money into the coffers of the church."

HAS ONTARIO COAL ?

How much truth was there in the alleged discovery of good coal in Northern Ontario, announced some weeks ago? A statement of this kind should be either verified or disproven. If there is good coal in the north it is of the utmost importance that it shall be conserved by the Government for the benefit of the people of this Province. Old Ontario is dependent upon a foreign country for coal. The distance to Northern Ontario is great, but not so great as to Nova Scotia. On the other hand there is water communication all the way from the coal mines of Nova Scotia and yet it has not been found profitable to sell Nova Scotia coal in Ontario except in the most eastern counties. However, the coal boats which come from Nova Scotia to Montreal are too large for the St. Lawrence canals, and coal coming farther west than that city must be transhipped to smaller boats. If the St. Lawrence canals are ever enlarged and the Georgian Bay canal constructed it may be possible to lay down Nova Scotia coal at many points in the Province of Ontario in competition with the bituminous coal of Ohio or Pennsylvania.

But whether coal from Northern Ontario can be laid down profitably in Old Ontario or not it will be a great boon to the settlers in the northland if they have mines of good coal near at hand and if the Government can really announce that there is good coal the settlement of New Ontario will be greatly hastened.

KITCHENER AND DUNDONALD

"The greatest living soldier in the world," is what Joseph H. Choate, former American ambassador to Great Britain, called Field Marshall Lord Kitchener, at a dinner in New York.

It is an extraordinary fact that Britain's greatest soldier after visiting Australia and New Zealand to inspect the defence systems of those Dominions should cross the American continent without coming to Canada.

Possibly an explanation of his avoidance of Canada may be found in the fact that he is a friend and admirer of Lord Dundonald whom he considers one of the best and bravest of British soldiers. He appreciates the great services of Lord Dundonald to the Empire and it is very probable that he resents the way in which that great and noble man was driven out of Canada by the Laurier Government because he objected to Hon. Mr. Fisher's attempt to turn the Canadian militia into a political machine.

It will be remembered that Mr. Fisher deliberately lied about Lord Dundonald in the Canadian House of Commons and was proven to have lied. It will be remembered that the Toronto Globe deliberately garbled Lord Dundonald's reports in order to make it appear that he had made extravagant recommendations.

As a matter of fact the whole Liberal press approved of Lord Dundonald's recommendations until he objected to the interference of Hon. Sydney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, with the Militia Department.

The Laurier Government have often claimed credit for great improvements in the Militia Department which were recommended by Lord Dundonald.

This great British soldier, who had not only distinguished himself in active service for the Empire, but had also proven himself the most popular and capable commander-in-chief of the Canadian forces since General Lord Wolseley held the position, was driven out of Canada in the most shameful way.

No wonder that Lord Kitchener keeps away from Canada. He probably wishes to have nothing to do with a government that would treat a distinguished British soldier so unfairly and dishonorably.

Toronto Annual Spring Horse Show

The Canadian and Military Horse Show will be held in the Armories, Toronto, on April 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th. Special efforts are being made by the committee to give the best horse show ever held in Toronto. Nearly $7,000 is being offered in prizes, and a number of events, exclusive for the military, have been added this year.

Single fare has been granted for the show by all the railroads in Ontario.

The entries close on Thursday, April 14th. Prize lists and all information may be obtained from the secretary and manager, W. J. Stark, 32

TOUCHED DEER WITH A PADDLE

Experience of a Party at Stoney Lake

The first boat of the season to go up the lakes was the Empress, which went up to Burleigh on Thursday last, to go into dry dock to have some repairs made to her propellor shaft.

The contractors for the new concrete dam at Burleigh, Messrs. Bishop and Buchanan, have started work with a large force of men. The dam is being built between the present dam and the Burleigh bridge.

Mr. Bishop, one of the contractors, for the new dam, is having a very nice summer cottage built near the steamboat wharf.

The water in the lake has not been as high as in former springs, and has already fallen several inches.

Mr. Felix and Master Minto Brownscombe, who have been spending several days at their cottage near Burleigh, had a pleasant surprise on Thursday last. While out on the lake near their island, they espied a deer swimming across the lake, and were able to get close enough to it to touch it with their paddles. Being the close season for deer they did not harm it, and after playing with it for some time escorted it safely to shore.

The steamer "Majestic" is now a thing of the past and will not be used again, but in its place Mr. Young is building a new boat very much like the Empress. He says it will be ready for the opening of the passenger season.

Mr. Charlie Gray is also building a new boat at Lakefield for use on the Stony Lake waters.

The Giant's Strength

...By...

BASIL KING,

Author of "Let Not Man Put Asunder," "The Steps of Honor," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by Harper & Brothers.

He held himself more erect at the thought and walked down the corridor with firmer tread. He had reached his own door when he paused again.

"And yet I suppose Paula would think that wasn't the right spirit. She'd say the highwayman doesn't atone for robbery by giving the money to a church—the only place for it would be the pockets it was taken from. Well, I agree with her. It's just what I'd rather do if it was possible. But I don't believe it is. There are some I could hunt up. I know that Brewer of Albany has a son working as a clerk at Wanamaker's, and then there are the Rosses and the Brents and the Dowlings and a few more. Rawson, who hanged himself in Fitchburg, left a family, I believe, and that fellow Jackson, who stabbed my agent Pitts, has a wife, if not children. He must have served fifteen years of his sentence by this time, and I might get him a pardon. Then there was old Marshall—but, Lord, I'm not going on with this sort of catechism. I should go daft. They took their chances just as I did. Whatever I may do for them or their families now I shall do as an act of mercy. Paula herself couldn't make me think otherwise."

He turned the handle of his door and entered. As he did so the click of his secretary's typewriter came to him from the adjoining room. At the very sound instinct and habit resumed their sway, and a few minutes later he was seated at his desk plunged into the details of work as profoundly as if no great crisis had changed the nature of his domestic life. He read the three or four cablegrams that had come during the afternoon and told Smithson what to say in reply. He ran his eye over the secretary's answers to the day's correspondence and signed his name where it was needed. He dashed off two or three important letters with his own hand and addressed and sealed and stamped them. He informed the Oregon and Ohio railway that in its fight with the United Power company he would stand behind it with unlimited money, while he indicated several important congressmen whose influence had already been his for proper consideration. He ordered George to spare nothing to get control of the Kansas, Leavenworth and Baltimore line and to push the Jay-Berryman combine until it went under. He instructed his Hartford agents, Messrs. Taft & Reed, to appeal against the verdict for $2,000 in favor of old Mrs. Breen and to carry the case to a higher court. It put new nerve into him to feel that the impulse to fight till he won was as strong in him as ever. It annoyed him that the Scriptural words should sweep across his mind again:

"For man walketh in a vain shadow and disquieteth himself in vain; he heapeth up riches and cannot tell who shall gather them."

As he dwelt upon the words the faint upleaping of courage that had come from his half hour of work died down again. He leaned his head wearily on his hands and pondered. What was the use of it all? Why should he fight against the United Power company? Why should he try to get control of the K., L. and B.? Why should he hinder poor old Mrs. Breen from getting the damages rendered her for the husband killed in his employ? He did not grudge her the money. He had no enormous interest in smashing the Jay-Berryman combine. As for the United Power company, he had no object but to drive it into a corner where it would have to capitulate to him. But why should he? Was it necessary to fight simply because he had the instinct? Was it necessary to wield a giant's strength simply because he had it? Was there no such word as enough? Was there no such quality as mercy? Was it outside the rules of business to spare?

"Business! Business! Business!" he repeated to himself. "That's been my god, and I've worshiped it as if it were a misshapen idol. I suppose that if I'd served my Maker half as much I shouldn't be here alone tonight. I wonder if I could do a big new thing that wasn't business at all? I wonder if I could start out on a course that would shock the business world to its foundations? I believe I feel myself coming to it. I've dreamed of it hitherto. Now I think the minute has come for me to wake up and do."

He leaned forward and touched a bell. A few seconds later the secretary entered the room.

"Turn on the light, Smithson, please," Trafford said, with sudden briskness of tone. "You may remember that a few months ago I asked you to send to America for all the papers connected with the cases of Marshall versus the Vermont Mining company and of the Tortonville Improvement company versus Marshall. I hope you have them."

"Yes, sir. They're in my safe. Shall I get them?"

"Please."

"You've looked them over, all I suggested?" he asked when Smithson had laid the documents before him.

"Yes, sir."

"Marshall failed for about three hundred and fifty thousand, didn't he?"

"Between that and four hundred."

"You've made the inquiries I asked you to look up? The daughters are all living?"

"They were all living in October, sir. One of them was ill and not expected to live long."

"Thanks, Smithson. That will do for the moment. Don't send any of those cablegrams tonight. I'll speak about them again tomorrow. No; you needn't post these letters. I'm not sure yet that I shall send them."

Smithson retired, and Trafford began to turn over the papers before him. He did not read them consecutively. A word here and there would arrest his attention and send him off dreaming.

"It's curious," he reflected. "I was in the right throughout this case, and yet it's one about which public opinion has given me no quarter. All the laws of supply and demand, of cause and effect, were on my side, but because old Marshall shot himself, leaving four daughters unprovided for, I've been made to appear as the instrument of the disaster. I don't feel so myself—not wholly so, at any rate, but Paula would agree with the public if she knew about it. Well, I'll try to patch it up before she does. The wind will be taken out of that sail, at any rate."

He sighed and went on with his desultory inspection of the Marshall papers. He was still occupied in doing so when a knock came to the door. Before he had time to look up and say "Come in" the door was pushed open and Paula entered, followed by Winship. Trafford remained seated. They advanced together till they stood before his desk.

"We've come in to say that we can't do it, papa," Paula began abruptly. "I can't go and leave you alone."

"I will not take her from you like this," Winship added. "It seems to me a sort of robbery. It wouldn't be blessed. If there's a sacrifice to be made, it must be ours. We're younger and stronger"—

"Stop!" Trafford said softly. "Stop."

Winship ceased, and there was a long silence. Trafford still remained seated, gazing absently at the papers on the desk before him. Winship and Paula waited in motionless attention. There was no sound but the click, click, click of the typewriter in the adjoining room.

Still without speaking, Trafford rose. Coming to them, he passed one hand through Paula's arm and one through Winship's.

"My little girl is willing to stay with me after all, is she?"

"I'm not only willing, papa, but I want to."

"Then, darling, you can't, you can't because I'm going on a long journey."

As he spoke he turned them gently round and began leading them toward the door.

"A long journey, papa?"

"Yes, dear—a journey that will take me all round and round and round the United States. I mean to go to New York when you go, after you're been married. Then I shall have to leave you."

"But where are you going, papa, dear?"

"I'm going first to a place called Tortonville, Wisconsin"—

"Not to see the old Miss Marshalls?" came from Paula, like a long stifled cry.

Trafford started.

"Ah! What do you know about them?"

"I know all about them."

"Then I'm going to see them," he hurried on. "After that I'm going to see more people, then more, then more. When it's all over I shall come back to you. Now kiss me—kiss me—and—go."

"Oh, papa, darling, how good you are!"

She kissed him, clinging to him, but he released her arms from about his neck.

"Now go—both of you," he insisted, opening the door.

"First let me say," Winship began, "that I beg your pardon for anything"—

"Oh, you needn't, Winship," he interrupted, with a weary smile. "I know how you've felt. I should have felt that way myself. You've been a good fighter, and you've only found out what all we fighters have to learn in time—that when we've struck the blow hasn't given us the satisfaction we expected. Don't think any more about it. I'll do myself the justice to say that I've always respected you, even at the worst of times. Now—go—go off together. I've a great deal to do that I can only do—alone."

He forced them gently from the room, closing the door behind them. For a second he leaned against it as if for support till his habitual energy came back.

"That I can only do—alone," he repeated to himself. "By heaven, I shall do it—to the bitter end!"

He strode back firmly to his desk and sat down again. With head erect and lips set he was for an instant like the Paul Trafford of old.

"But the end may not be a bitter one," he reflected. "In the hair shirt and penitence Charles V. found something better than he had ever known upon the throne. Well, why shouldn't I? True, the hair shirt will look queer in Wall street, but I'm not afraid of that. If it has taken a giant's strength to do what I've done hitherto it will require more to fulfill what lies before me. But I shall have it. I shall have it, the giant's strength and more. God and my little girl helping me."

He rang the bell and called for Smithson. The new orders took the secretary so much by surprise that he was obliged to have them repeated two and three and four and five times before he mastered them. When he did so he was the first member of the great American public to call Paul Trafford mad. He was also the first to qualify the madness as divine.

THE END.

Women need Zam-Buk even more than men. For chafed places, inflamed surfaces, skin sore from friction from clothing, rough, red hands, unsightly face scorch—for all these and a hundred-and-one needs that are peculiar to women, Zam-Buk is a boon.

Then there are the children! For their little cuts and burns and knocks—for skin rashes and skin sores, Zam-Buk is far the best. Why?

Best because it is pure. Best because it contains not one grain of mineral matter or poisonous coloring, not one bit of animal fat. It is antiseptic, soothing and healing.

A WIFE'S EXPERIENCE.

Mrs. Joseph Carr, who keeps a grocery store at 281 Heaburg Ave., Toronto, says:—"In all my years of housekeeping I have never yet used a preparation equal to Zam-Buk. It is nothing short of a wonder—a miracle. Indeed I cannot speak in terms too praiseworthy of its wonderful healing properties, and would not be without this remedy in my home at any cost. I have used it for sores, cuts, bruises and other skin injuries, and consider it a household necessity, especially where there are children, as it heals all wounds and bruises in almost incredibly short time. My eldest son had occasion to use Zam-Buk for a badly inflamed toe, caused by an ingrowing toe nail. A few applications were all that was necessary to draw out the soreness and inflammation, and he has had no trouble with the toe since. Every mother and every woman who has charge of a home should keep Zam-Buk handy."

Zam-Buk cures for eczema, rashes, bad leg, scalp sores, blood poisoning, face sores, ringworm, salt rheum, piles, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c box, druggists and stores everywhere or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

"PILLS LIKE A FYLE"

So Harsh and Drastic are Many Pills as to Seriously Injure Health.

In a letter written from his home in Valencia, Mr. Marsh Selwyn does service to thousands by drawing attention to the injuries inflicted upon delicate people by drastic purgative pills.

"For a long time I suffered from constipation. This condition compelled the use of pills. Like many another, I made the unwise choice of using pills that were like lightning in their activity. I began to be filled with intestinal disturbances, constant rumblings, gas in the bowels and diarrhoea. I grew pale and emaciated. Then the doctor told me drastic irritating pills had caused catarrh of the bowels, an almost incurable disease. Explaining my situation to a friend, he advised a trial of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I speedily experienced the healing and curative effect they exert on the stomach, liver and bowels. The intestines, freed from irritating drugs, rapidly regained natural tone, the bowels acted as if nature and not Dr. Hamilton's Pills were at work. I know it will be of value to thousands to know that a pill as mild and curative as Dr. Hamilton's is available to the ailing."

For bowel disorders, sick headache, constipation, liver and stomach derangement, there is no pill so invariably sure to cure as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse a substitute. Sold in 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Are Mild--Never Gripe

An Ignorant Lassie.

A highland landlady, chatting with a neighbor, told that one of the village girls was just married and opined that she had been "an auld maid ower lang" to take kindly to matrimony. "An auld maid," she added, "is like to be awfu' ignorant where men folks are concerned."

"She is that," assented the neighbor. "Do ye mind my husband's brither? He was a schulmaster, a weel built, weel faured man, as ye may ken, wi' braid shouthers an' grey tail. A'weel, Sandy McLean's mither had a gatherin' at her house one e'en, an' when they a' cam' to gae their ways inane the men tuik the maids an' saw them to their bidin' places. My brither-in-law tuik an auld maid wha keepit a wee shop in the toon. When they reached their journey's end he aye bent to kiss her cheek, as was the custom in seein' hame. Noo, Jeanuot, the auld maid, was in a gre't flooter. 'Oh, Mr. Cameron,' says she, an' she was all in a tremmle, 'what am I to dae? Must I lift my veil?'"

FORTUNES FOR SERVANTS.

Faithful Domestics Who Have Come Into Big Fortunes.

It has been stated that the fortune of $300,000 with which the Misses Cohen rewarded their ex-footman, Mr. Frank Bradley, for his services—and which formed the subject of recent litigation—is the largest sum which has ever been bestowed upon an employe by an employer. This, however, is scarcely correct. When, two years ago, the will of Mr. Oscar Philippe, the proprietor of the famous Cavour Restaurant in Leicester Square, London, was proved it was found that he had left the whole of his fortune of $480,000 to Mrs. Geo. Dale of Bournemouth, who, as Miss Julia Edmonds, had acted as his bookkeeper.

Mrs. Dale had assisted Mr. Philippe in his affairs for twenty-five years, and the story of how he acquired the famous restaurant is as romantic as the story of his will. Mr. Philippe began life as a waiter at the Cavour. It was but a little restaurant in those days, though its frequenters were liberal in their tips, and it was not long before the genial French waiter became sole proprietor. Some time before his death he was offered $600,000 for the freehold, but the offer met with a courteous but firm refusal. The ex-waiter prized the Cavour above everything, and would not have parted with it for double the price offered.

Perhaps one of the most curious of bequests was that made by the late Mr. Alexander Fleming, a member of the famous firm of William Baird & Co., Scottish ironmasters, who died at the end of last year, and left an estate valued at $6,500,000. Mr. Fleming died a bachelor, leaving many thousands of pounds to Glasgow charities, and the bulk of his fortune to nieces, nephews and personal friends. Amongst the latter he numbered a young gentleman who frequently entertained him in his sick hours by playing on the Scotch bagpipes, and who found himself rewarded with $50,000.

When Lord Burton's will was proved in March, 1909, it was found that he had left $200,000 in annuities to his servants; while for but two years' service Mr. Fred S. Westall, a coachman and gardener, found himself in November last the lucky possessor of a farm worth $35,000, left to him by his former master, the late Mr. Sidney Mervyn Meyrick. Westall entered Mr. Meyrick's services only two years ago, but his master had known him for many years. He acted as valet and general help, as well as coachman and gardener. Mr. Meyrick came to look on Westall more as a companion than a valet, and finally showed his gratitude in the manner mentioned.

A few years ago Mr. James Dick, a wealthy gutta-percha merchant of Glasgow, died and left no less than $500,000 for distribution amongst his employes. Bequests varied from $250 to $25,000 to his cashier. These sums were irrespective of $10,000 to his cook, and $5,000 each to his only maid-servant, coachman, and gardener.

The late Lady Clarke, who left property to the value of $1,500,000, remembered each of her servants in her will. Besides a large number of smaller gifts to her kitchen maids, she bequeathed to her personal maid a sum of $500 and an annuity of $3,500 a year for life.

So grateful was Mr. William Robmer of Surbiton, Eng., for the faithful services of his housekeeper, that he left her the comfortable income of $2,500 a year for the remainder of her days. Yet another lucky housekeeper was Mrs. Sarah Ann Mann, who, when her master, Mr. John Adams, of Bedford, died last August, came into the whole of his property. It was valued at $320,000.

Days of Disaster.

There is a world of truth in the old saying that misfortunes seldom come singly. Neither do disasters. For it was only a short time after the terrible Christmas fire disaster at Clapham Junction, London, Eng., that we heard France was devastated by floods. Then the Brighton express met with an accident, causing the loss of seven lives.

Many other disasters have followed each other with appalling suddenness. In March, 1908, 1,226 persons were killed, over 2,000 injured, and thousands of homes destroyed by the Kagi earthquakes in Formosa, and in the next month came the San Francisco earthquake, in which the damage done amounted to over sixty million pounds, in addition to the loss of many lives.

In the following July there were twenty-seven people killed and eleven injured in the wreck of the London and Southwestern boat express at Salisbury.

Previously, the year 1905 had been marked by the collapse of the roof at Charing Cross Station, which demolished the Avenue Theatre, the loss of twenty-three lives in a Lancashire and Yorks railway collision, a mishap to the Cromer express, involving ten deaths and injuries to thirty people, and the loss of the London and Southwestern steamer Hilda off St. Malo, where 128 lives were lost.

Herons In Battle.

A curious duel was seen in Milton park, at Peterborough, England. A heron fishing in the pond near Milton House captured a fish. Another heron, which had been on the watch, at once tried to take the prize away. The result was a desperate combat. Both birds were full grown, tall and stately. They fought with bill and wing, uttering frequent shrieks of anger. The battle was waged so furiously that the combatants seemed to be in the midst of a cloud of feathers, when suddenly one rolled over, and the other, with a victorious "frank," stretched its long legs behind it and flew up to the trees. An examination proved that the other bird had been killed outright.

An English Election.

Remarks the London Chronicle: "The worst of election expenses is that the candidate can never be sure what sort of pig in a poke he is buying. The parliament may run its full term or it may come to an end after a few months. Even if it lasts the game may be decidedly not worth the candle. Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff gives a poignant little incident of the wearisome struggle over the coercion bill in 1881. 'When things were at their dullest and deadliest Stuart Rendel heard a man as he rolled off his seat in the extremity of weariness say, "And to think that I should have paid £7,000 for this!"'"

Her Proof.

"Just think of it! One person in every thirty-seven in England is a pauper."

"Why, John," she returned, "it isn't so. I met more than thirty-seven people in London last summer myself, and there wasn't a pauper in the lot."—London Tit-Bits.

WHAT CITIZENS THINK OF REVIEW'S SUGGESTION TO EXTEND THE T. AND N. O.

Various suggestions have been lately made by correspondents of The Review for a railway from Peterborough to the north country. The Review pointed out the other day that if the Ontario Government Railway, known as the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, were extended southward to Peterborough and from here to some lake port in Eastern Ontario it would not only open up the country between Peterborough and North Bay, thus creating local trade for Peterborough, but that it would give the people of the central and eastern counties of Ontario convenient communication with the rapidly developing mineral, agricultural and timber areas of New Ontario, saving the time and expense of the long roundabout journey by way of Toronto, which is at present necessary. The Review's proposal has excited much interest among the business men of Peterborough.

UNQUALIFIEDLY ENDORSES SCHEME.

Ald. Turner, when seen by the Review this morning, was of the opinion that the building of the road would be of immense advantage to Peterborough. The beneficial effect it would have on Peterborough was of course, the prime consideration from a civic standpoint, but it would also be of great benefit to Ontario as well Ald. Turner thought.

"It would be of provincial as well as local benefit," he stated to the Review, "and I think the suggestion could be very profitably acted upon by the Government. From personal visits to the north I know that there are great tracts of virgin forests in Nipissing districts and the only reason that they have not been felled sooner is because they are so difficult of access. The proposed line would give this access and provide a needed means of transportation. Of course the trees have been cut along the streams but there is greater forest wealth in the district than the vast majority of people of the province are aware of. Besides it would appear as though there might be great mineral wealth in a great part of the section of the country which would be tapped by the road."

Mr. James Edgar thought the railway would afford an excellent means of opening the new country and would bring a lot of trade to Peterborough. He believed that the Government should take up the consideration of the construction of the road and incidentally expressed the opinion that the Government should own all railways on the grounds that it could operate them to the best advantage in the way of getting rich returns for the country. He thought that the railway would be of incalculable good to Peterborough in making this city a distributing centre for the traffic from the rich north.

Further opinions will be given to-morrow.

Dr. W. A. Michell, who was with Sir Ernest Shackleton on his trip "farthest south," and who lectured in Peterborough last night, is well known in Peterborough and vicinity. At the university he was well acquainted with Dr. Frederick and Dr. Buchanan, of Peterborough, and Dr. Neal, formerly of this city. They graduated in 1903.

While in Peterborough Mr. Michell was the guest of Dr. Frederick, and after the lecture last night about thirty-five prominent citizens were invited to the home of Dr. Frederick to meet Dr. Michell. An enjoyable time was spent.

Mrs. J. L. Squire and daughter, Miss Gertrude Squire, intend leaving the first of May for England, where they will spend the summer months.

Mr. Frank Raddon, of Peterborough, was in the village last week.

Some time ago certain officials and members of the Norwood Methodist church bethought themselves that it would be a fitting thing to make some public recognition to our esteemed townsman, Dr. S. P. Ford, as a prominent member and worker in the church, and also as a valued citizen, the same to be carried out on the occasion of his seventieth birthday. The scheme was made known to the members and adherants, both past and present, of the church, and the response was most spontaneous, so that on Monday evening of this week—the doctor's birthday—a large gathering assembled in the Sunday school room to carry out the project inaugurated by Mr. J. S. Squire. A subscription list had been circulated which resulted in sufficient funds being raised to purchase a beautiful individual communion service, which was dedicated to the church in honor of the occasion, and being suitably inscribed, so that the memory of Dr. Ford might be perpetuated.

The proceedings were of a most interesting nature. Mr. Squire was asked to take the chair, and after a neat congratulatory speech, called upon Mr. G. J. Keefer to read the address, which was laden with good things said on behalf of the doctor—how he had, for forty-five long years, given himself freely and fully to the service of the church and to humanity. Several letters of congratulation were read from former citizens of Norwood and from former pastors of the Norwood church, and all spoke in the highest terms of Dr. Ford as a citizen and as a consecrated follower of Christ.

Mr. T. Mason, an old school-mate of the doctor's, sent a beautiful bouquet of flowers, which, when presented, brought tears of joy to the doctor's eyes.

The doctor, in his reply, said that this was one of the most happy experiences of his life. He was delighted with the beautiful gift to the church, and was pleased that the congregation had seen fit to present it on his behalf. He had always tried to do his duty, having consecrated himself to the Master at an early age. He felt that he owed a very great deal to his sainted mother, who, from his earliest childhood, had instructed him and led him in the way he should go. He said he hoped people would not get the idea that he was getting old. He had no notion of that. He was not a subject for superannuation.

He found his greatest joy and satisfaction in doing. He said he owed his exceptional health to hard work, and intended to continue the treatment.

The gathering dispersed at about 10.30, all feeling it was better to scatter flowers and offer words of appreciation while the one deserving was present to receive them.

Tickets for the Lecture at the Young Women's Christian Association, under auspices of the Women's Art Association, are to be had at Madill's Drug Store and at Payne's Drug Store.

MARK TWAIN IS DYING

Special to the Review.

Redding, Conn., April 20.—Mark Twain, the world's greatest humorist, is dying. He failed rapidly this morning and it was stated at his home that "He might live the day out."

Mr. Wadely will give an illustrated Lecture on "Decorative Art" under the auspices of the Peterborough Woman's Art Association, on Thursday evening April twenty-first, at eight o'clock in the Gymnasium of the Y. W. C. A. There will be a short programme which will be contributed by:—Mrs. Wadely, Miss Choate Miss Hallihan. Admission 25 cents.

SERVICE TO OTHERS IS THE REAL SUCCESS

The feature of the regular meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Paul's Church last night was an address by His Honor Judge Huycke, the subject being: "What is True Success?" There was a fine body of men present and the address was greatly enjoyed. The chair was occupied by Mr. A. P. MacLean.

Dealing with the question of success, Judge Huycke said that true success did not consist of amassing great wealth or winning fame and glory. It was all right to make money, but to have accumulated a large amount of this world's goods did not mean that success had been achieved. That man made the greatest success of life who was of the greatest service to others and did the most to help the world.

Speaking of "hobbies," Judge Huycke said it was well that men should have something to interest them outside of their professions or businesses. One of the best hobbies a man could have was literature, and in dealing with this subject the judge showed that he was familiar with the world's best literature.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Judge Huycke on motion of Sheriff Hall, seconded by Inspector Mount. Mr. H. B. Cowan also spoke briefly, voicing the gratitude of the Brotherhood to the speaker of the evening.

A Remarkably Accomplished Singer

The Pittsburg, Pa., Despatch says:—"The recital given by Miss Margaret McCann last night fulfilled all the expectations which her coming had aroused. Miss McCann possesses a splendid mezzo-soprano voice, which was heard to advantage in the large auditorium. She is much more than a remarkably accomplished singer; she possesses a warmth of temperament, a charm of interpretation that grips the emotions of the audience. Her vocal efforts certainly were highly entertaining to her hundreds of hearers last night." Miss McCann appears at the T.A.S. hall opening on April 27th and 28th.

TRIP OF THE "NIMROD" TO THE SOUTH POLAR SEAS

Dr. Michell, the Surgeon on Shackleton's Famous Expedition, Realistically Describes the Celebrated Voyage in an Interesting Illustrated Lecture—The Fascination of the Great White Land for the Explorer.

Of more than passing interest was the lecture given in the Collegiate Institute assembly hall last night by Dr. W. A. Michell, who was the surgeon on the little steamship, "Nimrod," that took Sir Ernest Shackleton and party to the most southern point in the South Polar Seas known to have been reached by man. Dr. Michell is a native of Perth. Although only a young man, he has been through some of the most thrilling experiences that man is called upon to undergo—experiences known only to those who seek the strange places of the earth.

The lecture was largely attended, although the weather conditions could not have been much more unfavorable. The hall was well filled and everyone present was delighted with the lecture. The story of the trip to the far south and the planting of the British flag at the most southerly point ever reached was told by Dr. Michell in a simple, modest manner, and was followed with the deepest interest. It was not without its educational side, and the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society are to be commended for the good work they are doing in bringing such men as Dr. Michell to Peterborough.

The lecture was illustrated by about seventy-five stereopticon slides from pictures taken from the time the "Nimrod" left England on her trip "farthest south." The pictures of animal life in the South Polar Seas were remarkably interesting, practically none in the audience having ever seen the strange creatures of the land, the sea and the air, of which slides were exhibited.

Before his appointment to the position of surgeon of the S. S. "Nimrod" Dr. Michell had been medical health officer on one of the steamers plying between Liverpool and West African ports, so he thought it would be a welcome change to enjoy the bracing climate of the South Pacific seas after the enervating heat of the west coast of Africa—and he was not disappointed. He joined the expedition about the end of June, 1907, and commenced his duties about the middle of July.

There was little to do at first except to watch the interesting process of preparing a ship for two years' work amid polar ice and stormy ocean. The "Nimrod" was 250 tons register, about 125 feet long, 27 feet beam, and the sides were very thick, about 18 inches from the inside to the water, and very strongly braced, but she looked rather small for the work she was to do. A few weeks' work, however, made a great difference, for she was given a thorough overhauling.

On July 1st the "Nimrod" and crew left the port of London at the beginning of what was destined to become a famous expedition.

In descriptive and interesting language the speaker told of the trip to New Zealand, where Lieut. Shackleton and the remainder of his staff joined the expedition. Ten hardy Manchuria ponies, the white Eskimo dogs and a motor car were added at New Zealand to join the transportation crew for future use. The audience was greatly absorbed with Dr. Michell's story of the voyage from New Zealand to the south and one could not fail to appreciate the fact that a trip to the Polar Seas was not without its drawbacks. It has its fascination, however, and it was a hardy and ambitious crew that had set out to explore the vast ice-bound regions of the south.

Many unfortunate circumstances and occurrences which were serious and embarrassing at the time of their happening were made the source of considerable humor as related by the doctor. Some of the disastrous events were enough to discourage the staunchest, but the party looked on the bright side of everything as much as possible.

Some realistic word pictures were given of the great blue ocean of the south, studded with its massive ice mountains. "There were icebergs all about us—thousands of them, some small in size, some miles in length, usually over a hundred feet in height and flat topped. Some weathered fantastically into cathedrals and castles and through this maze the "Nimrod" threaded her way. Sometimes there was barely room for our yards to pass between the bergs, often we heard and saw masses break off and fall into the sea near us, and there now appeared some real Antarctic life—the pretty little snowy petrel almost invisible when on the pure white snow, the comical penquins which squawked its curiosity and the dark body of a seal asleep on a floe. The silence was really remarkable—one felt it an enchanted world—a great white fairyland where man felt he was an intruder. At length we sighted that remarkable end of the world—a true barrier as far as ships were concerned. We steamed quite close and had splendid opportunities to photograph the huge ice wall as we passed near this strange white coast. We were now enjoying perpetual daylight and began to lose all track of time. Sometimes in the depths of a vertical crevasse one could get a glimpse of a deep blue interior while near the sea it was often moulded into beautiful caves from the roofs of which hung lovely ice stalactites."

Dr. Michell explained that unlike the Northern Polar regions, the far south consisted of a huge land mass—a great continent. It was very mountainous, the lofty peaks being near the sea coast and the interior being a table land 8,000 feet to 11,000 feet above the sea level. According to Arctic explorers the North Pole was situated on a frozen sea, but the South Pole, according to Lieut. Shackleton, the South Pole undoubtedly lies on a plateau 11,000 feet above the sea level—a true roof of the world.

The geographical outlay the animal life and the conditions in general of the south were described in interesting detail by the lecturer.

In spite of the many attendant hardships and serious risks the vast silent Polar regions of the south were as a huge white magnet to the bold and determined explorer.

"The north, roughly speaking," said Dr. Michell, "means sledging over sea ice with all its terrible dangers. The south means mountaineering and glacier work with their hidden pitfalls. So it is difficult to say which presents the more danger—or shall I say, the more fascination. When one sees the great white solitude of the Polar regions he can understand the fascination which the great white land exerts over man and impels him to seek to penetrate into those parts where man has never been and nature in her wildest grandeur reigns supreme."

At the conclusion of the lecture a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Dr Michell, moved by Mr. T. A. S. Hay, and seconded by Dr. Marsh.

ARRANGEMENTS ABOUT COMPLETED FOR WELCOMING THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL

The Reception committee met last night and practically completed arrangements for welcoming and entertaining the Governor-General on Saturday. At the request of His Excellency, there will be no mounted escort or guard of honor, as had been at first proposed, but the civic reception will be no less hearty on that account. His Excellency and staff will arrive at the C.P.R. station on the 11.28 C.P.R. train from Toronto and will be met by the mayor and city council and other prominent citizens. He will be driven to the works of the Canadian General Electric Company and will be shown over the plant. His Excellency having expressed the desire to see this great industry. The employees will remain at work till one o'clock in order that the distinguished visitor may see the works in operation. After inspecting the C.G.E. plant, His Excellency will be driven to the Quaker Oats Company's establishment, where he will see Quaker Oats, puffed rice, flour and other articles of diet manufactured.

The party will drive from the Quaker Oats plant to the Oriental hotel, where luncheon will be served. About fifty invitations have been issued for this event. All the civic bodies will be represented. The county will be represented by the warden and clerk, and several prominent citizens have also been invited.

Following the luncheon a civic welcome will be extended His Excellency at Central Park. The function will be held outside, if the weather is favorable, and in the armories if unfavorable. An address from the city will be read to the representative of King Edward in Canada.

The party will proceed from Central Park to Wolfe street wharf, where the steamer "Bessie Butler" will be boarded for the trip over the lift lock. This will complete the programme, so far as the city is concerned. His Excellency will dine in his own car, and in the evening will attend the presentation of the Geisha at the Grand Opera House, given by the Peterborough Amateur Operatic Company. The mayor and members of the City Council will occupy the boxes opposite the royal box.

The 57th band will be present at the station when His Excellency arrives, and will also be present at Central Park in the afternoon, and on the trip over the lift lock. The C.P.R. have decided to decorate the station, and citizens should take the hint and prepare to fly their flags and bunting to the breeze on Saturday.

Those present at the meeting last night were Ald. Duffus, chairman; Mayor Morrow, and Ald. Gillespie and Phelan.

Her Songs Were Gems

The Fort William Morning Herald makes comment:—"The singing of Miss McCann was the feature of the programme. She is easily the greatest singer of Scottish songs that has been heard here. She is particularly happy in her rendition of ballads. The songs were gems of nature talent set in pure gold of dramatic merit." Hear her at T. A. S. rooms, April 27th and 28th.

church begging

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The churches, chiefly owing to their multiplicity and to the necessity of overcoming competition as in other branches treated in the same manner, are descending into the streets to beg. Thois is not edifying. Begging by a church is no whit less respectable than begging by a man well able to work. It is indeed much worse, for it reduces Jesus Christ, who could, if He chose, do all things, to the level of the beggar. Churches are said not to be "of this world," but some of them are scarcely of any other. It is getting to be quite the custom to point to the balance sheet as the proof of the church's success. When we add to this that funds are welcome from anywhere, even the most wicked sources, we can see how the Lord Jesus Christ is being betrayed. But "be assured that God is not mocked." These people who are despiritualizing the church will have much to answer for. Does any minister suppose that it is not having its effect upon the people? The church to-day, thanks to these men, has little more influence than the theatre which it is being conducted in some quarters only, so like to. God will save His church and His people from those who think that Heaven is on the side of the heaviest pocketbook. Tennyson, Shakespeare, Homer, Herbert Spencer, Milton, Laurier, Borden, are all poor. It is not necessary for a church to be rich to have influence. Indeed it is a hindrance. But begging is enough to make men shudder. Far be it from me to judge any man, but, however low we may wish to descend, ourselves, let us leave the name of Him who had not even where to lay His sacred head, out of our mouths. Let us not sell our immortal soul for chimes. We must judge churches as we do people, by their acts, not by their professions, but by their denial of self. As Mr. Goforth said, it betrays a sad falling away in Canada.

PETERBOROUGH MAY ENTER MIDLAND BASEBALL LEAGUE

The Review learns that there is a movement on foot in the city to organize a team to represent Peterborough in the Midland Baseball League. An official of one of the local clubs has received a letter, asking if this city could enter a team in the Midland League and the matter is being taken up.

If the proposition materializes, the Midland League would be composed of Peterborough, Bowmanville, Port Hope and Cobourg, and it is understood that the Lake Shore clubs want a strictly amateur league with a residence rule. In such a league it would appear that a local team would give a good account of itself.

More Than He Wanted.

At Dundee, twenty miles east of Winnipeg, on the farm of Guy Scott, there is a flowing well which has caused considerable anxiety to the owner and municipality of Springfield. Mr. Scott wanted an artesian well and he bored down to the rock, a distance of 250 feet. The water spouted up very powerfully and at the top of a pipe thirty feet above the ground the flow is just as strong as at the surface of the ground.

The well was dug a year ago and since then the water has been gushing out over the land altogether beyond the control of the owner of the farm.

The Springfield Council gave a grant toward helping Mr. Scott to control the water and concrete to the thickness of ten feet was put all around the pipe. The force, however, was still so strong that the water spouted out all around the concrete. The water is now running away for miles under the snow.

There is reason to believe that the C.P.R. will take hold and help control the situation by piping the water to Hazelridge for tank purposes.

New Santa Fe Trail.

A modern highway, 275 miles long, through the "short grass country" in western Kansas would not only prove an illuminating object lesson for the entire state, but for all the country as well. The people of western Kansas have started a movement to afford the world just that object lesson in road building. From Newton to the Colorado line it is proposed to construct a continuous boulevard along the Arkansas river and call it "the new Santa Fe trail."—Kansas City Times.

THE BANDIT CHIEF.

A Tragedy of the Wild Days of the Past in Mexico.

By WALTER MAILLARD.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

The government of Mexico is today very different from what it was when that state shared in the revolutions still common in Central America. A time was when there was no safety for any one in that then turbulent country. That was when the bandits flourished.

At this time lived Cortina, the greatest bandit that Mexico has ever known. While factions were fighting for the presidency the country was in a state of chaos, and Cortina met no obstacle in his wild career. He rode through Mexico like a cyclone, murdering and pillaging by the way. What he did with the wealth he took was not generally known. He certainly did not carry it about with him. He spent a great deal when in a position to use money, which was not often, but even this would not account for the enormous amounts he should have accumulated.

Some supposed that he had hiding places in the mountains and that eventually he would buy immunity of the government for his crimes, make some restitution and still have a vast treasure left. But Cortina never gave evidence of having such treasure. There came a time when he could have used wealth if he had had it to save his life. Either he did not attempt to use it thus or it was refused. The latter supposition is not to be entertained.

There must have been some hidden reason why Cortina was permitted to plunder and why he did not grow rich. There have been many theories, but only one that fulfills the conditions.

A certain man was aspirant for the presidency of Mexico. To perpetrate a Mexican revolution money is required. This man, whose purpose it was to overthrow the existing government, had no means. It was supposed that he had an agreement with Cortina by which the bandit was to furnish the required sum. In other words, so the story goes, Cortina was to be permitted to pillage the country on condition that the lion's share of the plunder be turned over to the presidential aspirant for the purpose of attaining his ambition.

THE MAN WAS CORTINA.

When the revolution was accomplished it was supposed that an effort would be made to capture Cortina and punish him for his crimes. But the government did not appear to be in any hurry to do so. Cortina still swept over the Mexican plateau, perpetrating his lawless deeds. There came a time, however, when the people began to murmur, and many unpleasant reasons were given why the bandit was permitted to continue his devastations. Then at last a body of mounted soldiers went out to where he was operating, captured him and brought him to the capital.

Everybody was surprised at the ease with which the capture was accomplished. It had been supposed, except by those who pretended to know, that the robber chief would make a splendid fight. Instead he surrendered ingloriously. The wise ones looked wiser still and whispered that since Cortina had furnished the money which had established the existing government there would naturally be an understanding between him and that government. He had permitted himself to be captured. Would he suffer the penalty of his crimes? Those who knew most thought not.

Nevertheless Cortina was tried, convicted and sentenced to death. The date of execution was reserved for the government to fix. Meanwhile the criminal was confined in prison at the capital. Several weeks after the sentence the day had not been named. As many months elapsed, and Cortina was still living. Then came an order from the government to his jailers that he should be permitted to go out on parole each day. After that Cortina went where he liked about the city on his promise to return to prison at evening.

There have been criminals from time immemorial who have won the sympathy and admiration of men. This is due to their touching some chord that responds to the human heart.

From this point Cortina won the sympathy of many—first, from a standard of honor which he set up for himself and, second, because his heart was given to a woman. His word was passed that he would return every evening to his jail, and every evening he returned.

Was this because he respected his promise or because he knew the government could recapture him if he broke his parole and would then be likely to fix a date for his execution? It seems more likely that the government, for reasons best known to itself, preferred that he should take himself away and relieve it of the necessity of his execution. There were doubtless secrets in their connection with the bandit that they would not care to have him reveal and which may account for their leniency. But to some who knew nothing about this Cortina was considered (paradoxically) the soul of honor.

But in the case of the bandit's love there were no such reasons for withholding sympathy. There was no cause for his loving—nothing to gain. It was simply a product of nature that pertains alike to the good and the bad. After he had been permitted to go about at his pleasure for more than a year there came to the capital a beautiful woman from the Caribbean coast. Cortina met this woman and, though he was a convict, a murderer and a robber, she permitted him to become acquainted with her. From becoming acquainted the two became companions. They were frequently seen together in the streets, and Cortina visited her in her apartments.

People wondered when they met the strange couple if this were not a case of genuine love, under the influence of which a fiend incarnate would be transformed into a lovable and loving man. Soldiers who were responsible for the man's keeping observed, but said nothing. They had their orders from the government and obeyed them. Indeed, all that pertained to this man to whom cities had given up their gold and silver, before whom whole towns had disappeared, by whom the streets of both cities and towns had been made to run blood and who was now permitted to go where he liked upon his word of honor—his every movement was observed, and yet no one openly made any comment or criticism.

But underneath the people marveled to see one who was ostensibly waiting for the government to fix a day when the garrotte should end his career forever, giving himself up to the pleasure of loving and being loved, without an effort to avert the final tragedy. Why did he not steal away, which he might easily have done with the woman he loved, and in some foreign land live a life of atonement for his crimes? But would she go with him? Would she share his exile, always in dread wherever they might make a home, that he should become known as the bandit Cortina? Of this no one knew. They could only wonder. And still the man under sentence and the Caribbean beauty appeared together on the thoroughfares, and through her open windows came their voices, sometimes mingled with laughter or the strains from her guitar.

One night Cortina's jailers met with a surprise. The sunset and the prisoner had not returned. Perhaps he had been belated. The twilight faded, and yet nothing was seen of the prisoner. At dark he was still absent, and the guard was turned out. Whether it was called out under a pretense or whether the orders were that they should make an effort to find the prisoner and return him to jail doesn't matter. This man of so much unrecognized importance to the government was missing, and it behooved the authorities to show zeal in looking for him.

The guard was about to start from the prison yard when a man staggered up to the gate, threw up his hands and fell upon his face. Lifting him up, they threw back his jacket, and there up against his breast was the hilt of a stiletto.

The man was Cortina.

"Yes, I am late," he said feebly, "but I came. Love lured me to death. I had been with her all the afternoon. Then when it was time for me to return here she begged me to stay longer with her. When I came away the night had fallen. We walked together to the door. I kissed her goodby. It was dark. I felt the point of a knife as it slipped into my vitals. I drew the pistol you have permitted me to carry, but she had vanished in the shadow."

Cortina gasped, and his head fell upon his breast. He was dead.

The beautiful Caribbean was not again seen in the capital. The next day the story of Cortina's death was told among the people, but no one ventured upon an explanation. Some supposed that the woman who killed him was one on whom he had inflicted misfortune during the period of his crimes. Perhaps he might have murdered some one dear to her—might have robbed her of a fortune. Others who were nearer the truth kept their suppositions to themselves. The stiletto was a convenient method at the time for silencing people who talked too much.

But gradually Cortina, his singular treatment by the government, the manner of his taking off, ceased to be the wonder of the day, giving place to new sensations. Some years after, when a new president came into power, many acts of wickedness of his predecessor came to light. It then became known that the government dared not openly execute Cortina because of his threats and those of his former companions in crime to reveal the government's complicity in their robberies. The beautiful Caribbean had been paid a large sum to become his executioner.

Publish My Letter The World Over

The Words of Harold P. Bushy, Who Was Permanently Cured of Chronic Lumbago by "Nerviline."

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well-known man in the plumbing and tinsmithing business in Portland.

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that knifing, cruel pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments; not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in the Montreal Witness about Nerviline, and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently, and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating, pain-destroyer like Nerviline.

"Please publish my letter the world over. I want all to hear of Nerviline."

Don't be cajoled into receiving anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." Large bottles 50c., trial size, 25c. Sold everywhere or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Was Mahoney Murdered?

It was the custom in the good old days, especially in Ireland, to hang condemned men for half an hour, and then hand them over to their friends. A man named Mahoney was hanged in this way. At the end of half an hour his body was given to his friends, who put him in a coffin they had brought with them, and galloped off with him on a cart. But before they were out of sight of the gallows authorities the corpse, in the exuberance of his joy sat up in the coffin and shouted "Hooroo!" A "pal," terrified lest this exhibition of vitality should cause the executioner to come after them, hit the hanged man playfully on the head with his stick, remarking, "Kape quiet, ye spalpeen." The silencing was so effectual that the victim of it never woke again, but was well and truly "waked" that same evening.

There was no doubt that the blow on the head killed him. The facts came to the knowledge of the authorities, and justice was appealed to for a warrant for the culprit's arrest on a charge of murder. But the justice refused it, explaining that as the man was dead, having been hanged for half an hour and given up to his friends legally a corpse, it was impossible that he could have been murdered.

The Thermometer In Sickness.

Currie of Edinburgh employed a thermometer in the treatment of typhoid fever patients with the cold douche as early as 1797. He was ridiculed by his German contemporaries as an instance of medical decay in English medicine. The first clinical application of the thermometer was made by Santorius of Padua. He invented a thermometer open at the end. After being held by the patient it was plunged into cold water. Boerhave taught the importance of the thermometer. De Haen (1704-1778) must be given the honor of introducing the thermometer into current use at the bedside. It was not until 1850 to 1870 that it came into general use.

CURED BRONCHITIS

Mrs. Hopkins Says Her Life Was Saved—Choked and Gasped for Breath

"Some five years ago I was taken with a bad attack of bronchitis. I was afflicted with a bronchial cough and cold, the cough was generally much more apparent at night, and I would wake up choking and gasping for breath, and there seemed to be a terrible stoppage in my throat and tubes. My throat was tender and irritable, and had an aching sensation, which was especially bad at times. I doctored and used several remedies, but received no permanent relief until I used Hyomei. This remedy is certainly infallible, and it saved my life, and I accord it the credit which it deserves. There is nothing too strong for me to say regarding Hyomei!"—Mrs. Ada Hopkins, 6 Outter Ave., Coldwater, Mich., August 22, 1908.

CITY FLOWER GARDENS
HOW to MAKE the BACK YARD

THE girl who for one reason or another must remain in town all through the springtime and perhaps most wait until the summer is well commenced before she can get really into the country and enjoy the delight of awakening life in the trees and shrubs all about her can but content herself with the next best thing, she must bring the country to her own city doorstep, or, rather, to her own back yard. And it is astonishing how much of the spirit of the country can be crowded into a tiny back yard with but a comparatively small expenditure of time, ingenuity and the help of just a little money.

Only recently have the dwellers in large cities awakened to the possibilities of their back yards, and though the deep excavations on the majority of city houses have greatly curtailed their yard space, still there is often a small plot of ground left that can be converted into a most fascinating flower garden.

A girl who is really enthusiastic in her love of plants and flowers will want to do all the work herself in her back yard garden. Before she can start in her planting, however, she must first send to a florist for a hired man to dig up the earth thoroughly and have it fertilized with a well rotted manure or a mixture of bone meal and sheep manure can be used. The ground should be dug down from two to three feet, and the fertilizing should be done as early in the year as possible.

If the yard is one of the old fashioned, oblong shape, with a two to three foot border all around, then a flag walk, and in the centre a large plot over which the bars for the clothes lines are placed, the first thing to do is to divide the centre space in half with a cross beam hung from one fence to the other. The lines for the clothes can reach straight back to the kitchen door, and if stretched at double space there will be plenty of room for the largest wash. This half of the centre plot is covered over with roofing pebbles, with asphalt or with cement, the white pebbles looking, perhaps, the most attractive, and also absorbing rain and dampness most rapidly. The earth in the plots bordering the flag walk and the other half of the centre plot is next dug down and fertilized. Instead of the old flags roofing pebbles may be laid on the narrow walk or path, making this garden still more attractive.

WHEN this preparatory work is finished then comes the real fun of a garden—the planting of the first seeds. Colors must be studied for this and a familiarity must be acquired with all the different plants to be used, for it must be known to what height each plant will attain, that the seed may be sown in correct relation to the other shrubs and flowers in the garden. For a back yard garden which will be enjoyed only throughout April, May and at most June only spring plants are to be considered. To commence with, the back fence must be lined with all the different spring flowering shrubs, which blossom only in the season and one after the other keep up a wealth of glory throughout the first warm, sunshiny days. Lilacs, spirea or bridal wreath, Van Houten (which grows to a height of from four to five feet), syringa (Philadelphus grandiflora, growing from three to four feet in height), forsythia (Fortunei, from four to five feet). Pieris japonica—these are about the most satisfactory of the spring flowering shrubs, and, although there are many others to be found in the catalogues, it is perhaps advisable to use only the well tried ones for the first year. Next spring, after a year's experience, it will be soon enough to commence experiments. These last named shrubs should be planted at a distance of from two to three feet apart.

Next, the side fences must be covered for all idea of a back yard is of course to be done away with. For this purpose an excellent, hardy green vine is the enormous radicano. Crimson ramblers should also be allowed to climb over the fence. Another charming climbing flower is the Dorothy Perkins rose.

For border flowers, snowdrops come up first after the frost has entirely disappeared from the ground, next the crocuses, after these gay colored tulips, then the goodly smelling narcissus and finally the exquisite bell flowered hyacinth. These border flowers may be planted in rows or in regular clumps, as preferred. Among the crocuses the white, blue or yellow are equally adorable, and these early spring flowers make an exquisite border growing about the edges of the path. Crocuses are not expensive, costing anywhere from 25 cents to $1.00 or more per fifty.

TULIPS are planted with a stick, the bulb sunk in three to four inches and covered snugly with sand before the earth is replaced. The plants should be three to four inches apart. The leaves must be allowed to turn yellow after the plant has finished blooming, for it is while the leaves are withering that the bulb ripens and multiplies. In tulips the variety is large and the bulbs range in price from 50 cents for fifty to as high as the gardener is willing to pay. Pink, white, striped pink and white, ragged tulips, Dutch parrot tulips, all are beautiful. Indeed, to the plant lover one flower does not differ from another in glory, but in kind only. From the gaudy hibiscus to the dainty snowdrop each blossom is for her a thing of perfect beauty.

Narcissus poeticus is the charming title of a tiny yellow eyed narcissus costing for fifty plants from 65 cents upward. Tiny Spanish iris is another exquisitely pretty border plant, costing only 30 cents for a hundred plants.

To fill in the centre of the border beds and the large middle plot there is a great variety of hardy perennials which can be relied upon to bloom in any city garden. Peonies are always effective, but care must be taken to procure two year old roots, else the plant will not bloom the first year. Japanese iris, which will flower until June 25, and the Germanor iris, which blooms so profusely early in May, are a joy to look upon in their bright spring hues. Columbine is another pretty spring flower, and the old fashioned bleeding hearts should not be omitted from this back yard garden.

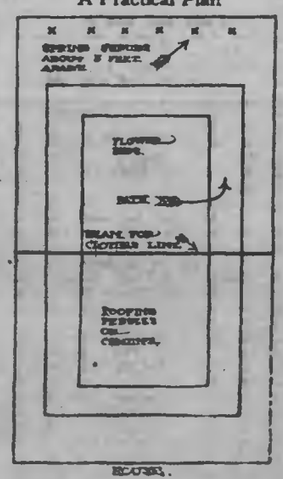
No garden is complete, however, without a wealth of roses. A few good varieties of early roses are the Jacqueminot, Madame Plantier, La France, Coquette des Blanches and the Baroness Rothschild. Tea roses also will bloom early in June if planted in a well sheltered spot. Two year old plants should be procured, for this garden must show up to its best advantage its first trial year.

No true flower lover could be content without at least one bed of heartsease in her garden. Pansies, if sown in March in boxes placed in the kitchen windows and then transplanted as soon as the plants are big enough, will give many bunches of these cheerful little flowers throughout all the month of May.

Chrysanthemums and Japanese anemone, if planted in the spring, will insure the back yard garden of being still a thing of beauty throughout the autumn. Nor should the Christmas rose, which blooms above the snow at Christmas time, be [illegible].

A Back Yard Garden in Winter Trim

A Practical Plan



Morning Caps Attractive Work.

GIRLS who are accomplished needlewomen will find a fascinating occupation in making some of the charming breakfast caps now fashionable for gifts to their friends. They are not usually worn by young girls, but as pieces of handiwork they are most attractive. No embroidery or lace work is too dainty for their decoration, and they offer an unexampled opportunity for the display of skill and taste. The caps are made in a great variety of designs, according to the taste and appearance of the person who is to wear them. The first question, of course, is what is becoming, and there are quite enough designs in favor to make it possible for a becoming style to be selected for every one.

Some of the caps are full in the crown, with a full ruffle or pleating around the face, and others are quite flat on top, without any ruffle, and finished around the face merely with points of lace. The most coquettish and charming ones for most persons are those with the full crowns and ruffles, especially for persons with small faces.

Fine lace of all sorts is used on the caps, Cluny, filet, guipure and Valenciennes being the greatest favorites. The lace must be very good, even if it is not real lace, and almost always real lace is used. The material is also of the finest; the most delicate and sheer weaves of linen batiste and nainsook, Paris muslin, &c., are employed. These materials must be exquisitely fine and sheer, as much so as chiffon, or the effect is not good. Chiffon net, plain and embroidered, and allover lace are also used for these caps.

The caps are trimmed with insertions and medallions of lace and narrow pleatings and flounces, also with fine embroidery on both crown and ruffle, and with hemstitching, drawn work and, in fact, every sort of fine needlework, all of the decoration being kept light and delicate. When they are made of tulle or net instead of wash materials blond lace and the thin Spanish and Irish laces are used.

The caps are sometimes lined with a very delicate color in this silk which is readily removable, so that they may be cleaned or laundered. The ornamentation of the cap matches this color and is in the form of ribbon bows or artificial flowers, or both. Satin flowers and the usual milliner's flowers are both used on the caps. The flowers are fastened in the bow in front or sometimes at one side, and again the lace face ruffle will be draped up in several places with knots of the flowers. Satin and velvet ribbon are both used on the caps, and when the material employed is not a wash fabric ribbons with gold or silver patterns are used sometimes or the flowers may have a touch of gold or silver.

A charming bit of coloring used in these caps is of ivory rather than pure white material. Nattier blue velvet ribbon, not very wide, and small pink roses. This combination is an exact replica of some similar caps seen in old pictures. The ivory tone, which may be had in either chiffon net or batiste, is frequently more becoming than pure white. Another charming and becoming cap lined with a faint pink silk was trimmed with Valenciennes and drawnwork and pink satin roses. For a brunette whose complexion is clear a most adorable combination is of deep ivory point d'esprit, with pale green ribbon and a rose of the old rose color, which may be found among the old fashioned varieties of the flower. Yellow and pale blue is another charming combination for a blonde whose skin is rosy, and a very dainty cap is in pure white fine linen with trimmings of guipure lace and small knots of forget-me-nots.

The caps are most useful to women who are in the habit of wearing an elaborate coiffure, as they are used as breakfast caps or boudoir caps for wear before the hair has been arranged for the day. They are also used by persons who are ill. Girls who have friends who use these caps may be assured that a becoming one beautifully made by hand will prove a most welcome gift.

Girls Now Collect Bookplates.

MANY young girls are now taking a great interest in making collections—perhaps it would be better to say in starting collections—which they hope to continue for many years. Indeed by beginning early one has more chances to pick up good things and need not be in a hurry. All sorts of things are collected, and one of the latest notions is for book plates.

Some girls who are very fond of books and own a considerable number of them have already book plates of their own, and they really have a good deal of knowledge of the subject. There is much to learn about the different kinds of plates and the different makers of them, the difference between the engraved and the printed ones and other details, but a girl who starts in to make a collection soon learns all this and becomes more and more interested.

Most book plates are kept in cabinet drawers, either mounted on cardboard or just left unmounted, but some people have them framed and hang them on the wall. A girl who is looking for an original way to decorate her room will find this a most attractive one. She should have the book plates framed in a plain wooden moulding in a color that tones with her room. They can be hung either in a straight line or in groups of different kinds. Several can be grouped in one frame or (especially the larger ones) each framed by itself.

Girls and Their Hair.

ATHLETIC girls should make a point of being so trigly put together that they do not fall to pieces in the stress of play or feel afraid that they may do so. Men sometimes scornfully say that girls cannot play games with an undivided mind because half of their gray matter is taken up with anxiety lest their hair is falling down, an anxiety so keen that their hands are forever going heavenward to adjust slipping pins. Now that is an aspersion which all athletic girls should resent, and they should make such comment impossible by arranging unruly locks in such a way that no further thought of them is necessary.

PRACTICAL TALKS BY THE APRIL GRANDMOTHER

"BECAUSE a dim light strains the eyes quite as much as does a dazzling glare is why I kept my lids closed during the exhibition of those tableaux vivants," confessed the April Grandmother to her eldest granddaughter as they were leaving the assembly room of a fashionable hotel. "Even your young eyes betray the irritating effect of trying to pierce the gloom of a vast, half illumined auditorium, and to prevent them from looking strained, faded, and old to-morrow you should promptly apply a compress of fine linen soaked in very cold water. It is also advisable to go early to bed, for there is nothing which will so soon refresh tired ocular nerves as many hours of sleep.

"Eyes that have been overworked in the daytime," continued the April Grandmother, "should be given absolute rest at twilight, and during the evening books, sewing and cards should be taboo, because the delicate ocular muscles strained by fatigue make the lids blink. This habit usually shows its traces in a network of fine lines all around the eyes, but especially beneath them, where the lines quickly degenerate into wrinkles. At the first indication of incipient crowsfeet a girl should break herself of blinking, meanwhile preventing the muscles below the eyes from shrinking by lightly rubbing the cuticle with a very little cold cream applied every night directly after the face has been washed with warm water.

"Slightly inflamed eyelids, which frequently are caused by straining the sight," continued the April Grandmother, "may be relieved by bathing them with a solution of salt or boric acid in pure tepid water or with two or three drops of witch hazel in a glass of hot water. The fluid should always be applied from an eye cup and the lids dried with a fresh, soft handkerchief, rubbed toward the nose, the better to prevent the formation of wrinkles about the eyes or upon their lids.

"A rose water bath is best for eyes which have been made red by prolonged weeping or by motoring, and, if possible, one should afterward lie down, for an hour in a darkened room as a complete respite from work and light is a wonderful aid to clearing and brightening a pair of ordinarily healthy eyes.

"Bloodshot eyes nearly always indicate a cold; dark circles about them usually denote imperfect circulation, and swellings below them are frequently a sign of incipient dropsy. For any of these conditions it is unwise to resort to home remedies. They need the prompt attention of the family doctor, who probably will recommend a visit to an eye specialist.

"Eye trouble is so much more common now than it was a generation ago," added the April Grandmother thoughtfully, "that I think it must be largely owing to our high pressure manner of life. That a strain upon the nerves has an effect upon the ocular muscles is evidenced by the number of school girls whose eyes have a restless, excited expression. Their eyeballs, even when such girls are conversing with quiet, elderly people, continually shift from one object to another in a manner which indicates not only extreme nervousness, but a lack of that repose which should characterize every American bred young gentlewoman."

A WRITING DESK CONVENIENCE.

ONE of the most useful things a girl, or, indeed, any one at all, can possibly have for her desk is a calendar blotter. How often when writing a letter does one have to stop and think what day of the month it is, and, although there may be a calendar in the desk, there are surely many times when it cannot be found at the moment it is needed. And the blotting paper is often old and nearly worn out before one remembers to get a new piece. Both of these little troubles are done away with by having a calendar blotter.

The blotter can be made with either twelve sheets of blotting paper or six, according to whether its owner writes much or little, and also whether she uses up blotting paper quickly or not. There is a very great difference between different people on this question. The sheets of paper may also either be large enough to nearly cover the desk or they may be small pieces that are picked up and laid over the writing to blot it. If the large sheets are used they must be kept in a drawer of the desk and one taken out as it is needed; but the small ones can be fastened together at one end, the whole pad kept on the desk and one sheet torn off when wanted.

To make the blotter all that is needed is a pad calendar and the right quantity of blotting paper. Choose the latter by the color of the decoration of your room and the calendar also by whether your blotter is to be large or small. If there are to be twelve sheets of the paper paste one page of the calendar on the upper left hand corner of each piece of paper. If there are to be only six pieces of paper paste the January page of the calendar in the upper left hand corner, and the February page in the upper right hand corner, and so on through the year. A girl who makes one of these blotters as a gift for a friend will be most gratefully thought of all through the year.

"PROVIDENCE INCORPERATED"

Appropriate Nickname Bestowed Upon the C. P. R.—A New Chapter in Immigration

World's Work for April.

"Providence, Incorporated" is the new nickname of Canada's great railroad. A Danish immigrant agent of the road invented the phrase and it ought to stick. The occasion was the inauguration of a new method of bringing farmers into the Northwest, and the method itself is so radical that it deserves some free advertising.

The road owns much land. It needs many thousands of farmers. It wants the best men. It is not satisfied with the man who lands at Ellis Island with $25 in his pocket. It goes after the very best class of farmers in Denmark, Sweden, Norway and the mid-Continental areas. Its agents, who swarm everywhere, found much trouble in persuading satisfied and prosperous farmers on well-tilled farms to leave those farms and take to the back plains, with the hardships of the pioneer's life before them. That problem was put before the Canadian Pacific officials. They set to work to solve it.

So, to-day, pioneering is going out of fashion. Instead of selling raw land to raw settlers, the railroad itself has gone into the pioneering business. It sells the land, builds the house and the barn, breaks the fields, plants the first crop, puts all the necessary tools under cover on the farm—and hands over the farm ready-made. The new settler comes from a finished farm to a finished farm.

Two years ago this was an experiment; now it is a policy. As a result, the cream of the industrial farmers of Central Europe and of our own Middle West is drifting into Canada by train-loads.

Again, while our own Government went slowly at the task of reclaiming arid lands in the West, this railroad went into the irrigation business itself. It could not afford to wait for Government methods or for the wasteful selections of private capital. Five years ago the financial papers announced that the railroad was going to reclaim some millions of acres of land in the Bow River country, Alberta. Now, a million acres are watered, sold to farmers—settled. The railroad's ditch-diggers are moving on to the second million.

No ordinary farmer is wanted on these new acres. The railroad's agents are instructed to call for and demand the best irrigation farmers on earth to till these fields. A scientific farming expert is travelling through selected areas of Europe, lecturing on irrigation farming in Alberta. His lectures draw the very best of the farming experts of the old hard-working nations—and the promises that he makes are backed by a guaranty that never has failed, the word of a railroad that does not lie.

In the face of such efforts, directed by the wisest brains in the pioneering business, free from every sort of Government trammel, liberal beyond the experience of the past, is it any wonder that more than 80,000 of the best farmers in the United States last year went into Western Canada, carrying with them probably more than $100,000,000? The settlers on the new farms that are sold ready-made need nearly $2,000 each to start with—and the figure is put high to be sure of getting the best men.

What machinery have the railroads of this country to compare with methods like these? When the Grand Trunk Pacific opens up it will undoubtedly follow the same methods. It takes no prophet to see, in the regions settled under these principles, the nucleus of the most efficient agricultural nation in the history of the world.

SOME EASTER GIFTS.

Suggestions For Charming Presents of the Useful Sort.

SMART NEW DOLL PINCUSHION

The Hanging Pin Holder an Acceptable Addition to the Dressing Bureau—A French Hatbrush Very Novel and Attractive.

Nowadays presents are being given at Eastertide almost as universally as at Christmas. And as the religious festival is not far distant it is high time to get busy on these little gifts. The suggestions offered are for remembrances of the useful sort that are easily made and not expensive as to materials. Pincushions are acceptable to most women, and the models described are both novel and attractive.

JAPANESE PIN HOLDER.

Blue forgetmenots are painted upon a heavy white satin surface on the French doll cushion. The heart has been sewed together and filled with white lamb's wool, no hard cushion being necessary. After the doll's puffed cap of white satin was made and sewed on an opening at the top of the cushion was fastened round dolly's neck, and blue ribbon rosettes were added as a finish.

The Japanese doll as a pin holder does excellent duty. He is willing and able as well as easy to construct. His separate head, cruel as it may sound, may be bought and fastened to the oblong square of ribbon, which has been stuffed with wool. Ribbon sleeves, sash and bow at the back complete his Japanese outfit, after which he unflinchingly receives whatever pins you give him.

When the small, complete doll is used as a cushion its legs are removed, which is even worse treatment, and the wool filled bag added as a lower section. The ribbon by which the little creature is hung is first fastened round his neck by way of a stock collar.

The heart shaped cushion has been boxed and corded. The box cover requires a box cushion beneath it, and for the benefit of those who do not know let us say that boxing means inserting a strip, wide or narrow, along the edges instead of sewing the back and front immediately together. The process results in a thicker cushion—a more shapely. The cords are merely a decoration. In color the heart cushion is crimson and white, with crimson cord and white ribbons.

A French Hatbrush.

For one of the daintiest hatbrushes you can imagine, select a plain back

HEART SHAPED CUSHION.

Before covering the wooden back it may be very slightly rubbed with a fine sandpaper to roughen the surface so that the glue will hold.

Now for the French Louis cover. This is made of corded silk of a deep cream, embroidered slightly with ribbon work in an oblong medallion design. The silk is so cut as to entirely cover the wooden back except on the bristle side, and when the paste is applied to the silk care should be taken that it does not touch the part beneath the ribbon medallion or the top of the brush, but only along the edge of the silk. Do not turn in the edge, but after the glue is dry paste over it a narrow gold lace galloon.

CORRUPTION IN BRITAIN.

Ballot Box Tricks Are Not So Unheard of After All.

Now that the elections are over, many voters, especially in the smaller constituencies, are wondering if the ballot is really and truly secret. In theory, of course, it is. But in practice, it is alleged, there are all sorts of leakages.

There is a reason for this.

Every constituency has its Conservative and its Liberal Registration Association, or some similar organization, with a salaried registration agent, whose duty it is to see that as many as possible of his side get their names on the register of voters and keep them there.

This he accomplishes in two ways, by "objecting" to electors or would-be electors who are known to belong to the opposite party, and by "claiming" for those who are on his side.

These claims and objections are heard by officials known as revising barristers, who hold Revision Courts all over the country once a year for the purpose of adjudicating upon them.

Now it is obvious that, in order to either claim or object to a voter effectively from a party agent's point of view, the latter must know what are the politics of the man he is acting for or against, or otherwise he would be just as likely to be doing harm to his own side as good.

Supposing, for instance, that the Conservative agent for the Little Puddleton Division of Mudshire happens to discover that a certain John Smith is really John Schmidt, an alien, and, therefore, not entitled to vote, although, as a matter of fact, he is on the Little Puddleton electoral register. It would never do for the agent to lodge offhand an objection against John Smith, for it is quite possible that John Smith may be a Conservative in politics.

So he gets to work to make discreet inquiries, and if by any chance he is able to discover that John Smith voted Liberal at the last election he promptly lodges an objection, which is upheld in due course by the revising barrister, and John Smith votes no more, for his name is ordered to be struck off the register.

Such is the method of "weeding out" the registers, as practiced by both sides, and it is at once evident how important it is for a registration agent to know what are the politics of as many as possible of the voters residing in his constituency. It is this need which leads to the leakages already mentioned.

Each ballot-paper handed to a voter has stamped upon it a number which corresponds to a number standing opposite his name in the polling-books, and, as both the ballot-papers and the polling-books remain in the custody of the returning officer for some time after the elections are decided, it is obvious that any one of those officials who chance to be of a sufficiently unscrupulous turn of mind would be able to violate the secrecy of the ballot wholesale. There would be no insuperable difficulty, in fact, in the way of his ascertaining how every single elector (who polled) voted, and communicating the result to whichever party agent he fancied. Of course, he would render himself to heavy legal penalties for so doing.

Usually the returning officers are men of unimpeachable character, to whom the bare thought of such a thing would be abhorrent. But there are black sheep in all flocks, and it is an open secret that such a thing, or at all events something very like it, has been done, and that more than once.

Others, too, are careless, and leave much to their clerks. In such cases mere curiosity will often induce some subordinate to try and find out how certain individuals voted. Afterwards, either through carelessness or purposely, he imparts the information thus acquired to one or the other of the registration agents, who in his turn uses it at the next Revision Court in the interest of his party, framing his list of claims and objections accordingly.

In addition to this surreptitious leakage, there is a vast amount of open leakage at the polling-stations on the day of the election, due largely to the indifference or carelessness of individual voters in flaunting party colors, or in giving up to the party canvassers outside the dummy voting cards that are issued by the rival candidates for the guidance of their supporters, and each of which bears a register number by which the voter can be identified at leisure later on.

It will be gathered, therefore, from the above that the ballot is only nominally secret.

One important factor, however, detracts largely from the value of such information from a party point of view. An agent may know how a man has voted, but he cannot tell how he is going to vote. There are many men who are not partisans; they side with the Liberals at one election, with the Conservatives at the next, with the Labor party on the third occasion, while perhaps on the fourth they will abstain from voting altogether.

These are the "silent voters," and it is they, after all, who win or lose elections, and thereby decide the fate of Ministries.

"Our Political Brute."

Everyone knows that there are two Winston Churchills—the British Cabinet Minister and an American novelist. Mr. Fred T. Jane, the naval author, tells the following story: It was shortly after the publication of "My South African Journey," that the Hon. Mr. Winston Churchill chanced to go on board a British warship to call. Conversation had thus drifted round to matters literary, when an officer approached, and shook Winston warmly by the hand. "Delighted to meet you, sir!" said he. "I am a fervent admirer of your books. It gave me such a fearful shock when first you came on board, you know, because I thought you were our political brute of the same name."

HONORABLE MENTION

Suggested for the "Geisha" by Musicial Judge of Earl Grey Competition

The following is the report of Mr. Howard Brockway, the musical judge of the Earl Grey competition:

The performance of the act of the Geisha by the Peterborough Operatic Company, in Toronto, on Tuesday, April 7th, calls for enthusiastic commendation. To organize from amateur ranks in a town the size of Peterborough, the company which could give such a creditable performance is an achievement which arouses admiration and sincere praise.

The performance brought forward a singer of most remarkable quality, possessing an exquisite voice and fine musical sense and true histrionic ability. The general spirit of the performance and singing of the chorus in particular impressed me as remarkable and in the highest degree, praiseworthy. I am moved to suggest to His Excellency that if it is practicable, this organization should in a public way receive honorable mention.

Mr. R. J. Devey, received the following telegram this afternoon:—

Ottawa, April 20, 1910.

To Mr. R. J. Devey, 285 Park street, Peterborough, Ont.

An officially informed that His Excellency will be pleased to attend performance of the Geisha at Peterborough on Saturday night.

Signed,

F. C. T. O'HARA,
Hon. Secretary,
Earl Grey Competition.

CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH, DECORATE FOR THE VISIT OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON SATURDAY!

CAN HARDLY RECOVER

Mark Twain in Very Weak Condition—Has Angina Pectoris.

Reading, Conn., April 21.—The condition of Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) yesterday afternoon was perceptibly weaker than it was twenty-four hours ago. Dr. Robert H. Halsey, in a statement as to the patient's illness, said that Mr. Clemens has cardiac asthma with angina pectoris. At times, he suffers a great deal, but generally he rests comfortably and is able to sleep at times.

In the opinion of Dr. Halsey, it is not beyond possibility that Mr. Clemens will recover, but as he is 74 years old, the chances seem against him. There is no probability of immediate death, however. Until twenty-four hours ago the patient's condition was such that no definite opinion could be formed as to his progress. In the last twelve hours the weakness has become marked, and Mr. Clemens does not respond to treatment as he did before that. This morning he was still weaker.

TWO WEDDINGS WERE UNIQUE

Hagerstown, Md., April 21.—Miss Laura Tice and Raymond Funkhouser were married yesterday morning on a Western Maryland express train. Rev. L. A. Miller performed the ceremony while the train was running forty miles an hour, the couple holding on to the back of the seats as the train swung around the curves. The other passengers in the coach witnessed the marriage and congratulated the pair. They continued the wedding journey to Boston.

Miss Viola Allen and Ellis Earnshaw of Charlestown, W. Va., were married on Tuesday on the bridge over the Potomac River at Harper's Ferry. Rev. D. A. Foard of the Methodist Church tied the knot.

TORONTO GIRL IS MISSING

Toronto, April 21.—Anxiety is felt for the safety of Katie Stewart, aged 16, of 98 Alexander street, who left her home at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and had not returned till a late hour last night. The police were communicated with, but could find no trace of her.

She is large for her age, about five foot three inches in height, dark brown hair and eyes, and was dressed in a red and green plaid dress, red jacket, and light straw hat. She is in ill-health and for that reason might have wandered away and been unable to find her way home.

CRUISER CANADA FOR GREAT LAKES

Halifax, N.S., April 21.—The cruiser Canada is being transferred from this station to the great lakes for service, and her commander, Capt. Knowlton, who will take her to Montreal, and turn the command over to Lieut. Stewart and will then take command of the surveying steamer Gulnare, with headquarters at Charlottetown.

The Canada is a fast boat and her armament may be said to exceed that specified by the Rush-Bagot treaty.

HUNGARY WANTS HER OWN FARMERS

Ottawa, April 21.—Emigration to Canada is not looked upon with favor by all continental countries. In Hungary, according to the Dominion immigration officers, an order has for some months been in existence which prohibits in future immigration to Canada.

The reason given for this order is that Canada attracts agricultural laborers and small farmers, classes from it is especially desired to keep in Hungary, and further, that such persons when once in the Dominion find the attractions so great that they rarely return to their motherland, but tempt others to follow them.

AT WORK ON A ZOOLOGICAL PARK COMMISSION

Modelling wild game from life is a pursuit that makes large demands upon those who follow it. To Mr. A. Philmister Proctor, the sculptor, it means not only the study of captive animals, but also the finding and hunting of them in the depths of the forests of Colorado or the Canadian Northwest, where he goes every year to get "local color" for his work.

Just at this season Mr. Proctor may be seen almost any morning modelling in the lion house, at the Bronx "Zoo," working to finish a commission for two lions to be placed at the entrance of the hall at Princeton, which was given by the class of '79.

To facilitate Mr. Proctor's work Dr. Hornaday had had a door cut through from the lion's quarters into the model's cage. Formerly the beast had to be enticed from the door of his quarters into the small cage, which was then wheeled into the modelling room, but if it happened that the animal was obdurate much time was lost in the operation. Now the entrance is so natural that the lion soon perambulates into the sculptor's room when the door between is lowered and the work of posing goes on.

NEW SURGICAL METHOD IS ANNOUNCED

Baltimore, Md., April 21.—Dr. E. H. Richardson of Johns Hopkins Hospital announced yesterday a new method in surgery, recently practiced with success at that hospital in operations for a disease of the kidneys. First, a blunt needle is threaded with a fine silver wire, then an incision is made about the infected part and the wire is drawn seesaw fashion through the kidneys to the extent desired.

By the old method, in which the knife was used, serious and sometimes uncontrollable hemorrhages were caused. The silver wire method obviates this, as instead of cutting through the flesh it works through the vessel or arteries without severing them. The method is pronounced invaluable for exploring the kidneys.

MINNEHAHA JETTISONED CARGO OFF SCILLY ISLANDS

Work and School Are Abandoned in Little Community in Order That All May Share in the Rich Salvage Washed Ashore From the Wrecked Liner.

Hughtown, St. Mary's, Scilly Islands, April 21.—The inhabitants of the rocky Scilly Islands were famous wreckers of primitive times, but they will forever remember this as the greatest day in their history. The Atlantic transport liner Minnehaha, which ran ashore early Monday morning, disgorged part of her 17,000 tons of valuable cargo, casting it upon the waters all day long, to be gathered up by those who cared to take the trouble.

Farming and fishing were abandoned; school even was dismissed, and most of the population of the nearby islands, men, women and children, devoted themselves to obtaining treasures from the waves.

The salvagers decided to try to rescue the Minnehaha in the same way they did the White Star steamship Suevic, which went ashore near the Lizard in March, 1907, by cutting her in half.

Every effort to lighten the ship is now imperative. Yesterday the waves were too high for the tugs to go alongside. Consequently, goods were thrown overboard from the forward hold as fast as the stevedores and a large crew could raise them to the deck.

Huge cases containing automobiles and piano players, sewing machines and clocks, followed one another over the side into the ocean.

Many bales of cigarettes covered the face of the water, and tons of cheap American novels drifted to the nearby shore of Bryner, where they were piled like seaweed.

Tidings of this jettisoning of wealth spread early and a fleet of fishing craft, luggers and rowboats scurried to the scene. As fast as the cargo struck the water the enterprising boatmen pulled up the smaller cases and took the larger ones in tow.

Many boatloads of provisions were taken ashore at other points by the islanders. The people of Bryner Island fished out boxes of foods, tea and tobacco and enough paper covered novels to keep the islands in reading matter for a century.

Two hundred and twenty-four cattle swam ashore, while ten were drowned.

Seamen here think it will be impossible to save the Minnehaha.

MUCH DISCUSSED NAVY BILL GETS ITS THIRD READING

Government Majority of 41 is Registered in Favor of It—The Conservatives Voted Together as One Man—Verville Voted With Government—Edmund Bristol of Centre Toronto Makes Eloquent Speech.

Ottawa, April 21.—The navy bill was given its third reading in the House of Commons yesterday. The vote stood:

For the bill, 111; against the bill, 70—Government majority, 41.

Much has been said about dissension in the Conservative ranks, but when it comes to the final issue, the Conservative party voted solidly together. Mr. Verville, the Labor member, voted with the Government. There were only three speeches on the third reading, Edmund Bristol (Centre Toronto) does not often speak, but he delivered an eloquent address yesterday. Amongst other things he scorned the claim made by Mr. Fielding that the leaders of the Liberal party were patriotic, when the Premier had to be forced to send troops to South Africa, and Mr. Fielding himself, when Premier of Nova Scotia, had refused to allow the British flag to be flown on Dominion Day.

When the bill was called for third reading, R. L. Borden said there were two questions which occurred to him as of importance. What form should Canada's immediate aid be—the present emergency take, and what would be a reasonable basis of permanent operation? The people, he said, had a right to be consulted.

Mr. Borden declared that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had tried to becloud the issue, had tried to make out that he did not want Canada to be involved in every little war in which Britain might be engaged. What he wanted was that, when the Empire was in danger, Canada would assist in the defence, and that the whole world would see that, to attack Britain or any portion of the Empire, meant attacking the whole Empire.

It was foolish for the Government to argue that the Canadian navy would be dragged into every British war. The whole of the British navy was not itself called out, perhaps not one-tenth of it. Sir Wilfrid's proposal he derided as dangerous and revolutionary.

Sir Wilfrid was unable to reply, owing to a heavy cold, but Hon. W. S. Fielding said that the only question between the parties was one of detail, and the Government considered that their method was the better.

Mr. Fielding was inclined to attach much importance to the creation of a personal interest in the navy, and this interest would not attend a mere contribution of money. Every taxpaying Canadian should be made "one of the owners" of the navy, and then they would have a genuine interest in it.

In raising the disloyalty cry of the Opposition had been unfair to fellow Canadians, for the records showed that whatever had been done to cement the ties of the Empire had been done by Liberal Governments. The Liberals had devised the Imperial preference, sent troops to South Africa, provided the military college at Kingston, were building a navy and would provide a naval college. On the other hand, the Conservatives had declined to send a dollar or a man to the aid of the Empire when the relief of Gordon of Khartoum was being planned; they had devised a policy of high protection, and, when some one had said this was not good for British connection, the official organ of the party had remarked: "So much the worse for British connection."

Edmund Bristol (Centre Toronto) said the Conservative party and the people of Canada had forced the Premier's hand in the African war. The Liberal party, he said, thought more of money than of human life. They sent three regiments to South Africa, but would not send a dollar to help England. Every Conservative wanted to see Dreadnoughts built in Canada and manned by Canadians, but what they wanted to do first, last, and all the time, was to play their part in the defence of the Empire.

The vote was then taken.

His Excellency the Governor-General, in presenting the supplementary estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1911, to the House of Commons yesterday morning, asked for $10,000 to defray the expense in connection with the Combine Investigation Act, and $25,000 for the Technical Education Commission.

The total is $5,143,081.63, of which $3,673,781.63 is chargeable to consolidated fund and $1,469,300 to capital.

Whitby has been granted $20,000 for harbor improvements. Twenty-five thousand dollars has been devoted to the Department of Labor.

The new Naval Department is allowed $49,650 running expenses for the year ending March, 1911. The supplementary estimates yesterday morning contained items totalling that much.

They include the Deputy Minister's salary, $5,000, and sundry other officials.

The sum of $25,000 has been set aside for borings and surveys for the proposed new Welland Canal.

In Toronto $6,000 will be allowed for completing fittings, as sidewalks, fences, etc., for the meteorological building and $20,000 for the additions to the rear portion and east side of the Toronto General Postoffice.

In the estimates for Public Works Department is $20,000 for the improvement of the Hamilton harbor.

The question is likely to be raised in the House as to whether the proceedings of the Liberal committee now investigating the Lumsden charges, are in order.

Four is a quorum, but frequently the committee sits with only three members. The climax was reached last night, when for some considerable time the only members of the committee present during the examination of Engineer Poulin, by F. H. Chrysler, were Messrs. Geoffrion and McDonald.

Hon. Frank Oliver's bill to amend the Immigration Act was given a third reading in the Senate yesterday, as was also Hon. Mr. Graham's bill authorizing branch lines to be leased by the I.C.R.

The "sawdust wharf" at Richibucto formed the subject of debate on the motion to go into supply on Public Works estimates last evening. O. S. Crockett (York, N.B.) made several strong statements regarding both the transaction and Hon. William Pugsley's connection with it.

Mr. Crocket concluded by moving an amendment, stating that the evidence showed that the purchase was a corrupt and fraudulent transaction which deserved the severest censure of the House. He spoke for 3 1-2 hours.

F. B. Carvell moved the adjournment and the House rose at 11.30.

LONDON STANDARD ON NAVAL QUESTION

London, April 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Standard referring to the passing of the navy bill at Ottawa says it would be highly improper to criticize the domestic arrangements of the patriotic self-governing state. The essential point for the present is the creation of a navy by the overseas states, which have undertaken their new responsibilities none too soon.

SECRETARY KNOX IS OPTIMISTIC

He Sees Universal Peace in Arbitral Court Plan.

Washington, D.C., April 21.—Ultimate disarmament of the nations of the world is practicable, in the opinion of U. S. Secretary of State Knox.

He believes the establishment of a court of arbitral justice, to which nations of the world may appeal for the settlement of their controversies, will have the effect, as its own natural consequence, of not merely reducing armament, but ultimateley of rendering large armaments unnecessary.

His plan for the establishment of an international court of arbitral justice, which was outlined in an identical note sent last fall to various nations, is said to be meeting with general favor, and Mr. Knox believes that such a court will be constituted at The Hague in the near future.

The Secretary said yesterday that the existence of an important tribunal of arbitral justice would make a resort to it very easy, as, being in permanent session, it would not have to be constituted anew for each case as it arises; that the expenses of the court would be borne by the nations jointly, not, as heretofore by the parties in controversy, and that the judgments of such a court would bind all parties interested in the particular controversy.

The court would be composed of judges representing various nations or systems of law, and it is expected would develop international law just as the common law was developed by judicial decision.

The Secretary also said that while the court would be primarily intended for the powers participating in its constitution, it would be open to any power that might wish to submit a controversy to it, thus making it in the fullest sense international.

BLOCKADE INCREASES AT THE SOO

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 21.—The big blockade of steamers at this point continues to increase rather than diminish, and there are now 50 boats and the same number below the locks. There is no immediate hope for relief inside of two or three weeks. A large number of boats equipped with wireless are sending in orders for supplies via the station at the Park Hotel here.

The boats are given their locking turn by a watchman stationed at Little Rapid Cut, and up to the present there have been no accidents. The sight of an anchored freight at night is very beautiful. It attracts much attention and admiration as it extends up and down the river as far as the eye can reach.

ONTARIO MAY BE AFFECTED

Soft Coal Strike if it Lasts Will Paralyze Industry.

Toronto, April 21.—Industrial paralysis is imminent for Toronto—and Ontario for that matter—from the present appearances of the bituminous coal strike in the United States.

A despatch from Pittsburg says the strike will last from three to six months, and there is precious little soft coal in Toronto to-day, while the demand for it is great.

"It would be a pretty serious matter for Toronto if the disagreement is prolonged for six months," said John Rogers, of the Elias Rogers Co. last night. "It would tie the city's industries up completely. The price of soft coal would be run up in the air so high that it would probably be cheaper to burn anthracite."

According to customs reports, 558,301 tons of soft coal came into the port of Toronto last year. It was not all consumed here, but about nine-tenths of it was, and in all likelihood the local consumption for this year would have reached that figure if the strike hadn't occurred.

Mr. Rogers says he doesn't think there is on an average of three weeks' supply on hand, amongst the local users.

Negotiations have ended in Pittsburg, and the operators' and miners' committees will not again meet until one or the other side gives in. The miners' officers say men will starve before they resume work unday present conditions; the operators say they have made the only possible concessions, and so the deadlock stands.

NEW SALT COMPANY IS FORMED

Sarnia, April 21. The Dominion Salt Co., Ltd., a new incorporation, with a paid-up capital of $100,000, will operate the plant purchased a month ago from the Empire Salt Co. here.

J. M. Diver of Sarnia is president, and the management will be in the hands of C. H. Rogers, formerly treasurer of the Dominion Salt Agency of London, and secretary of the Empire Salt Co. The plant is one of the largest in Canada.

MURDERER WILL HAVE FREEDOM

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 21.—A peculiar situation has developed here as a result of the alleged confession that he murdered his wife here six years ago, made at Waukegan, Ill., on Saturday, by Foster Johnson, a Tuscorora Indian. Johnson says that he pushed his wife into the rapids above the falls. It is claimed by lawyers that the confession he made cannot be used against Johnson at a trial, and it is impossible to get corroborative evidence against him, as there were no witnesses. "The thing that makes me confess the murder of my wife," Johnson said, "was that before I killed her, and when she told me that she intended to commit suicide, she asked me for a nice gravestone, and I promised her I would get it. I have never done so, and it has haunted me. I see her head in the river in my dreams, and have hardly enjoyed a peaceful night in all these years."

CUBAN NEGROES ARE EXCITED

Havana, Cuba, April 21.—Yesterday Secretary of the Interior Lopez Leiva issued a statement denying the existence of the least disorder in Santa Clara or any other part of the island, although there was a condition of suppressed excitement among the negroes in consequence of incendiary utterances by the negro agitator Gen. Evaristo Estenos.

The Government has decided to send troops for the sake of the moral effect.

CANNED EGGS FROM RUSSIA

London, Ont., April 21.—A two-ton shipment of "canned eggs" has been received in the city by a wholesale confectioner, and has been placed in cold storage. The product is Russian, and comes in cans containing 40 or 45 pounds. It is taken from the shell, frozen in the tins and sold in ton lots. To thaw the eggs out the cans are placed in cold water. They cost less after freight is paid than the local product, it is claimed.

CAN HARDLY RECOVER

Mark Twain in Very Weak Condition—Has Angina Pectoris.

Reading, Conn., April 21:—The condition of Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) yesterday afternoon was perceptibly weaker than it was twenty-four hours ago. Dr. Robert H. Halsey, in a statement as to the patient's illness, said that Mr. Clemens has cardiac asthma with angina pectoris. At times, he suffers a great deal, but generally he rests comfortably and is able to sleep at times.

In the opinion of Dr. Halsey, it is not beyond possibility that Mr. Clemens will recover, but as he is 74 years old, the chances seem against him. There is no probability of immediate death, however. Until twenty-four hours ago the patient's condition was such that no definite opinion could be formed as to his progress. In the last twelve hours the weakness has become marked, and Mr. Clemens does not respond to treatment as he did before that. This morning he was still weaker.

TWO WEDDINGS WERE UNIQUE

Hagerstown, Md., April 21.—Miss Laura Tice and Raymond Funkhouser were married yesterday morning on a Western Maryland express train. Rev. L. A. Miller performed the ceremony while the train was running forty miles an hour, the couple holding on to the back of the seats as the train swung around the curves. The other passengers in the coach witnessed the marriage and congratulated the pair. They continued the wedding journey to Boston.

Miss Viola Allen and Ellis Earnshaw of Charlestown, W. Va., were married on Tuesday on the bridge over the Potomac River at Harper's Ferry. Rev. D. A. Foard of the Methodist Church tied the knot.

TORONTO GIRL IS MISSING

Toronto, April 21.—Anxiety is felt for the safety of Katie Stewart, aged 16, of 98 Alexander street, who left her home at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and had not returned till a late hour last night. The police were communicated with, but could find no trace of her.

She is large for her age, about five foot three inches in height, dark brown hair and eyes, and was dressed in a red and green plaid dress, red jacket, and light straw hat. She is in ill-health and for that reason might have wandered away and been unable to find her way home.

CRUISER CANADA FOR GREAT LAKES

Halifax, N.S., April 21.—The cruiser Canada is being transferred from this station to the great lakes for service, and her commander, Capt. Knowlton, who will take her to Montreal, and turn the command over to Lieut. Stewart and will then take command of the surveying steamer Gulnare, with headquarters at Charlottetown.

The Canada is a fast boat and her armament may be said to exceed that specified by the Rush-Bagot treaty.

HUNGARY WANTS HER OWN FARMERS

Ottawa, April 21.—Emigration to Canada is not looked upon with favor by all continental countries. In Hungary, according to the Dominion immigration officers, an order has for some months been in existence which prohibits in future immigration to Canada.

The reason given for this order is that Canada attracts agricultural laborers and small farmers, classes born it is especially desired to keep in Hungary, and further, that such persons when once in the Dominion find the attractions so great that they rarely return to their motherland, but tempt others to follow them.

AT WORK ON A ZOOLOGICAL PARK COMMISSION

Modelling wild game from life is a pursuit that makes large demands upon those who follow it. To Mr. A. Phimister Proctor, the sculptor, it means not only the study of captive animals, but also the finding and hunting of them in the depths of the forests of Colorado or the Canadian Northwest, where he goes every year to get "local color" for his work.

Just at this season Mr. Proctor may be seen almost any morning modelling in the lion house, at the Bronx "Zoo," working to finish a commission for two lions to be placed at the entrance of the hall at Princeton, which was given by the class of '79.

To facilitate Mr. Proctor's work Dr. Hornaday had had a door cut through from the lion's quarters into the model's cage. Formerly the beast had to be enticed from the door of his quarters into the small cage, which was then wheeled into the modelling room, but if it happened that the animal was obdurate much time was lost in the operation. Now the entrance is so natural that the lion soon perambulates into the sculptor's room when the door between is lowered and the work of posing goes on.

NEW SURGICAL METHOD IS ANNOUNCED

Baltimore, Md., April 21.—Dr. E. H. Richardson of Johns Hopkins Hospital announced yesterday a new method in surgery, recently practiced with success at that hospital in operations for a disease of the kidneys. First, a blunt needle is threaded with a fine silver wire, then an incision is made about the infected part and the wire is drawn seesaw fashion through the kidneys to the extent desired.

By the old method, in which the knife was used, serious and sometimes uncontrollable hemorrhages were caused. The silver wire method obviates this, as instead of cutting through the flesh it works through the vessel or arteries without severing them. The method is pronounced invaluable for exploring the kidneys.

MINNEHAHA JETTISONED CARGO OFF SCILLY ISLANDS

Work and School Are Abandoned in Little Community in Order That All May Share in the Rich Salvage Washed Ashore From the Wrecked Liner.

Hughtown, St. Mary's, Scilly Islands, April 21.—The inhabitants of the rocky Scilly Islands were famous wreckers of primitive times, but they will forever remember this as the greatest day in their history. The Atlantic transport liner Minnehaha, which ran ashore early Monday morning, disgorged part of her 17,000 tons of valuable cargo, casting it upon the waters all day long, to be gathered up by those who cared to take the trouble.

Farming and fishing were abandoned; school even was dismissed, and most of the population of the nearby islands, men, women and children, devoted themselves to obtaining treasures from the waves.

The salvagers decided to try to rescue the Minnehaha in the same way they did the White Star steamship Suevic, which went ashore near the Lizard in March, 1907, by cutting her in half.

Every effort to lighten the ship is now imperative. Yesterday the waves were too high for the tugs to go alongside. Consequently, goods were thrown overboard from the forward hold as fast as the stevedores and a large crew could raise them to the deck.

Huge cases containing automobiles and piano players, sewing machines and clocks, followed one another over the side into the ocean.

Many bales of cigarettes covered the face of the water, and tons of cheap American novels drifted to the nearby shore of Bryner, where they were piled like seaweed.

Tidings of this jettisoning of wealth spread early and a fleet of fishing craft, luggers and rowboats scurried to the scene. As fast as the cargo struck the water the enterprising boatmen pulled up the smaller cases and took the larger ones in tow.

Many boatloads of provisions were taken ashore at other points by the islanders. The people of Bryner Island fished out boxes of foods, tea and tobacco and enough paper covered novels to keep the islands in reading matter for a century.

Two hundred and twenty-four cattle swam ashore, while ten were drowned.

Seamen here think it will be impossible to save the Minnehaha.

MUCH DISCUSSED NAVY BILL GETS ITS THIRD READING

Government Majority of 41 is Registered in Favor of It—The Conservatives Voted Together as One Man—Verville Voted With Government—Edmund Bristol of Centre Toronto Makes Eloquent Speech.

Ottawa, April 21.—The navy bill was given its third reading in the House of Commons yesterday. The vote stood:

For the bill, 111; against the bill, 70—Government majority, 41.

Much has been said about dissension in the Conservative ranks, but when it comes to the final issue, the Conservative party voted solidly together. Mr. Verville, the Labor member, voted with the Government. There were only three speeches on the third reading, Edmund Bristol (Centre Toronto) does not often speak, but he delivered an eloquent address yesterday. Amongst other things he scorned the claim made by Mr. Fielding that the leaders of the Liberal party were patriotic, when the Premier had to be forced to send troops to South Africa, and Mr. Fielding himself, when Premier of Nova Scotia, had refused to allow the British flag to be flown on Dominion Day.

When the bill was called for third reading, R. L. Borden said there were two questions which occurred to him as of importance. What form should Canada's immediate aid to the present emergency take, and what would be a reasonable basis of permanent operation? The people, he said, had a right to be consulted.

Mr. Borden declared that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had tried to becloud the issue, had tried to make out that he did not want Canada to be involved in every little war in which Britain might be engaged. What he wanted was that, when the Empire was in danger, Canada would assist in the defance, and that the whole world would see that, to attack Britain or any portion of the Empire, meant attacking the whole Empire.

It was foolish for the Government to argue that the Canadian navy would be dragged into every British war. The whole of the British navy was not itself called out, perhaps not one-tenth of it. Sir Wilfrid's proposal he derided as dangerous and revolutionary.

Sir Wilfrid was unable to reply, owing to a heavy cold, but Hon. W. S. Fielding said that the only question between the parties was one of detail, and the Government considered that their method was the better.

Mr. Fielding was inclined to attach much importance to the creation of a personal interest in the navy, and this interest would not attend a mere contribution of money. Every taxpaying Canadian should be made "one of the owners" of the navy, and then they would have a genuine interest in it.

In raising the disloyalty cry of the Opposition had been unfair to fellow Canadians, for the records showed that whatever had been done to cement the ties of the Empire had been done by Liberal Governments. The Liberals had devised the Imperial preference, sent troops to South Africa, provided the military college at Kingston, were building a navy and would provide a naval college. On the other hand, the Conservatives had declined to send a dollar or a man to the aid of the Empire when the relief of Gordon of Khartoum was being planned; they had devised a policy of high protection, and, when some one had said this was not good for British connection, the official organ of the party had remarked: "So much the worse for British connection."

Edmund Bristol (Centre Toronto) said the Conservative party and the people of Canada had forced the Premier's hand in the African war. The Liberal party, he said, thought more of money than of human life. They sent three regiments to South Africa, but would not send a dollar to help England. Every Conservative wanted to see Dreadnoughts built in Canada and manned by Canadians, but what they wanted to do first, last, and all the time, was to play their part in the defence of the Empire.

THE LATE CHIEF ROSSEL

The city of Peterborough loses one of its most valuable servants and its citizens of honesty and uprightness in the death this morning of Chief of Police George I. Rossel. Coming to this city from St. Catharines on April 20, 1868, to become the head of the local police force, he has been a resident of Peterborough for twenty-two years, and in that time as Chief of Police, and as a private citizen, his conduct has been such that his death is sincerely mourned. The late Chief Rossel was a man of sterling character and strong natural intelligence, and as a public official he did his duty fearlessly, but tempered with prudence. He gave faithful service to the city—service that has helped to make Peterborough one of the most law-abiding cities on the continent. Those who are bereaved will have the deep sympathy of all classes of citizens.

THE CANADIAN SHIP NIOBE

At the naval conference in London the British Admiralty advised Canada, Australia and New Zealand that dreadnoughts should be the first ships of their new navies. Australia and New Zealand took this advice, and dreadnoughts are being built for them. But Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused to accept the advice, and instead of having a dreadnought to lead the Canadian navy, decided to buy an antiquated British warship called the "Niobe." This ship was outclassed many years ago, and in a battle with a modern warship would not have a ghost of a chance. If Canada had not bought it the British Government would have soon sent it to the scrap heap in accordance with the policy regarding such ships announced by Mr. McKenna in the British House of Commons.

An interesting fact brought out in the discussion in Parliament the other day was that when going at full speed the "Niobe" consumes 17 tons of coal per hour. Mr. George Taylor pointed out that at five dollars per ton this coal would cost $85 per hour, or $2,040 per day.

A SHAMEFUL NAVAL POLICY

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has stated positively that if the British Empire becomes involved in a war the Canadian warships must remain neutral until the Ottawa Government decides whether to take part in the war or not. In reply to questions Sir Wilfrid again and again reiterated the statement that if a Canadian ship is attacked by the enemy it may defend itself, but otherwise it shall take no part in the war until instructions are issued from Ottawa. Suppose that warships of Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand were manoeuvring together when they were attacked by a hostile fleet. The commander of the enemy's fleet would know, of course, that a Canadian ship could not fight without special instructions from Ottawa unless attacked. That fact would be known to the whole world. He would, therefore, be careful not to make any attack on the Canadian warships. He would direct the fire of his ships against the New Zealand, Australian and British warships, while the Canadians, secure from attack, would stand off and look on. With what contempt the New Zealanders, Australians and British would regard the Canadians! Even the men on the enemy's ships would despise them.

If Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy is carried out Canadians will be regarded as the meanest and most cowardly nation on the face of the globe.

COSTLY BUILDING

It is now stated that the Grand Trunk Pacific engineers refused to accept a section of the road extending from Quebec 150 miles west, after the work of grading had been practically completed under the supervision of the Government Commission known as the National Transcontinental Railway Commission, and it is said that in consequence the whole section had to be reconstructed at an additional cost of over $5,921,972, in order to secure the grade of four-tenths of one per cent. per mile agreed upon between the Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.

Mr. Wilfrid Laurier, instead of appointing competent railway men on the National Transcontinental Railway Construction Commission, appointed politicians with no railway experience, but with a great deal of experience in the raising of money for the Liberal campaign fund. It is not surprising that this blunder, costing the country about six million dollars, should be made by men of this class. It will be remembered that the chairman of this commission, Mr. Parent, was the principal promoter of the Quebec Bridge Company, which ended so disastrously for the workmen employed on it, and so expensively for the people of Canada, who had to pay the cost of the huge failure, while the promoters reaped big profits.

However, inexcusable as is this latest instance of the waste of public money on the Government section of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, it is not as blameworthy as the classification of ordinary earth as rock all along the line.

What other expensive blunders the National Transcontinental Railway Construction Commission have made the public do not yet know, as the Laurier Government have thrown the cloak of secrecy around their work, but they have to go to Parliament to get money for the undertaking, and so it has been necessary to explain that the work has cost an immensely greater amount than it was estimated it would. Mr. Fielding stated that the cost would not exceed $51,000,000, but the so-called "rock" excavation that is chiefly the excavation of ordinary earth classed as "rock," is costing more than $51,000,000, and it is now estimated that the whole cost of the Government section of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will be over two hundred million dollars.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Mr. F. Mc Auliffe's Lumbago

Lachute man, after fourteen years suffering, finds health and strength in an old reliable Kidney Remedy.

Lachute, Que., April 20.—(Special).—After fourteen years of suffering, which started from pleurisy, followed by dropsical swellings, and culminated in Lumbago, and confined him to his bed, Malachi F. McAuliffe, a well-known resident of this place, has entirely recovered his health, and he says without hesitation, "I am sure I owe it entirely to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

"I was laid up with Pleurisy, which affected my kidneys," Mr. McAuliffe continues, "I suffered a great deal of pain, especially in my back. I was also terribly troubled with dropsical swellings, and finally, after many attempts to get rid of my trouble, I found myself compelled to give up and was confined to my bed with Lumbago. I tried many medicines but they failed to do me any good. Then I turned to Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after taking one box I felt greatly relieved. I took several more boxes and found myself completely cured."

SMALL HOG HOUSES.

They Are a Means of Keeping the Pigs Healthy Until Ready For Market.

Since individual farrowing houses have come into use and proved a great boon to swine breeders it has been discovered that these same houses are admirably adapted to sheltering hogs the year around. There is no time of the year when they need to be empty. The average litter farrowed in a small house finds sufficient room in it for shelter until ready for market. A house 6 by 6 feet will accommodate 12 hogs of 225 pounds weight, and ten hogs of that size will easily occupy a house 6 by 8 feet.

THE SMALL HOG HOUSE.
[From Breeder's Gazette, Chicago.]

A drove of 100 hogs that is forced a night to split up into small groups to sleep is practically insured against colds and pneumonia. None of them can get steaming hot, and there are none that must always take the airy outside of the pig pile of hogs in a great high shed, where the whole drove might congregate.

As a thing of perennial usefulness the small house has established itself with a security that never would have been possible if it were required only at farrowing time, because in these days of expensive lumber no man is willing to maintain any buildings that do not seem absolutely necessary. A number of small hog houses might cost more money than one large shed having the same aggregate floor space, but when it comes to a choice of one or the other the pig saving possibilities of the small house commend it to favor.

Water For the Flock.

Many flockmasters formerly believed that sheep required no drinking water. Were you to ask some of these old timers why they did not provide water for their flocks they would answer, "The sheep get dew in summer and snow in winter." These are really not sufficient to quench the thirst.

Sheep troubled with internal parasites drink large quantities of water. Upon hot, dry days an average sized mature sheep will drink a gallon of water, provided the water is pure. The flock should never be forced to drink stagnant, slough water, for they are liable to take the dreaded fluke into their system from this source. Water standing in small pools exposed to the sun will soon become coated with a green scum which seems to cause scours. Water containing an excess of lime should not be given to rams, as such water is very liable to cause bladder trouble or gallstones. Ewes are almost exempt from this ailment. Soft water is best for the ram flock.

The sun purifies almost everything excepting water. With water it evaporates all the good and leaves the evil. Covered tanks are good where there is but a small drinking space left. Let your sheep tanks be filled by pure well water. Running spring water is ideal for the flock. Pure cool water both winter and summer is a boon and blessing to successful sheepherding.

DAIRY NOTES

Skimmilk, which is whole milk minus part of its fat and which costs only half as much as whole milk, furnishes protein about four times as cheaply as beef.

Caring For the Calf.

Keep the newly born calf in the best clean, dry, warm place that you have, and especially avoid getting it chilled if you don't want it to have scours and become stunted.

Using the Separator in Cold Weather.

If the weather is very cold it is well to run a gallon or two of hot water through the separator to warm it up before the milk is poured in. Then the milk will not be chilled.

Do the Milking Regularly.

Have a fixed time for milking and always be punctual. If you are running other farm work never allow it to crowd out your regular milking hour. It will not pay to do so.

Value of Good Cows Well Kept.

With good milking cows, well fed and well kept, milk can be produced at a cost of 65 cents per hundred and butter fat for 16 cents a pound. This is an average for the year round.

Richness of Milk.

There is only one way to measure milk, and that is by the percentage of cream it contains. The big yielding cow may be a robber so far as her feed bill compared with her return goes.

Construction on 300 miles of railway tributary to Edmonton begins this week.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, April 22.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market offerings to-day were 225 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 750 hogs and 2000 calves. Owing to continued small supplies of cattle prices scored a further advance of 25c to 25c per cwt. The attendance of buyers was large and demand was good, as butchers generally were short of supplies. Choice steers sold at $7.50 to $7.65; good, at $7 to $7.25; fairly good, at $6.50 to $6.75; fair at $6 to $6.25; and common, at $5.75 per cwt. Some very choice fat cows met with a ready sale, at $6.25 to $6.50, and good ones at $5.75 to $6 per cwt. The supply of sheep and lambs was a little larger, with demand good, and prices ruled firm. Sheep brought 6c per lb., and lambs, sold at from $4 to $8 each. Offerings of calves were heavy and an active trade was done at $5 to $10 each. A weaker feeling prevailed for hogs on account of increased supply and prices declined 15c to 20c. Demand was only fair at this reduction, as packers have ample stocks on hand for the balance of the week, and trade was slow with sales of selected lots at $10 to $10.25, weighed off the cars.

The Riddle of a Wedding.

The Story of a Series of Mystifying Events That Are Brought to a Happy Solution.

By HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1909, by C. W. Hooke.

In order to appreciate the strange and harrowing riddle which Mr John Bergen was compelled to guess one must know some simple facts about the gentleman himself. He was a lawyer of Dayton, O., and in a good way of practice, with a considerable income besides; a bachelor, in his thirtieth year.

He had come to New York on a case, and it dragged obstinately, but as every day was a hundred dollars in his pocket and the office at home was running along nicely in charge of a salaried assistant, commonly supposed to be a partner, he felt fairly well content, although he was not fond of New York as a place of residence.

His abiding place was a small hotel, relatively quiet in the metropolitan pandemonium, but insufferably dull Bergen was bored to extinction by the life he led there, and then it changed, and all the world was bright.

For there came a girl with the most alluring brown eyes and lips that moved with magic when she spoke, so that to watch them was to behold the beauty of an angel's voice transmuted into something visible. The girl was Mildred Stuyvesant of Columbus, O., and she was chaperoned by a pimp and silly aunt, a Mrs. Haven, also of Columbus. But beyond the meager fact of their residence they disclosed very little else to Bergen, who by superhuman tact had succeeded in making their acquaintance. Every minute plunged him deeper into the perilous mysteries of love, yet outwardly he progressed not one inch toward the goal of the lady's favor.

"I am here upon unpleasant business."

Matters were in this state when one evening as Bergen was about to enter the dining room he was accosted by the manager of the hotel, who told him that there was a gentleman who wished to meet him.

"He comes from Columbus," said the manager, "and, happening to hear that you were from Dayton"—

"All right," said Bergen. "Where is he?"

The magic word Columbus had destroyed his natural disinclination to meet strangers—not that he had any notion of gaining information from this person, but simply that he was strongly prejudiced in favor of anybody hailing from that city. Presently, therefore, he was introduced to a careworn man of forty clothed all in black though not in the customary raiment for informal dining. His name was Marsh.

"I know you, Mr. Bergen," said he sadly. "You're a lawyer—that's what you are, and a good one. And I may need your advice before this evening's over—an Ohio man, too, and that's what I'm likely to want."

"At your service, Mr. Marsh," responded Bergen, entertained by a certain quality of mystery in this man. "Shall we go in to dinner together?"

Marsh's face brightened as when some random gleam in a dull day shines on a neglected tomb.

"Why, that would suit me to death, said he.

There was no further reference to the trouble which he might wish to lay before an Ohio lawyer. When they were seated he began to speak of the guests scattered about the room, and his somber comments were delightful for simplicity and wit.

"I like to size people up," he said. "Now, for instance, there's a couple just coming in—what I'd call an interesting pair on a first glance. Let's sort o' watch 'em and see what we can be out."

"I have met the lady," said Bergen. "But not the man?"

Bergen shook his head, his lips so tightly compressed that he could not open them to speak.

"Is he her husband, do you think?" queried Marsh.

"Her husband?" echoed Bergen aghast. "Why, no. She is Miss Stuyvesant of Columbus."

"I thought they looked married," said Marsh in his saddest tone.

Bergen squared himself and for some seconds regarded his companion keenly.

"Now, look here, Mr. Marsh," said he at last, "you began our acquaintance by naming my profession. I'll name yours. You're a detective."

Marsh solemnly inclined his head.

"Why you have sought my society I don't know," continued Bergen, "but if the reason has not some reference to that young lady I am much mistaken."

"Right again," said Marsh.

"Why didn't you say so?"

"A very natural question," responded the detective, "and I'll answer fair and square. I wanted to find out how much she'd told you."

"Have you found out?"

"I have," replied Marsh mournfully. "She hasn't told you anything."

A faint smile appeared on Bergen's countenance.

"I have a suspicion," said he, "that you may be a pretty good detective."

Marsh acknowledged the compliment with a scarcely perceptible bow.

"And now," said he, "I'll have to come down to business. I'm here in the interests of that young lady's father, not to mention her own. He and she haven't got along very well together, though there's plenty of natural affection between them. That man over there has been the cause of it. What do you think of him?"

Bergen turned a despairing glance upon the cause of trouble, and his previous impression of disfavor was intensified.

"Don't like him, eh?" said Marsh. "Well, he's a bad egg. Good family, though; ancestry a trifle mixed, however. He's no thoroughbred. Never was straight from childhood up, so far as I can find out, yet managed to keep out of bad scrapes and hold his place in society. But his finish may be in sight."

"May be?"

"I shall arrest him for embezzlement before 10 o'clock this evening," said the detective, "unless he is married to that girl."

"But if he is?"

"Then her father is going to square things up and give his son-in-law a chance to reform. The fellow's name is Caldwell. He's been handling some property for his grandfather and has got away with most of it—lost it or squandered it, we suppose. The old gentleman is a great friend of Mr. Stuyvesant, and Caldwell's crooked work came to light through Stuyvesant's looking him up on account of his daughter. Caldwell has been making love to her for six months or so and seems to have hypnotized her. The aunt, Mrs. Haven, has taken the girl's part against her father and has come on here with her to help her get married, as we figure it out. But has the marriage taken place? That's the point. He says it has."

"You've asked Caldwell about it?" demanded Bergen, upon whom a cold perspiration had suddenly broken out. "But if he knew you he may have lied."

"He didn't know that I represented Mr. Stuyvesant," replied Marsh, "or that anybody was on to his crookedness. But it's always possible that Jim Caldwell is lying. It's a mighty long shot when you catch him telling the truth."

Bergen's voice was husky as he framed the next question.

"What does she say?"

"My orders are strict," said Marsh. "I'm to let her alone absolutely, and her aunt too. If I arrest him they're never to know that her father had anything to do with it. And if I asked about the marriage they'd guess—at least the girl would, for she carries some good brains in her head."

"As a lawyer," said Bergen, "I advise you"—

He paused, shivering. Could he advise an immediate arrest and be sure that he was serving her? She was his client before the high court of honor. Her cause must be his, even against himself.

"It's a delicate question," said Marsh. "Stuyvesant is the best friend I've got on earth, and I get more money out of him in the course of a year than I get out of any other man or firm. If I make a mistake this night I'm done for with Stuyvesant. And I come to you, Mr. Bergen, and I ask you the question that is preying on my mind. Are those two married?"

Bergen rested his head upon his hands and bestowed an agony of thought upon this riddle. When he looked up Marsh eyed him sharply and quizzically.

"I guess you ain't feeling your best tonight," he said. "You're sort of blue in the gills, and you're feeding like a canary bird."

Bergen impolitely ignored this kindly solicitude.

"Mr. Marsh," said he, "I think that you and I should have an interview with Caldwell at the earliest possible moment and demand proofs of his marriage. If he cannot satisfy us, you should execute your orders. I am trying to consider the young lady's interests. I certainly don't wish her to marry a man who has robbed his grandfather. If she has already married him, the matter assumes a different aspect."

"You bet it does," said Marsh.

At this juncture Mrs. Haven came in and immediately proceeded to borrow some money of her niece, with which she paid a cabman who had waited at the door.

After dinner the two ladies went to their apartment and Caldwell to his, and there the lawyer and the detective presently confronted him. He had the typical manner of the habitual liar, and he took the two men into his confidence with all the formality that a liar loves. In response to Marsh's statement that the swindled grandfather had discovered his loss and had secured a warrant for Caldwell's arrest the latter fluently denied all wrongdoing.

"I know what you've done," said Marsh. "But if you're married to Stuyvesant's daughter your grandfather's going to let up on you. You've got to prove that marriage, and you're got to do it now or I'll take you in. Here's Mr. Bergen, a well known New York lawyer, who will say that all's legal and right."

Probably Marsh called Bergen a New York lawyer merely for the value of the phrase. It seemed hardly worth while to correct the error, especially as Caldwell honored the distinguished counsel with a bow.

"Gentlemen," said Caldwell, "it is my wife's wish that our marriage should be secret for a time, but I will accept your solemn assurances and disclose the facts in confidence. My wife and I were married three weeks ago in Dayton. She preferred to take an assumed name because of her father's opposition. I happen to have the certificate in my trunk."

And he produced a document which asserted that James Caldwell and Elizabeth Miller had been united in wedlock by the Rev. Hugh McKnight. The clergyman was known to Bergen. He recognized the signature as genuine, and his heart died in his bosom. Marsh read his glance and began immediately to move toward the door. Bergen followed.

When it was over, the lawyer had no desire for the society of the mournful Marsh, from whom he presently separated, having a desire to walk. It had begun to rain, however, and Bergen halted, indecisive, on the steps of the hotel.

"Cab, sir?" said a voice, and Bergen looked into the face of the man to whom he had seen Mrs. Haven give money.

Upon the rayless gloom of Bergen's mind there fell a sudden beam, the light of an insane hope.

"My friend," said he, "where had you driven the stout lady who paid you in the hall?"

"Dr. Horton's, on Twenty-ninth street, sir."

"A doctor?"

"Minister."

"Wait for me here."

Bergen hurried into the office and requested that his name should be sent up to Mrs. Haven.

"She and her niece have gone," said the clerk.

"Gone out?"

"Gone for good."

"And Mr. Caldwell?" said Bergen.

"He's gone, too—not ten minutes ago."

Bergen ran to the door, where the cabby was waiting.

"Drive me to Dr. Horton's," said he, "and save time at the rate of a dollar a minute for yourself."

A trim maid at Dr. Horton's door said that the clergyman was engaged, but at that moment the venerable man himself appeared in the reception room.

"Sir," said Bergen, "am I right in supposing that a marriage is about to be performed between James Caldwell and Mildred Stuyvesant?"

"And suppose you are right, my young friend?" said the minister. "What then?"

"I am a lawyer from Dayton, O.," answered Bergen. "About three weeks ago in that city"—

He was interrupted by a ring at the bell, and the door was immediately opened by the maid. Mrs. Haven and Mildred were ushered in, and they were amazed at the sight of Bergen.

"Miss Stuyvesant," said he, "I am here upon most unpleasant business. I have learned of your intended marriage with Mr. Caldwell. This evening, for a reason which I will explain to you later, Mr. Caldwell showed to myself and a detective a certificate of marriage, in which document he appeared as bridegroom and Miss Elizabeth Miller as bride. Now, while I am bound to say to you that this document may have been a forgery intended to deceive the detective, who would otherwise have interrupted this marriage, I think that the circumstances of the case strongly urge you to delay."

"Before proceeding further," said Dr. Horton, "I think we should join Mr. Caldwell, who is waiting in my reception room."

Thereupon he ushered them in, but Mr. Caldwell was not there. An open window explained his absence. He had overheard Bergen's statement, but had not recognized his voice. To Caldwell this "lawyer from Dayton" was a far more formidable person than the "well known New York lawyer" whom he had met at the Hotel Braithwaite.

For it proved upon investigation that the Dayton wedding was a valid ceremony and Elizabeth Miller was a real woman whom Caldwell had shamelessly jilted, but with whom he had been forced into a secret marriage by the threat of scandal. His affairs had come to such a pass that a marriage with Mildred Stuyvesant was absolutely his only hope of escaping jail. He had therefore taken the desperate step of marrying Miss Miller, trusting that he could buy her silence with the Stuyvesant gold.

When confronted by Marsh at the Hotel Braithwaite he had seen destruction staring him in the face and in the last gasp of terror had bethought him of the certificate which he had stolen three weeks ago from poor Bessie Miller. The ruse had served him well, but those fatal words "a lawyer from Dayton" had shattered his dream. Any one who came from that city to stop the bigamous wedding must be armed with sufficient facts, thought Caldwell.

Mildred Stuyvesant naturally suffered much grief and bitterness of spirit, but she was not yet twenty, and it left no deep scar. As for Bergen, he detected the hand of Providence in this rescue of the woman he loved, and with a heart assured he carried on his wooing to success.

FELT ALL USED UP

A Business Man Escaped Breakdown.

"It needs only the additional strain following a slump in business world like 1907-8 to bring many business men to the very limit of their physical endurance. Things began to get tight with me early in August, '07," writes Truman J. Harcourt from Wilmington. "Larger payments in connection with my contracts had to be made, and it took so much of my capital that I found myself on the ragged edge. I had worked very hard and had perhaps smoked too much, so when pressure demanded strength my nerves gave out. I lost my appetite, couldn't get to sleep before one or two, and it looked as if I were all in.

Ferrozone The Best Man's Tonic

"I was reading the Telegraph and noticed the wonderful work done by 'Ferrozone.' I read of a case of nervousness it had cured and decided to try it myself. I am not going to tell you of my ups and downs during the first three weeks—one day I would feel pretty well, the next day like thirty cents. In three or four weeks the effect of Ferrozone was manifest. I gained steadily—that's the best of a good medicine. All I gained I kept, and to-day I am as sound, strong and vigorous as a young boy."

When you feel all used up—tired out—lacking appetite, energy and ambition, these are the signs of thin blood and weak nerves. Ferrozone will cure—try one or two Ferrozone Tablets at meals. Fifty cents a box, six for $2.50, all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Drink Catnip Tea.

Catnip tea? Yes, of course. People are beginning to see the value of "yarb teas," and best of them all, they say, is the beverage made from the homely catnip that grows in country gardens.

Iced, it is delicious on hot summer days. Hot, it relieves tired nerves, acts as a sedative when one can go to sleep no other way, and it is a most excellent remedy for a cold if one takes it piping hot with a couple of dover powders just before retiring for the night.

Catnip leaves should be gathered when the plant is in bloom and dried. The tea made from them is pungent, aromatic and somewhat bitter. The tea, which is made by steeping the leaves in hot water, acts as a tonic and is an antispasmodic.

Old fashioned mothers give it to their babies to soothe and to expel the gas from the little stomachs. Then these mothers drink what's left of this soothing herb—and like it—and feel refreshed without knowing the reason why.

We are gradually getting back to nature, and before long we'll be a herb drinking people. When that time comes we'll forget all about the "nerves" and indigestion and other diseases caused by caffeine and tannic acid.

It Is Not True—

That it is necessary to buy expensive cuts of meat in order to have them palatable and nutritious.

That clear meat soups are "strengthening" instead of stimulating.

That one gets more "strength" from potatoes, rice, etc., if they are put to cook in cold water.

That tea and coffee "if they are weak" will not harm children.

That cocoa is cooked sufficiently if boiling water is poured on. It should be cooked over boiling water for half an hour.

That cereals are properly cooked in twenty minutes. They should be cooked from one to three hours, according to variety.

That the term "cheap food" relates to the first cost alone. In reality cheap food is that which yields the most possible nourishment for the money spent.

QUAKER OATS COMPANY WILL LIKELY HAVE NEW MILL AT CALGARY, ALTA.

It is learned that the Quaker Oats Company will erect another large mill in Canada and it is likely that Calgary will be the location. The rapid increase in the company's business in the Dominion has made another mill necessary and it will be situated in the west in order to meet the demand for the company's products from that part of the country. A despatch from Calgary says that officials of the company have been looking over the ground there, and it is expected that negotiations will be closed in about ten days. The new mill will cost $500,000 and will employ three hundred hands to start with.

THE MASONIC LODGE OF INSTRUCTION IS CLOSED

The Masonic Lodge of Instruction opened yesterday by Rt. Wor. Bro. Bro. Dr. Ford, of Norwood, closed last evening with the exemplification of the work of the third degree, by the Wor. Masters and officers of Ontario Lodge, No. 26, and Hope Lodge, No. 114, of Port Hope.

An address of welcome was read to Rt. Wor. Bro. Aubrey White, Deputy Grand Master, and the visiting brethren by Wor. Bro. G. W. Morrow, as follows:—

Rt. Worshipful Sir and Brother:

By kind permission of your District Deputy, I, as their Chief Magistrate, am accorded the privilege of tendering you the hearty welcome of the citizens of Peterborough.

We should esteem it a high honor to have you visit us in your private capacity.

But it is particularly gratifying to welcome you as a distinguished Deputy Grand Master of the Masonic Order—an Order in which are enrolled the best of citizens in every community the world over, and which has done so much to relieve distress, improve society, and inculcate those principles of morality and virtue, which underlie the highest ideals of good citizenship.

We congratulate you upon your deserved promotion in the craft, and we congratulate the craft on the good judgment it has evinced in selecting you as its Deputy Grand Master.

We trust that you and the brethren in this part of your jurisdiction will receive much encouragement and inspiration as a result of this Lodge of Instruction.

We cordially welcome you to our city and hope that your fraternal duties will not be so onerous as to prevent you from getting some impression of our civic advantages and our material progress.

During your stay the freedom of the city is yours.

The Deputy Grand Master made a fitting reply, in which he stated that this was not his first visit to the city, as he had been called here in his professional capacity before. He felt sure his visit would be very enjoyable, and the duties of his office light. No one regretted more than he the unavoidable absence of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master. He was also well aware of the civic advantages and of the mutual progress which had been made by the city and concluded by congratulating the mayor on representing such a progressive city and the citizens on having such a man as Mr. Morrow for mayor.

After the close of the work of the Lodge of Instruction the brethren adjourned to the dining hall where Bro. T. Hooper prepared refreshments and a very pleasant hour was spent, a short toast list being offered.

Speeches were made by the Deputy Grand Master, and Rt. Wor. Bros Judge Harding, of Lindsay, Rt. Wor. Bro. Dr. Ford and others interspersed with songs, etc.

The large number of brethren in attendance from all over the district was highly gratifying to the District Deputy, and he expressed himself as well satisfied with the work done at both sessions.

Among the other distinguished brethren present were Rt. Wor. Bro. Harding, P.G.M.; Rt. Wor. Bro. R. Clarke, and Rt. Wor. Bro. J. Hull.

EXPLOSION SETS FIRE TO MINE AND NUMBER OF MEN DOOMED TO DEATH

Special to Review

Birmingham, Alta., April 21.—Between twenty-five and forty men are dead or doomed to death in the burning model mine at Mulga, owned by the Birmingham Coal and Iron Company. They were trapped by a terrible explosion last night, and practically all hope for their rescue was given up to-day, though desperate efforts were made to reach them. Air was pumped into the blazing shaft all night and to-day, but it is believed if the men were not killed by the terrific blast that rocked the country for miles around, they have been burned or suffocated. The mine foreman was among those in the mine when the explosion occurred. He alone knew the exact number of men at work at the time.

CHIEF ROSZEL PASSES AWAY

City Loses Valuable Public Servant—Death Followed Paralytic Stroke

The intimation of the passing away of this city's chief of police, George I. Roszel was received this morning with genuine regret by the citizens of Peterborough, and sincere sympathy will be extended the bereaved widow and members of the family.

On the morning of March 21st Chief Roszel was stricken with a paralytic stroke, and while fatal results were not entirely unexpected, the news of his death, which occurred shortly before six o'clock this morning, came as a shock to the general public, by whom he was highly respected and esteemed.

The late George I. Roszel was born in the township of Kaistor, Ontario, sixty years ago, and before receiving the appointment as chief of police of Peterborough in 1886, he was for six years a member of the police force of St. Catharines. During the twenty-two years as a civic official here, he was recognized as a fearless and conscientious public servant, and in his death the city loses one who has done much to advance the general good of the community. In 1908 he was elected president of the Chief Constables' Association of Canada. He was a past-master of Peterborough Lodge, A.F. and A.M., and also a member of Corinthian R.A. Chapter and Moore Preceptory. He was a member of the Murray St. Baptist church. He was also a member of the Peterborough Circle of the Canadian Order of Home Circles.

The late Chief Roszel is survived by his wife, two sons, three brothers and two sisters. The sons are Messrs John and Frank of this city; the brothers are Messrs. Storris Roszel, of Porthill, Ont.; Lavant Roszel, of Hamilton, and Daniel Roszel, of Richmond, Ill., and the sisters are Miss Mary Roszel, of Hamilton, and Miss Juliet Roszel, of Smithville.

The funeral will take place from his late residence, 517 Stewart street, on Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of the A.F. and A.M., to Little Lake cemetery. Service will be conducted at the house at 2.30 o'clock.

"The Geisha" will be presented at Grand Opera House on Saturday evening, May 23rd by the Peterborough Amateur Operatic Co. The presentation will be under the distinguished patronage of Earl Grey. Prices 25c to 75 cents. Seats on sale at box office. Under direction of Mr. R. J. Devey.

WEDDING BELLS

CHAMBERS—CROWE
BUTLER—DUNSFORD

Rev. Mr. Potter, the popular and esteemed pastor of St. Andrew's, had a double wedding on his hands yesterday afternoon at the parsonage, when Mr. N. D. Chambers, of Toronto, was united in marriage to Miss Florence, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Crowe, Hall's Glen, and Mr. Ernest Butler, of Lakefield, was wedded to Miss May, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dunsford, of Douro. Mr. Chambers is the fifth son of Mr. James Chambers, of Manvers, and Mr. Butler is a son of the late Jos. Butler, of Midland.

TWO ARE KILLED

Village of Shawville, Que., Scene of a Tragedy — Man and Wife Arrested

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, April 21.—The village of Shawville, in Pontiac, was the scene last night of a shooting affray which resulted in the death of two young men, Harry Howes and Willie Pale. Those with several other young men, were teasing Mike Murphy and his wife, though without any malicious intent, when Murphy chased them with a shotgun, and fired four shots, the last shot killing the two young men. The others ran into an old building followed by Murphy, intending to shoot them as well, but one of the young men seized the gun. Murphy and his wife are under arrest. The couple, who are gypsies, have been camping on disputed territory for three years, and have been a nuisance to the public during that time.

Mr. Wadely will give an illustrated Lecture on "Decorative Art" under the auspices of the Peterborough Woman's Art Association, on Thursday evening April twenty-first, at eight o'clock in the Gymnasium of the Y. W. C. A. There will be a short programme which will be contributed by:—Mrs. Wadely, Miss Choate Miss Hallihan. Admission 25 cents.

Final "Geisha" Rehearsal

A final rehearsal of "The Geisha" will be held to-morrow (Friday) night at 7.30 at the Grand opera house. Every member of the company is urged to attend.

Important to Ladies

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Derenwend of Toronto, is visiting this town and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the Hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression and the face, and consequently tone up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at the Oriental Hotel on Friday, April 22nd.

Secure in Their Hearts

Guelph Daily News says:—"The programme of last evening on the whole may be considered quite up to the high standard of the past, and in some numbers, particularly those by Miss McCann, was something even superior. The audience soon discovered in Maggie McCann a delightful treat. She has a splendid voice, and what is of even greater value, a splendid stage presence, and the capability of putting an expression into her songs which speedily makes her secure in the hearts of those listening. Her rendering of "Come Under My Plaidie," and other songs was admirable, and Miss McCann was fully entitled to the liberal encores and bouquets she received." Miss McCann sings at the opening of T. A. S. hall next week.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY AT PETERBORO' FIRE HALL

There was an atmosphere of dignity, solemnity and importance at the Peterborough fire hall yesterday afternoon. Never since the doors of Peterborough's home of flame punishers were thrown open in response to the first call of fire under the new regime have Chief Howard and the boys of the new brigade been so unapproachable and superior in their bearing as they were yesterday afternoon. The reason of their pride and haughty unconcern for the common things of ordinary affairs of church and state was that the corner stone of a new annex to the fire station was well and truly laid at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, under the auspices of the Fire Firighters' Fraternity, Water Wagon Lodge No. 66. The impressive ceremony was performed by Chief Howard, Supreme Right Bower of the Hose Shuffler Pack, and the plaster for the occasion was supplied by Dr. D'A. King, honorary physician to the society. The chief wore the official white coat of immaculacy, and the black hat of silk, emblematic of high office in the societies. At the conclusion of the ceremony several guests were made honorary members of the society, an aggressive newsboy of the Examiner staff acting as the goat for the initiation proceedings.

There was an absolute and profound silence as the big gong in the fire hall was sounded for the ceremony, and after the incantation was tweened by the entire lodge and the top rung of the ladder struck with the big hammer by the Supreme Knocker the stone was placed in position. Copies of the three local papers, the list of names of the fire hall staff, coins of the realm, and a copy of the formal dedication of the new addition were placed in the receptacle of the stone.

The dedication declaration is as follows:—

"I, William Alexander Howard, of the city of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario, in the Dominion of Canada, fire chief, do hereby solemnly dedicate an addition to the fire station by the laying of the corner stone in the presence of His Worship the Mayor, and the honorable gentlemen of the Council of the corporation of the city of Peterborough.

his

Chief P.F.D.

(Witness) H. Morgan, chairman Fire Water and Light Committee.

A typewritten letter of regret at his inability to be present was received from Mayor Morrow, His Honor Judge Huycke, Ald. Graham, Morgan, Metheral and Batten, Dr. King and others were present at the ceremony.

At the conclusion of the important function Mr. Fred Roy, of the Roy Studio, took photographs of the group in attractive ensemble.

HOW COMMON CLAY BECOMES HARD ROCK

More Instances of Over-Classification on the Government Section of the Grand Trunk Pacific Brought Out in Mr. Lumsden's Evidence.

Ottawa, April 20.—Ten cases of over-classification on the Government section of the Grand Trunk Pacific as shown by Mr. Lumsden's evidence, have already been published as illustrations of the way clay and gravel are being classed as rock all along the line. Here are three further instances referred to by Mr. Lumsden:

Case No. 11.—The Government engineers returned this cutting as 1,330 yards of loose rock and 155 yards of common excavation. This moneys out at $697. Mr. Lumsden after seeing the work, said that it was all common excavation. If all the material removed were earth, the proper cost would be $311. Thus there was an overpayment of $385, or 123 per cent.

Case No. 12.—The country pays for 4,127 yards solid rock, 4,210 yards of loose rock, 4,326 yards of common excavation, or $9,204. On inspecting the work Mr. Lumsden placed the proper classification at 5 yards of solid rock, and one eighth of the rest loose rock. This would work out at $3,124. Thus there was an overpayment of $8,079, or 194 per cent.

Case No. 13.—The returns were 8,751 yards of solid rock, 4,741 yards of loose rock, 5,145 yards of common excavation; working out at $16,577. Mr. Lumsden's note was;—"Little or no rock; considerable loose rock, say one third; rest common excavation." Or, say, 100 yards solid rock, 6,212 yards loose rock, and 12,325 yards common excavation; working out at $5,844. Thus there was an overpayment of $10,733, or 183 per cent.

The thirteen cases so far examined work out thus;—

No. 1.—Proper cost, $4,420; actual cost, $14,636; overpayment, $10,218; or 230 per cent.

No. 2.—Proper cost, $1,735; actual cost, $7,711; overpayment, $5,978; or 344 per cent.

No. 3.—Proper cost, $1,060; actual cost, $4,198; overpayment, $3,138; or 300 per cent.

No. 4.—Proper cost, $1,616; actual cost $5,857; overpayment, $4,241; or 263 per cent.

No. 5.—Proper cost, $3,440; actual cost, $11,735; overpayment, $8,295; or 241 per cent.

No. 6.—Proper cost, $4,702; actual cost, $10,303; overpayment, $5,600; or 199 per cent.

No. 7.—Proper cost, $3,755; actual cost, $21,028; overpayment, $17,273; or 255 per cent.

No. 8.—Proper cost, $30,003; actual cost, $84,771; overpayment, $54,767; or 182 per cent.

No. 9.—Proper cost, $15,129; actual cost, $43,270; overpayment, $28,141; or 186 per cent.

No. 10.—Proper cost, $3,608; actual cost, $10,402; overpayment, $6,851; or 190 per cent.

No. 11.—Proper cost, $311; actual cost, $697; overpayment, $385; or $123 per cent.

No. 12.—Proper cost, $3,124; actual cost, $9,204, overpayment, $6,079; or 194 per cent.

No. 13.—Proper cost, $5,844; actual cost, $10,577; overpayment, $10,733; or 183 per cent.

On the whole thirteen cases the figures are;—Proper cost, $81,747; actual cost, $243,450; overpayment, $108,171; or almost Exactly 200 per cent. That is, the work cost thrice the proper figure.

THEATRICAL

The Holy City

The Bennett production, "The Holy City," with Mr. Bennett in the dual roles of John the Baptist and Judas, was presented at the Grand last night to a large audience, who enjoyed the performance throughout. The play deals with the events leading up to the crucifixion and resurrection. Mr. Bennett was excellent in his portrayal of John the Baptist and Judas Iscariot and his company give him good support. The work of Ray Forrester as Longinus, a centurion, was also worthy of mention. The costumes and scenes were in keeping with the time and customs of the people and these added much to the enjoyment of the performance.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed byits correspondents

The Chimes Campaign

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The accompanying letter from Hon. Geo. A. Cox enclosing his cheque for $300, speaks for itself. This most generous act and the kindly sentiments expressed will go far towards deepening the warm feelings entertained by Peterborough citizens for one whose steady interest in the welfare of the city and whose private and public benefactions are already so widely known and appreciated.

The committee in charge of this enterprise do not feel, however, like allowing Mr. Cox's gift to take the place of what might otherwise be done by ourselves. On all sides friends and subscribers urge us for the sake of the city to "get the very best and only the best bells which can be procured." This is what we ourselves both desire and are determined to accomplish in so far as we are enabled to do so.

Accordingly, though this unexpected donation brings us within $300 of the amount originally aimed at, still, with the help of the public, we shall strive to get the $1,550 subscribed in Peterborough, and reserve Mr. Cox's gift either for a higher class set of chimes (if that is at all possible to get) or for another bell to increase the range.

Canvassing is, of course, very hard and unpleasant work which we all dislike, though in this case we are cheered by the evident desire of citizens to help the scheme forward on public grounds in spite of the many obligations resting on them. It is something to have such a united feeling prevalent.

As we cannot reach everyone, and as the help of everybody is needed to bring this enterprise to a conclusion satisfactory to all citizens we have placed a subscription list at Coleman Bros'. store and Grafton & Co's. through which further help may be given. Amounts of $5 and under should be paid in cash to save expense of collection.

With continued gratitude to every single supporter and like hope that all other citizens may find enjoyment in the music of the chimes.

Yours, etc.,
J. C. DAVIDSON.

P.S.—We expect to purchase the chimes through a representative committee of subscribers and one of our citizens has agreed to personally interview the English manufacturers. Every precaution will be taken to prevent public disappointment.

The letter from Senator Cox is as follows:—

April 20th, 1910.

Rev. J. C. Davidson,
"The Rectory," Peterborough, Ont.:

My Dear Mr. Davidson,—I am in receipt of your esteemed favor of the 14th instant. I shall be quite pleased to assist in your efforts to place a set of tubular chimes in St. John's tower, in the good city that has so many pleasant recollections for me and have pleasure in handing you herewith my cheque for $300.00 to aid in that desirable work. I feel sure you will have no difficulty in raising the necessary amount and there will, therefore, be no reason for me withholding my subscription until the final amount is raised, but if you desire to have it made conditional in that way you can do so and hand it in when the necessary additional $1,250.00 has been subscribed.

I quite realize, appreciate and congratulate you upon the part you have taken in the kindly feeling that prevails among the different Christian churches in Peterborough, which I hope may long continue.

Yours very truly,
GEO. A. COX.

Mr. Nugent, the new chef at Peterborough Lunch, 330 George-st., is thoroughly competent and everything will be served in very best style. Individual dining rooms at entrance. 6d

THE PASSING OF TOMMY LONGBOAT AS A RUNNER

Hamilton, April 21.—Tommy Longboat's day is done. This was practically admitted yesterday by the Indian's manager, Sol Mints, when he stated that he did not know when Longboat would run again. "Just at present Tom is laid up with a bad leg," remarked Sol. "A few days ago he hopped on his bike and set off for Hamilton. On the way he had a bad accident, and arrived at my place with a badly swollen ankle, which instead of getting better has grown worse and has the Indian laid up in the house. It will be some time before the ankle is sound again, and then it's just a question as to whether he will run or not.

"You know," continued Sol, "the Indian has done pretty well financially, but then he has not gathered in one-tenth what he could have. Why, I have turned down offer after offer for engagements, and only the other day had to refuse a grand offer and big guarantee to take Tom to Boston run a pro race there after the Boston Marathon, for which course Tom holds the record."

While he wouldn't admit that the Indian was practically through as a runner, Sol intimated enough to assure his listeners that this was so, while at the same time he gave it as his opinion that the pro game was just about petered out.

TOO MUCH POT HUNTING WITH THE CURLERS

Some interesting discussion arose at the semi-annual meeting of the Ontario Curling Association at Toronto. The financial report regretted that friendly games had given way almost entirely to cup competitions. The meeting agreed with this point, and it was remarked that the only thing that shut off the prize hunting in Toronto particularly and in other centres as well was lack of ice. Good fellowship was the aim of curling, not prizes.

Mr. Brunton suggested that it might be worth considering to insist upon clubs holding bonspiels to secure a permit.

Col. Mackenzie thought pot hunting at bonspiels was at the bottom of most of the defaults in the District Cup.

Dr. Burns thought that the clubs ought to play home and home friendly games to overcome this evil, each playing with each other. The scheme worked out in hockey, and it should in curling, for the Tankard and other competitions.

CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE TO MEET

Important Meeting at the Y.M.C.A., To-morrow Evening at Eight O'clock

An important meeting of the City Baseball League will be held at the Y.M.C.A. to-morrow evening at eight o'clock sharp. Last night the committee appointed to draft a constitution for the league met, and accomplished this work. The constitution and a proposition from the Riverside Park Company will be submitted at the meeting. Representatives of the clubs interested are asked to be present sharp on time.

RUNNING

Yesterday's Toronto Star says:—As was predicted the other day, Fred Simpson, the Peterborough Indian, has sent in his entry for the 20-mile race at the Island May 7. Simpson writes J. J. McCaffery that he is in excellent shape, and would be ready to make even the top-notchers step when he met with them here. Fred, when he is right is no slouch.

Percy Sellen, the little Toronto runner, entered to-day. He has been resting since the Polo Grounds Marathon, but resumed training to-day for a 15-mile race at Buffalo against all the cracks. From Buffalo he will come on to Toronto for the 20-mile race. He says he can do 20 miles and get a slice of the money anyhow. Sellen is in good shape right now.

SWINDLING THE P.M.G.

Seventy Years Ago In England M.P.'s Cheated the Mails.

If Messrs. Asquith, Balfour, Lloyd-George, Redmond, and Co., had lived round about the eighteen-thirties, they would have been able to send all their letters through the post for nothing. So could the member for East St. Pancras, or for the Shetland and Orkney Isles; for this was a privilege extended to any and every gentleman entitled to place after his name the two magical letters M. and P. All they had to do was to sign their names upon the envelopes, and they had free passports.

These were the days when Mr. John Bate, of the Worshipful City of Birmingham, was serving as an assistant in the postoffice at Bath. A young man of seventeen, he rode down from Birmingham to Bath in a stage coach, in true Dickensian style, on a cold day, and the box-seat beside the driver, and he would have found some difficulty in keeping awake during the twelve-hour journey had it not been for anticipation. For he was on his way to fill a postoffice appointment, which he had secured through the instrumentality of Lord Lichfield—all postoffice appointments went by favor in those days—and the result of this system he beheld when he arrived in Bath, and found himself thrown among a set of "officials" who could, most of them, scarcely write, and could certainly not spell accurately. The senior clerk, for instance, was the former head-butler of some peer for whose service he had grown too old.

Subsequently, Mr. Bate graduated to the G.P.O. in London, and thence to Kidderminster, where he acted as postmaster for the "princely" salary of $600 a year. And now, an old man of eighty-eight, he sits up in his little room in Earl's Court, revolving the many wonderful things he saw in what are known as "the good old days." No one is a greater authority on the postoffice as it was than Mr. Bate, and he has many an interesting story of his early experiences to relate.

"Members of Parliament in those days weren't half as honest as they make themselves out to be in this twentieth century," Mr. Bate informed a representative of Answers, with a chuckle. "As you know, votes then had to be bought with more than promises, and this little postoffice system helped them considerably. The hon. member for the Blank Division of Dashshire would think nothing of making a practice of receiving regularly mysterious little packages from Brown and Jones and Robinson. These contained unstamped letters, written by his constituents. Then the "honorable" member would calmly write his own signature on each envelope, and thus contrive to swindle one of the very departments over which his own Government was supposed to keep control!

"Postoffice corruption was especially common in those days in connection with the money order department. Money order forms were issued to postmasters without numbers or the name of the town being printed thereon. The postmark stamp of the office of issue and the number of the order written in, with the postmaster's signature, was the only credential, with the letter of advice to the postmaster of the office where payment was to be made. Postmasters only made returns of orders issued and paid daily to the G.P.O. once a quarter, and gross irregularities and frauds were the result.

"Suppose, for instance, a poor man wanted to remit a sum of money to any part of the country. He would write his letter previous to obtaining the order, and then proceed to the postoffice, pay his money, and receive the order, which he enclosed on the spot. Then, when the letter was innocently posted, it was a common thing for the postmaster or clerk calmly to take it out of the box again, extract the order, and thus come out a clear gainer of its value, while no proof was deducible that it had ever been sold at all! There were some pickings to which postmasters were legally entitled, such as the dues on any letter posted in their own town to any other resident in the same town; but this, of course, was not among them."

A Quick-Change Artist.

Sixty seconds. That is the time it takes Mr. H. B. Irving to transform himself from Dr. Jekyll to Mr. Hyde in his wonderful impersonation of the dual role at the Queen's Theatre, London. And what a transformation it is! One moment Mr. Irving is seen in immaculate evening dress—calm, dignified, and impressive as a learned doctor; and the next moment he is prowling round the stage—a hideous, Quilp-like creature, the very picture of evil. How is it done?

"It is said you use some wonderful trick costumes, Mr. Irving," the writer remarked during the course of an interview. The famous actor smiled. "Nothing of the sort," he replied. "I certainly did have a number of trick costumes and wigs made, but they did not satisfy me. No; I simply depend upon the deftness of my dresser and myself to effect the change."

Didn't Mind the Shells.

It is not generally known that Gen. R. S. S. Baden-Powell, whose Boy Scouts are causing so much interest just now, is a very clever artist, and he has a fine collection of pictures which he has painted and drawn himself.

Many of these are studies of South African life, and one of the quaintest depicts a native woman, with a baby strapped on to her back, and her head bent almost to the ground, who is supposed to be washing clothes in a pool of water while lyddite shells are bursting all around her. This clever picture has the following superscription:

"Extract from the diary of a baby in Mafeking, 1900: 'It isn't so much the shells I object to, as this everlasting standing on one's head while mother does the washing'."

No Seat, No Fares.

Trenton, N.J., April 21.—Trenton's new "no seat no fare" ordinance has already worked wonders in the way of improved trolley service, although it only went into effect on Tuesday. The company ran more cars during the rush hours yesterday than ever before, as it did not want to face heavy fines, the new ordinance providing that whenever the corporation fails to provide a seat for passengeres during rush hours it is liable to a penalty of $50 for each complaint.

Although there were numerous crowded cars during rush hours yesterday no complaint was made because the public realized the company was doing everything in its power to obey the provisions of the ordinance. However, a large number rode free.

"Reaches the innermost recesses of the throat, nose, bronchial tubes, and lungs.

"Alleviates chest soreness.

"Stops coughing instantly.

"Prevents bronchial irritations.

"Relieves clogged nostrils.

"Has proven itself a cure for weak lungs, loss of voice, speakers' sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, coughs, colds, and winter ills."

Catarrhozone is unquestionably the world's greatest breathable cold, cough, and catarrh medicine, and being free from all drowsy drugs, entirely safe for children and old folks; it makes an ideal family remedy. ROADS IN CHINA.

They Are Narrow and Crooked and Edged With Ditches.

The Chinese road is private property, a strip taken from somebody's land. This is done much against the will of the owner, since he not only loses the use of it, but also still has to pay taxes on it.

One consequence is that it is wide enough for only one vehicle, and carts can pass one another only by trespassing on the cultivated land. To prevent this the farmers dig deep ditches by the roadside. As the surface wears away and the dust blown off it gradually grows lower, and after awhile it becomes a drain for the surrounding fields. A current forms in the rainy season, which still further hollows it out, and thus has arisen the proverb that a road a thousand years old becomes a river.

Those whose lands are used for roads naturally prefer to have the roads run along the edge of their farms instead of cutting across them, and this accounts for the fact that Chinese roads are often so crooked that one may have to go a considerable distance to reach a place that is in reality but a few miles away. This always interests the stranger.

Only Pursuing His Profession.

A Brooklyn magistrate recently had four darkies who were caught in a gambling raid before him. The first of the lot to be brought to the bar was an undersized man, with a comical face as black as night. The dialogue between the magistrate and the prisoner created some merriment in the court.

"What is your name?" inquired the magistrate sternly.

"Mah name's Smiff," replied the darky.

"What is your profession?"

"I's a locksmiff by trade, sah."

"What were you doing when the police broke into the room last night?"

"Judge, I was pursuin' mah profesion. I was makin' a bolt for the door."

"Officer," said the magistrate, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "lock Smith up."

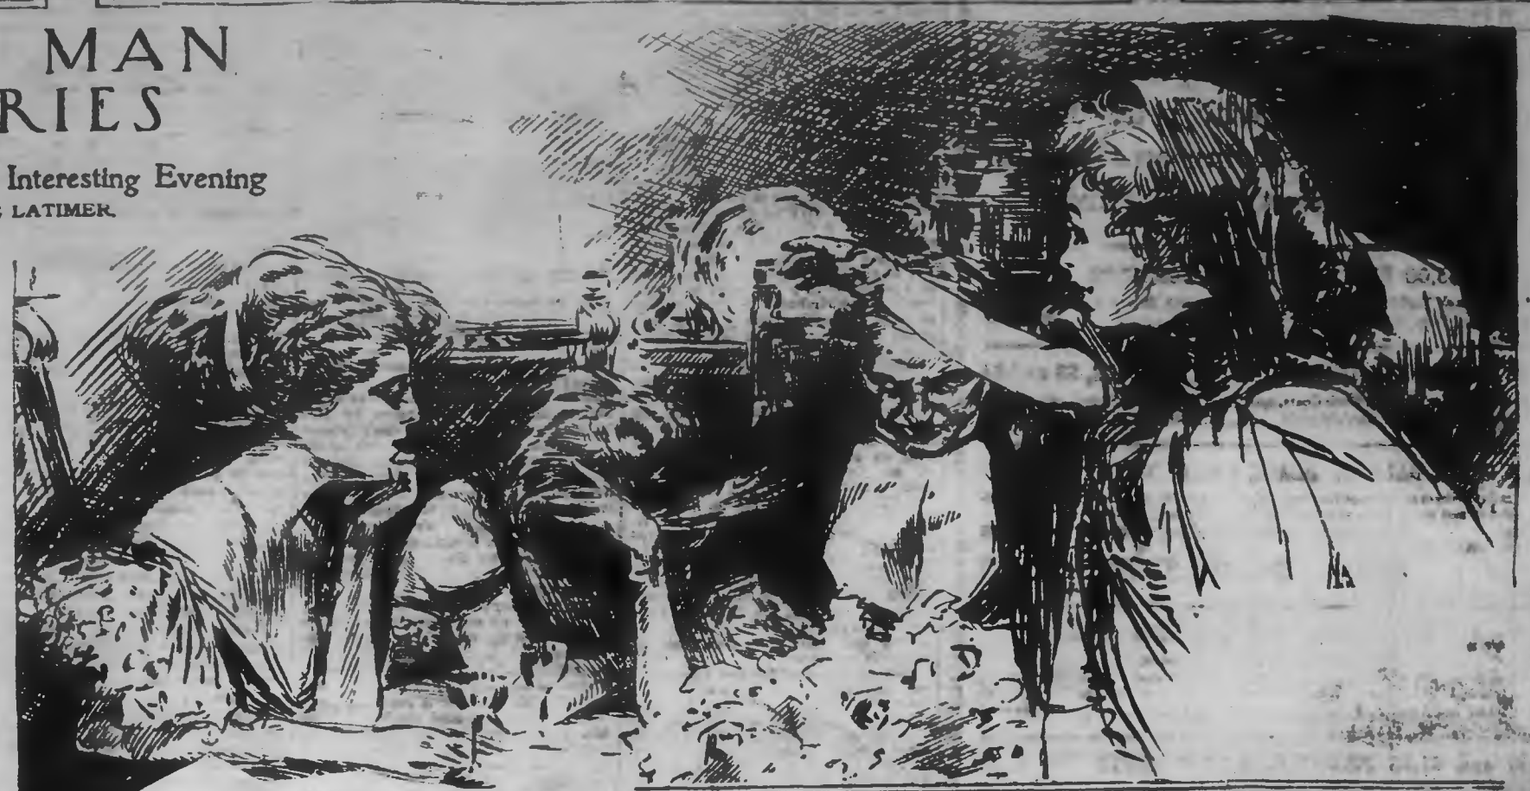
SAND MAN STORIES

Johnny Spends an Interesting Evening

BY ALICE LATIMER.



Johnny Continued to Sprinkle Sand Softly Over Her

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

JOHNNY GAY was feeling particularly wide awake one evening when Mr. Sandman appeared and began throwing dust in his eyes. You have all heard of Mr. Sandman and know how he goes around and sprinkles a queer sort of dust on people's eyes, so that, no matter how much they want to sit up, their heads will bob and their eyes will close, and it is necessary for them to be sent to bed.

"Dear me," said Johnny crossly, "I do wish you'd go away, Mr. Sandman."

In a moment the sand was all out of his eyes, and the dark, soft shadow which had been bending over him and which he knew had been Mr. Sandman had completely vanished. But to his astonishment he had left something behind him. Draped over the foot of the bed was the long, dark cloak the Sandman always wore, and on the floor Johnny saw a long, black cloth bag, the sort of a bag which some lawyers use, only larger. It seemed to be almost half filled, and Johnny jumped quickly out of bed and thrust his hand into it. He drew out a handful of fine grained material, dark, soft gray in color and in quality very much like fine sugar. Yes, there was no doubt about it, the Sandman had left his bag behind him.

Johnny gasped triumphantly. "Now," he said, "it's my turn for fun. How would you like to be the Sandman, Mr Johnny? Well, I'd like it. I'm tired of having that old fellow play all his tricks on me. It's time the grown up folks had a chance to see what it's like. They're always so pleased when the old fellow begins to throw dust in my eyes."

Johnny carefully wrapped himself in the Sandman's cloak. It was very long for him and wide as well, but he overcame that difficulty by throwing the ends of the cloak over his shoulders and around his neck. There was a hood on his cloak and he put that up over his head. Then he threw the bag over one shoulder and started out. He caught a glimpse of himself in the mirror as he passed and he looked so strange and mysterious that it quite startled him.

Johnny went first down stairs to the kitchen. There was Ellen, the cook, and Annie, the maid, and the particular policeman who was very fond of Annie and of whom Annie was very fond in return. It looked very pleasant in the kitchen. Ellen and Annie and the policeman were having a bit of supper and a great deal of fun over it.

Johnny stepped in quietly, for he did not know that the cloak made him practically invisible. Instead of looking like a boy in a black cloak he seemed to the persons in the kitchen simply like a dark, soft cloud which had come across the light, so that everything grew dull and rather confused looking.

It was not quite as easy to throw the sand into people's eyes as Johnny had supposed it would be. The Sandman in his nightly visits had always done it very gracefully, like a person who is sowing grain in the old fashioned way.

Johnny took out a huge fistful of the sleepy stuff and cast it in the direction of Ellen, Annie and the policeman, who were all sitting around one end of the kitchen table, so that he thought he could make them all sleepy at once.

The sand struck the policeman and the cook, but not a bit of it went into Annie's eyes.

"Mercy upon us," cried Annie, looking at the policeman, "what's come to you, Jim, you're falling asleep!"

But Jim, who was the policeman, said nothing. Instead his head nodded further and further forward on the table, and presently he was sound asleep.

"Wake up!" cried Annie. "You'll be missed from the post. It's time that you go back now."

But Jim wouldn't wake up. He merely began a mild, steady snoring which didn't stop even when Annie began to shake him.

"Do help me, Ellen!" cried Annie, and she turned to the cook for help.

To her astonishment she found that Ellen, too, was sound asleep and was also beginning to snore loudly.

"Mercy upon us," cried Annie, "what's come to them both! Did you ever see such sleepyheads? And us with a dinner party on, too. I don't know what will happen if Mrs. Gay finds out the cook is asleep."

Just then the upstairs bell rang and Annie ran to answer it. Johnny crept softly along back of her.

In the dining room there was a great deal of laughter and conversation. Johnny looked at the dinner party rather resentfully, because they were having strawberry mousse for dessert, a dish of which he was particularly fond. "And I haven't had a bit of strawberry mousse for days and weeks," he thought; "not since I was ten."

There was a niche between the windows into which he fitted nicely. The long portieres entirely concealed him, even if the cloak hadn't been altogether a disguise.

Johnny looked around him to see who the guests were.

Old Colonel Brown was gobbling very much. He had a much larger portion of strawberry mousse than any of the others and it made Johnny feel very cross to see how he was gobbling it. He was very red in the face.

"He'll choke if I don't stop him," said Johnny.

He drew out a handful of the sand and, creeping closer to the Colonel, opened his hand and let the soft dust sprinkle down over his eyes. The Colonel began to yawn—such large yawns Johnny had never seen. They were perfectly prodigious.

Johnny's mother, Mrs. Gay, looked a little annoyed. She talked faster than she usually did, and Johnny thought her laugh sounded louder and sharper, somehow, than he had ever noticed it being. He felt that his mamma was not altogether enjoying herself.

Colonel Brown yawned more than ever and then he began to nod. He nodded more than ever and then began to snore. It was a louder snore than the policeman's and not so loud as the cook's. Johnny's mother talked louder and faster than ever, and then Johnny's father, who was a very quiet man usually, began to talk loud and fast, too, and to tell a good many jokes. Johnny had never heard his father tell jokes before.

It seemed to Johnny that it would be rather good fun to send his father to sleep. So he drew off at the proper angle and sent a light shower of the sand in his father's direction. He had heard his father say that very morning that he hadn't been able to sleep for a week and he looked very tired and worried. "I will just give him a nice nap," said Johnny.

But the first shower of sand didn't seem to affect his father. He only rubbed his eyes a little in a surprised way and then went on eating and talking and laughing very hard and making jokes, occasionally opening his eyes unusually wide and looking very much surprised.

Then Johnny threw another handful of sand at him, and this time he had the satisfaction of seeing his father trying to stifle a yawn behind his hand. There were other yawns, too, but in between his father would go on talking and laughing as hard as ever, looking, however, a little dazed as if he didn't know what it was all about.

Then Johnny tried a third time, and this time he was absolutely successful. His father slid quietly down in his chair and fell sound asleep. There was no snoring, no nodding. It was just the soundest possible sleep that anybody could have.

After this Johnny threw sand at all the other guests in turn. It was great fun to watch them stop eating their strawberry mousse and then begin to yawn and look surprised, and then to nod and start up again with a glance around to see if anybody had noticed; and then to see them nod some more and finally go quite to sleep sitting in their chairs.

Some of the guests sat up quite straight, sleeping soundly and looking perfectly respectable. Others fell over sideways on their table companions, and one young lady toppled over on the table so that the aigrette in her hair almost went into the candle.

Meanwhile Johnny couldn't help noticing that his mother was being more and more annoyed all the time.

"Now I'll have to send mamma to sleep," he said.

So he drew off and aimed a handful of sand at his mamma.

"Sleepy time, dear," he said, because that is what his mamma always said to him.

"No, I'm not a bit sleepy," said his mamma, which was just exactly what Johnny always said to her.

But Johnny continued to sprinkle sand softly over her.

"No, I won't go to sleep at all," cried his mamma, who was beginning to nod a little, in spite of her determination.

"You are the worst sleepyheads I have ever seen," she declared roundly, looking around on her assembled guests. "You are perfectly horrid;" and with this remark she snatched hold of her end of the table cloth and pulled it completely off, sending all the dishes to the floor with such a tremendous racket that the sleeping guests jumped to their feet in startled horror.

Johnny waited only a minute to enjoy the catastrophe and then he ran hastily back to bed. He put the sandman's cloak and bag beside him on a chair, but they had entirely disappeared next day, and neither his mamma nor Annie, who took care of the room, would admit that they had seen anything of them.

THE YOKE AND COLLAR.

AN excellent means of keeping a white collar from becoming soiled by the fur neckpiece is to tie on a piece of white or black tulle under the coat. With a transparent collar of net, chiffon or lace the piece of malline will be much prettier than any heavier silk or knotted scarf, and will answer the purpose quite as well. A single width of malline, or even half a width, is sufficient if placed twice about the collar, crossed at back, with the two ends slipped inside the revers in front.

This net will be practically invisible if put on neatly, and can be quickly and easily slipped off before the jacket is removed. If a black fur piece is worn, black malline is just as good to use as white, as it is one of the few black fabrics from which the dye does not rub off soiled if becomes wet. Waterproof tulle is a better purchase than the ordinary malline. It is a little more expensive, but is far more durable.

When time comes to lay the furs away for another winter then a narrow band of duck or piqué should be basted on, buttoned inside every coat collar to keep the white neck band clean and neat. If this is done the silk revers will be found not to cut through nearly as much as when the coat collar rubs directly against the collar of the waist.

THE FIRST WOODEN LEG IN THE ARCTIC.

IN the year 1830, and that is just eighty years ago, a ship from England called the Victory was trying to find the Northwest Passage, or the way from the Atlantic to the Pacific, amid the ice at the top of North America.

It was a hard winter that came early on this ship, and they reached a place never before noted on any maps, so they concluded they had discovered a new land, and named it Boothia Felix, after a person in England who had helped fit out the expedition. The harbor that sheltered their ship they called Felix, or Happy Harbor. The captain of the Victory was Sir James Ross, a famous English seaman, who had before been in these lonely Arctic regions seeking the Northwest Passage. With him was his son, also an Arctic voyager. When they found themselves shut in by the ice, where they would have to stay at least five months, they made the ship secure and then some of them began to explore, making trips about the ship for short distances in one direction and another. On the second or third of these trips, in a direction they had never before taken, they saw a little village of snow houses, and from it Eskimos came with their bows bent and spears ready. Now.

They made these people understand they would not hurt them, and soon they were looking at each other, the Eskimos with wonder, for they had never seen a white man before, though they had heard of them.

The next day they came to the ship. Imagine a lot of children allowed to visit a strange airship that had come down from they did not know where, and seeing things they had never seen and could not imagine the use of, and you will have some idea of how those simple savage people felt and wondered at all they saw. When the captain's son shot off a gun they ran from the sound and then asked what it said. Most of these Eskimos were small, but the captains noticed one or two taller than the rest. The next day they came again, bringing women and children with them. After this party came an Eskimo drawing some one [illegible]. The man who drew the sled was short, and he had on his sled a very large man who could not walk. His leg had been bitten off a year or two before just below his knee by a bear.

When they reached the ship the other Eskim helped the lame man up to the deck. Captain Ross and his son received him kindly and showed him all the interesting things the others had seen.

The lame man was called Tullunahe. He was very large and stout. He was also disguised and bright looking. He understood quickly most that was said to him, and soon [illegible] wooden leg for him. It was [illegible] Tullunahe knew [illegible] measuring [illegible]

When they sent their visitors away they gave each one something. needles for the women, pieces of broken knives and beads were riches indeed. They were given bread and plum pudding to eat. They tasted them, but did not like them. They did not like tea to sip and made faces at beer. When one was of almost the only thing he could do, not being able to [illegible] for him and [illegible] the ship's carpenter, and by the advice of the doctor, [illegible] the [illegible] with the like of [illegible] rope yarn they did not value, for they [illegible] wanted, the meat and hide of the seals they killed—but needles and buttons and knives and beads were riches indeed. They were given bread and plum pudding to eat. They tasted them, but did not like them. They did not like tea to sip and made faces at beer. When one was given like jewels and gold. Thread and [illegible] found all the kind of thread they [illegible] with a liking as if it had been the most delicious thing in the world.

FORBIDDEN TO SPEAK IN METHODIST CHURCH

Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal Said to Have Forced Judge Lemieux and Dr. Dube to Withdraw From Engagement to Speak at Protestant Temperance Meeting

A Montreal special to the Toronto Globe says:—Considerable excitement has been caused here by the unusual action of Archbishop Bruchesi in forbidding Judge Lemieux, of Quebec, to speak on Sunday night at the temperance meeting held at St. James' Methodist church. Judge Lemieux and Dr. Dube, of Montreal, were advertised as speakers at this meeting, which was of a purely non-sectarian character, and dealt only with anti-saloon matters, in pursuance of a campaign in which Archbishop Bruchesi has been one of the most active leaders, and in view of this, great surprise was felt at the drastic action taken by His Grace.

It is supposed that the action of Archbishop Bruchesi has been dictated by the recent events at Rome with ex-President Roosevelt and Mr. Fairbanks. It is considered that His Grace reasoned that if, after these painful episodes at Rome, the cables should inform the Vatican that a Roman Catholic Judge of the Quebec Superior Court, had appeared in a Methodist temple on a Sunday evening at a meeting presided over by a Methodist minister, the Holy Father, and still more the alert Merry Del Val, would have a poor idea of the discipline maintained by Archbishop Bruchesi in this ultra-Catholic diocese of Montreal.

It appears that Archbishop Bruchesi did not know of Judge Lemieux's engagement to speak at the Methodist church until Saturday, and he then kept the wires hot between here and Archbishop Begin at Quebec, until he had the latter's command that Judge Lemieux should not fulfil his engagement, the Judge residing within the spiritual domain of Quebec.

The whole affair has caused great feeling amongst the Methodists and other Protestant circles in this city, and it is likely that the incident is by no means closed, and that it will not prove of great assistance to the temperance cause.

DESPOILING INDIANS FOR BENEFIT OF SPECULATORS

Greedy Liberals Gobble up the Lands Reserved for These Unfortunate Wards of the Nation.

(The Toronto News.)

Mr. Oliver scarcely can claim to have done his duty by the St. Peter's band of Indians. Originally the tribes of which it is composed roamed over practically the whole of what is now the Province of Manitoba. Later they defended the Selkirk settlers against hostile tribes. In 1871 these tribes came together under one chief upon a Government reserve of 55,000 acres, stretching for four miles on either side of the Red River. This reserve consisted of excellent black loam, well watered by two tributaries of the larger stream. It abutted Sir William Van Horne's farm, marched with the town limits of Selkirk, and at its nearest point approached to within twenty miles of Winnipeg. With schools and churches in their midst these aborigines progressed in civilization and general intelligence. From the products of their land they prospered, and the Government agents reported that they dressed well, and lived in comfortably-furnished homes.

But they were not to be allowed to enjoy even this small portion of their originally vast domain. Greedy white men coveted their rich land, and set about securing possession. Negotiations began in 1906, and there is evidence that in 1907 a chief of the band, with some of his councillors, were bribed to facilitate a surrender of the reserve. The Indian Act goes far to protect the rights of the Indians. It provides that a band may not surrender its lands except upon a clear majority vote of its male members. The St. Peter's band contains two hundred and eighty-nine such voters. On one day's notice two-hundred and five of these were assembled in a small room. The proposal of surrender was incompletely explained in English. A representative of the Department told them that he had $5,000 in a bag, part of which would be distributed if they agreed to the proposal. Thus a soap majority of seven votes of the two hundred and five was secured.

Then a group of speculators arrived on the scene. A sale of the land was held in mid-winter, and the result is that to-day most of the old reserve has passed into the hands of half a dozen white men, who paid an average of about $5.60 an acre for it. An Opposition member declared that, if the property had belonged to Mr. Oliver's personal estate, he would not have taken $50 an acre for it. Most of the sale money was dissipated for legal or other expenses, and the net result of the whole transaction is clear from the disposal of a property worth at least $1,000,000 the Indians have got, perhaps, $50,000. They have been tricked out of a fine estate, and moved into the wilderness north of Lake Winnipeg.

This is the case for the Opposition and the Indians, as made out in the House by Messrs. Bradbury, Crothers, Middlebro and Meighen. During the delivery of the charges the Government benches remained almost empty, Mr. Fielding read his newspaper, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier chatted with one or two of his followers. When a vote of censure was moved against the Ministry, Liberal members who had not bothered listening to the debate were rushed into the Commons. In supporting the action of the Department many voted without being informed of the issue. Parliamentary legislation on the statute books regards the Indians as children in the care of the Government. In this instance the guardians seem to have proven themselves recreant to their charge. Instead of protecting its wards, the Department of the Interior appears to have assisted in robbing them. There is a possibility that the Attorney-General of Manitoba may utilize the machinery of the Provincial courts in an effort to obtain restitution for the despoiled aborigines.

RURAL FREE MAIL DELIVERY

Mr. J. E. Armstrong Pleads for Its Extension in Canada

Ottawa, April 18.—In the House of Commons, Mr. J. E. Armstrong brought up the subject of free rural mail delivery. The present patry system, he said, "merely leads to the creation of contention and strife in the rural districts." The mails are delivered only on existing mail or stage routes and only in certain portions of the country. "But," he asked, "have not the people on the other concessions just as good a right to the advantages of the rural free mail delivery as those residing on existing mail or stage routes? Why should the men on these routes have their farms increased in value, as they undoubtedly are, by their enjoyment of the advantages that come from the delivery of the mails at their very door, and the people who live a mile or so away, perhaps in a more thickly settled portion of the country, be deprived of these advantages?"

Mr. Armstrong went on to note the disadvantages under which the farmers now labor. "I want," he said, "to call attention to the fact that the time has come in some of the older provinces when the population is decreasing yearly instead of increasing in the rural districts. Take the Province of Ontario; the Deputy Minister of Agriculture of that Province made the statement that while in 1889 the population was 1,108,874, in 1909 it was only 1,047,018, showing a reduction of 61,856. The cities have increased in number but not the rural districts, and many people from the rural districts have gone to the Northwest where they can get the advantages which they do not enjoy in the older provinces, and which advantages are a great inducement to people to remain on their farms."

"The day is at hand," he continued, "when we must give to the people in the rural districts every advantage to induce them to remain on the land—not only telephones and electric cars, free mail delivery at their doors. The expense of running a farm is far in excess of what it was years ago, and it takes a lot of money to get mails, especially when wages are so high as they are at present. Rural free mail delivery will bring the farms and rural communities in closer connection with commercial centres. It encourages the improvement of country roads, and by making rural life more attractive it stimulates agriculture. It has been the means of increasing the value of farm lands."

MILLER AND AYLESWORTH

Enemy of Race-Track Gambling Says That Minister of Justice Behaved Treacherously to Him

Ottawa, April 19.—One result of the defeat of the Miller bill to suppress gambling on race tracks has been an extraordinarily bitter attack by Mr. Miller on Mr. Aylesworth, the Minister of Justice. Mr. Miller's charge in effect is that Mr. Aylesworth assured him that the bill was satisfactorily drafted, and that when it came up in the House he assured the House that it was badly drafted. "He advised me in one way when I coonsulted him, and has advised the House in an entirely different way," was Mr. Miller's final remark.

The member for South Grey brought the matter up on a question of privilege, resenting the statement by Mr. Aylesworth in debating the bill that he (Mr. Miller) had quoted a letter which he had not expected to see quoted. Mr. Miller made it perfectly clear that he had procured the letter from Mr. Aylesworth for the express purpose of using it, and he declared that he had warned Mr. Aylesworth of his purpose.

"I have a great deal to complain of, I think," he said, "as to the treatment of the Minister of Justice in connection with this whole matter. Having discussed it with him and he having made the statement that he did make, and which it would perhaps take too much of the time of the House to discuss, I do say that if I had used the Minister of Justice as he has used me in this matter, I would have thought that I had struck below the belt and that I had not acted either honestly or honorably. That is a plain statement to make but if the Minister of Justice demands of me to make the fullest possible detailed explanation of my words I am ready to do so at any time either in the House or outside of it."

Mr. Aylesworth protested that he had not meant to impute dishonorable conduct to Mr. Miller and the member for South Grey retorted by charging the Minister with double dealing. His objection to the bill had been that it would interfere with private betting. Mr. Miller submitted the bill to him and the Minister said:—"I do not think it can be improved on, for the purpose for which it is intended. But," said Miller, "I took the fullest care at all times to tell the Minister of Justice that it was not the desire of the promoters of the bill to in any way interfere with private betting. Knowing that that was not the intention, he suggested that the bill could not be improved upon for the purpose for which it was intended. I said to the Minister of Justice: 'If this bill, in your opinion, would affect the man who makes a private bet, I would like you to suggest any language that that you can suggest, that would leave out the private bettor and exempt him.' He said: 'I cannot suggest any language that would be an improvement on the bill as it is drawn in that respect.' Afterwards, I myself, fearing the Minister of Justice might make some further objections to the bill in that regard, that 'was interfering with private betting, drafted a clause and submitted it to him, and as he in his own writing, amended it in order, as he thought, to fit the case. I said: 'Will the amendment, as you have changed it, fill the bill, and exempt the private bettor' He said, 'I think it will.' The Minister of Justice then must have known that that was my intention. The Minister of Justice looked carefully over the bill. He said that clause 235 did not in any way interfere with the private bettor, but that it would with the recording or registering of a private bet."

And in conclusion Mr. Miller repeated that Mr. Aylesworth had said one thing to him and another thing to the House.

It need only be added that Mr. Miller is a devoted Liberal.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE COOK AND THE CRITIC.

A Problem Worthy the Attention of All Earnest Women.

It always awakens a sort of amused wonderment in me, says Marietta Ladd in Table Talk, when I hear learned men, especially bishops, tell schoolgirls that in order to secure husbands they must learn to be good cooks. Just as though a man ever thinks seriously of cooking when he is really and truly in love! The idea is absurd. Yet it is undeniable that a large proportion of unhappy marriages result from an imperfect knowledge of the sublime art of cookery on the part of the wife. All sensible women know that their power and influence in the home is inseparable from their practical ability to prepare healthful and appetizing foods for those under their charge. The problem of our time is to increase the number of careful and intelligent cooks and so lift the race on to a higher plane of life.

It is clear to me that this problem, worthy as it is of the attention of all earnest women, cannot be satisfactorily solved by educating women alone. Man is an important factor in the home, and it is as much the business of a man to know what foods are helpful and what harmful as it is a woman's. In the stress of modern business life it is unreasonable to expect a married man to do actual cooking. If he does it some part of his work outside the home must suffer. But if he cannot do work he can always criticise. He should therefore be taught how to criticise intelligently in such a way as to help his wife and not try her temper to its utmost limits.

Domestic unhappiness usually arises in one of two ways—either the wife is incompetent and/or a natural consequence ultra sensitive to criticism or the wife is really a good cook, but her husband has been spoiled and rendered bearish by living at good hotels and restaurants where "many hands make light work."

There is only one remedy for this state of affairs. Boys and girls must learn cookery side by side, as they learn other necessary knowledge. The boy who knows what to eat and how to help, not hinder, digestion in the kitchen will be a kind and helpful critic to his wife. The wife who knows the science and art of cookery will consult her husband's taste and blend it with her own, knowing that the masculine point of view in cookery, as in all else, is a valuable corrective of the feminine.

Make Your Toilet Articles.

Any girl can have the very best toilet articles if she will make them herself, and many of them offered for sale at the stores will often do a permanent injury to a delicate skin. Should a lotion be needed for perspiration stir one ounce of hydrate of chloral in one pint of soft boiled water and keep in a bottle. Apply with soft old linen and allow the lotion to dry on the skin. To keep the hands in good condition keep a preparation of vinegar and cornmeal ready for use and after washing clothes or doing any work that soils the hands wash them in warm suds, rub the hands well with the cornmeal mixture, then dry and rub a few drops of honey and water well into the skin. An excellent and safe face powder is made by sifting half a pound of pure rice powder eight or ten times and then adding a few drops of oil of rose and a little carmine if you want the powder tinted. One of the best cucumber creams is made by cutting up two large cucumbers into half a cupful of water and allowing them to simmer for half an hour; then strain, add a cupful of boiling water, ten grains of powdered borax and enough tincture of benzoin to make the water look milky and bottle when cool. The skin may be kept in fine condition by using a little borax in the water every time the face and hands are washed and then rubbing this lotion well into the skin. An excellent fluid for keeping the scalp clean and free from dandruff is made with half a teaspoonful of the borax powder, a small piece of gum camphor and half a pint of soft water, and one of the best and safest washes for the mouth and teeth is made by adding one ounce of the powder to one pint of boiling water and then before it is cold adding half a teaspoonful of spirits of camphor. The hair tonic should be rubbed well into the scalp once a week. About two teaspoonfuls of the mouth wash in half a glass of water is the proper proportion, and the fluid whitens the teeth and keeps the gums in a healthy condition.

Mending With Plaster.

In lieu of drawing the torn edge of a dress together with silk thread or even with frayed threads of the material an excellent plan lies in your medicine chest.

That sounds a trifle startling to the needle worker, but listen. A piece of court plaster will form a good working basis upon which a comparatively invisible reparation can be made.

If the tear be on the plain width the skirt should be laid upon a table, the edges pulled together and pinned down and finally the strip of court plaster applied. A hot iron will press the edges together, and the frayed threads should be cut away as a finishing touch.

A Brown Sweater.

One of the most fetching examples of the long sweater coat is of leather colored yarn made with cuffs and a turned down collar of rich green and ornamented with brass buttons.

These durable colors should appeal to the knitter whose desire it is to make a garment not so perishable as the delicate white sweater.

AMERICA'S GREATEST HUMORIST PASSES AWAY AT READING

Mark Twain is no More—Broken Down by His Debts and Grief-Stricken Over Death of His Daughter, the Maker of Fun and Laughter Drops Into an Acute Illness.

Redding, Conn., April 22.—Samuel Longhorne Clemens (Mark Twain) died painlessly at 6.30 o'clock last night of angina pectoris. He lapsed into coma at three o'clock yesterday afternoon and never recovered consciousness.

It was the end of a man outworn with grief and acute agony of body. Wednesday was a bad day for the little knot of anxious watchers at the bedside. For long hours the grey aquiline features lay moulded in the inertia of death, while the pulse sank lower and lower; but late at night the patient passed from stupor into the first natural sleep he had known since he returned from Bermuda, and yesterday morning awoke refreshed, even faintly cheerful and in full possession of all his faculties.

He recognized his daughter, Carrie (Mrs. Ossip Gabrilowitch), spoke a rational word or two, and, feeling himself unequal for conversation, wrote out in pencil: "Give me my glasses." These were his last words. Laying aside his glasses and pencil, he sank first into reverie and later into final unconsciousness. There was no thought at the time, however, that the end was so near.

Mark Twain did not die in anguish. Sedatives soothed his pain; but in his moments of consciousness the mental depression persisted. On the way up from Bermuda he said to Albert Bigelow Paine: "This is a bad job; we'll never pull through with it."

On shore once more and longing for the serenity of New England hills, he took heart and courage and said to those who noted his enfeeblement in sorrow: "Give me a breath of Redding air once more and this will pass." But it did not pass, and, tired of body and weary of spirit, the old warrior against shams and snobs said faintly to his nurses: "Why do you fight to keep me alive? Two days of life are as good to me as four."

It is certain to be recalled that Mark Twain was for more than fifty years an inveterate smoker and the first conjecture of the layman would be that he had weakened his heart by over-indulgence in tobacco. Dr. Halsey said last night that he was unable to predecate that the angina pectoris, from which Mark Twain died, was in any way a sequel of nicotine poisoning. Some constitutions, he said, seem immune from the effects of tobacco; this was one of them. Yet it is true that since his illness began the doctors had cut down Mark Twain's daily allowance of twenty cigars and countless pipes to four cigars a day.

No deprivation was a greater sorrow to him. He tried to smoke on the steamer while returning from Bermuda, and only gave it up because he was too feeble to draw on his pipe. Even on his death-bed, when he had passed the point of speech and it was no longer certain that his ideas were lucid, he would make the motion of waiving a cigar, and, smiling, expel empty air from under the moustache still stained with smoke.

His neighbors remember him best as one who above all things loved a good listener, for Mark Twain was a mighty talker, stored with fairly tales for the little maids he adored, and racier, ruder speech for more stalwart masculine ears. It is a legend that he was vastly proud of his famous mop of white hair and was said to pay the pains of a court lady in getting it to just the proper stage of artistic disarray.

The late Samuel Langhorne Clemens (Mark Twain), the American humorist "who made the world laugh," was born in Florida, Missouri, on Nov. 30, 1835. He was a son of John Marshall Clemens, a descendant of Gregory Clemens, one of the judges who presided at the trial of Charles I. for which at the restoration of Charles II. lost his head.

His mother was one of the famed Montgomeries of Kentucky, renowned for her culture and wonderful repartee. On the death of his father, Samuel Clemens, entered the newspaper office of his elder brother Orion, in Hannibal. Although but thirteen, he displayed marked ability as a "printer's devil," and on several occasions during his brother's absence got the paper out.

His desire to see the world induced him to leave Hannibal, and for some time he led a roving life as a journeyman printer, visiting Philadelphia, New York and Cincinnati, during his travels. Subsequently he returned to his old home and became a pilot on the Mississippi.

On the outbreak of the civil war he served with the Southern troops, and after a narrow escape from being made a prisoner by Gen. Grant, he was soon afterwards captured.

On the conclusion of hostilities, he became private secretary to his elder brother who, under the Lincoln administration, had been appointed secretary of the territory of Nevada. Later, after a futile attempt to make money at mining, he returned to journalism.

His final ventures in the publishing business resulted disastrously to him, and he faced his declining years greatly in debt. Undaunted, however, he set himself to the task of repaying his creditors. Some months ago his favorite daughter, a sufferer from epilepsy, died under distressing circumstances, and this was the beginning of the end.

Mark Twain died as truly as it can be said of any man of a broken heart.

PRINCE TSAI TAO AND STAFF
ON THE PRINCE'S RIGHT, LORD LI CHING-MAI; ON THE PRINCE'S LEFT, GENERAL HA HANG—CHANG NEXT TO LORD LI, GENERAL LIANG PI

Honolulu, April 21.—When Prince Tsai Tao, Chinese Minister of War, uncle of the young Emperor and brother of the Prince Regent, arrived here, he was received with full military honors. Representatives of Governor Frear were on hand to welcome him, and the Twentieth Infantry, a company of Hawaiian infantry, and the Fifth Cavalry regiment escorted the distinguished visitors to the Chinese Consulate.

Colonel Schuyler, of the Fifth Cavalry, has been detailed by the War Department to accompany the Prince to San Francisco.

Liang Que Ying, the consul here, who recently was unqueued owing to his modern tendencies, was received by the Prince. To the astonishment of his countrymen, the Prince was attired in a frock coat and high hat. This was declared to be unprecedented.

The Prince, in responding to an address of local Chinese, who complained of superfluous red tape in the immigration laws returning from visits to China, said he would take up the matter when he returned home.

RICHIBUCTO SAWDUST WHARF DEAL SUPPORTED BY GRITS

Forty-nine is the Majority by Which Government Upholds Notorious Transaction in Maritime Provinces—"Absolutely Undefended Case," Declares Mr. Borden.

Ottawa, April 22.—Supporters of the Government last night whitewashed Hon. William Pugsley and the "sawdust wharf" transactions of Richibucto by a majority of 49. The Government mustered 112 votes and the Opposition 63.

R. L. Borden fairly carried his followers away last night and they cheered wildly and roared themselves hoarse for him.

"This is an absolutely undefended case," he declared. "The resolution does not go far enough. Nobody would believe," he said, "that Murray would come to Ottawa to see the Minister, then go back to buy this wharf for $700 without knowing that the Government would take it off his hands for $5,000 to provide a campaign fund for the Liberal candidate in Kent."

Mr. Pugsley in his defence said: "If it is true that Murray and Robertson (Liberal manager) came to Ottawa, there is no evidence that they saw me in Ottawa." Murray had sworn that the subject was never mooted in his presence. Mr. Crocket, he said, had not the manliness to make a direct charge.

The refutation made by Mr. Carvell and Hon. Dr. Pugsley to the charge may briefly be summed up. The Minister showed that the purchase had been made in order to provide needed wharfage accommodation at Richibucto. It had been made in the usual way, on the report of the district engineer, Mr. Stead, that Mr. Murray's price of $5,000 for the wharf was a fair and reasonable one; it had been made without the knowledge of the Minister that there had been a previous transfer of the property for $700; it was in the public's interest to secure the wharf, and instead of paying too much for the property the Government had got a bargain, as was shown by the fact that an offer had been received from Messrs. Loggie, a reputable and well-known business firm, to buy it back for $5,500. As conclusive evidence of this latter fact Dr. Pugsley noted that two-thirds of the property secured had been resold to the Messrs. Loggie for $3,500. The net result of the whole transaction was, therefore, that for $1,500 the Government had got the most valuable part of the wharf property, and was now in a position to afford Richibucto the much-needed terminal railway facilities at the waterfront.

"There was a time in this country," said A. S. Meighen, "when a man could afford to trust his honor to the judicial temper of members of Parliament, but under the influence of this Government that time has gone by."

A chain of evidence had been woven around Mr. Pugsley, he said, on less than half of which more than one man in this country had been hanged. Referring to Murray he said: "If ever a man gave evidence that stamped him as a perjurer, it was Murray."

In reply to Mr. Borden, Mr. Pugsley stated that he had been informed by O. J. Leblanc, the Liberal member for Kent, that the price paid by the Government for the wharf was excessive.

Mr. Meighen drew the attention of Mr. Pugsley to the loud cheers and the large attendance at the opening of his defence, and the sparse attendance and "drivelling hosannahs" amid which he had closed.

While the whips were out gathering in the members, Joseph Russell, East Toronto, and A. B. Crosby of Halifax entertained the House to some selections on the mouth-organ.

PARKER TO FACE CHARGE OF MURDERING NEIGHBOR

Jurors Return a Verdict of Murder at Tweed Inquest and Robert Parker Will be Tried for the Death of William Masters.

Tweed, April 22.—Robt. Parker, 70 years old, will be put on preliminary trial here Thursday next, charged with murdering his neighbor, William Masters, six years his senior. The crown fixed the date last night at the conclusion of Coroner Farrell's inquest.

Although a murder verdict was returned, the jurors decided the deed was committed by "a person or persons unknown."

Masters was fired upon from a thicket, 55 feet away. Provincial Inspector John Miller swore yesterday that there were two footprints in the soggy soil behind the thicket, into which the prisoner's shoes fit exactly. The bullet which killed Masters displayed six longitudinal scratches, corresponding with the number of grooves in Parker's rifle barrel. No empty shell was found, and George Marsh, a neighbor of Masters, declared that Parker always saved his shells, and loaded his own cartridges.

It was shown that Parker had nourished a bitter feeling against deceased for years, and had made threats of putting him and his two sons "out of business."

William Henderson of Stoco, swore that Parker had once told him that Masters was a thief and had been stealing from his traps.

"He told me he would shoot Masters the first time he laid eyes on him."

[illegible] George Lindsay, [illegible] two men he said he would kill on sight. He said so last July.

Parker's defence is evidently to be an alibi, on the plea that he was on the road to Tweed. The firm of E. Gus Porter and William Carew have been retained.

The accused has said he was in his own house from nine o'clock until eleven, when he started for Tweed. The shot was heard by several witnesses between 9.30 and ten, but several witnesses will swear otherwise. N. Birks, teller of the Bank of Montreal, Tweed, swears to Parker having drawn $100.90, his full bank balance, on the afternoon of the murder.

"He said he didn't think he'd ever come back again," vouchsafed the witness.

After the arrest the prisoner had told Constable Wilson that he had drawn $100 to buy Masters' place and that Masters, when he heard who wanted it, put up the price to $300. Others testifying to having heard or known of Parker's malice towards deceased were Harry and Addison Coulter, James Leonard, Mrs. Coulter, Mr. and Mrs. James Bowers.

James Leonard swore that on the Tuesday or Wednesday before the shooting Parker had produced his rifle and declared that if it wasn't broken he'd go and shoot the two Masters' boys, who had given him a licking a year ago.

EVA SUTER ACQUITTED

Jury in Doubt as to Her Guilt in Connection With Death of Her Child.

Bracebridge, April 22.—Doubt caused the jury to bring in a verdict of "Not Guilty" at 10.15 last night, in the case of Eva Suter, charged with murdering her two-year-old illegitimate child on Sept. 20 last. A motive for the murder was not discovered. It took place in a swamp a few hundred yards from the Suter home, about 12 miles from here.

The girl told a story which was unshaken by the crown, accusing her father, but he established a fairly good alibi. T. E. Godson gave an excellent address to the jury. This is the first capital case Justice Middleton has tried. The case went to the jury at 9.45 p.m.

While addressing the jury, O. M. Arnold, for the crown, said: "No sane man will believe her when she says her father committed the crime," but the verdict was received with pleasure. Applause was quelled just in time to prevent an uproar. "I agree with you," said the justice.

EVA SUTER.

Eva Suter is either heartless, possessed of almost unnatural self-control, or unable to comprehend her position. Until the commencement of her attorney's address to the jury at 7.15 p.m., she showed no emotion. Then she produced a handkerchief, bowed her head and covered her face. From her bearing during the day one would think she did it for effect. When she arrived at the court she was decidedly composed. While chatting with her lawyer, she smiled now and again. Her complexion was sallow and cheek bones prominent, due to her long confinement.

She acted unflinchingly when cross-examined, answering all questions in a straightforward manner. Her manner was of indifference to the result.

CARDINAL SCENE OF A MURDER

Cardinal, April 22.—While two men were engaged in cutting up a pig, Albert Holmes, a farmer, living about two miles west of this place, suddenly attacked N. A. Bolton with an axe, inflicting wounds on the top of the head, and behind the ear, killing him instantly.

It is said that Holmes' mind was unhinged by the purchase of the farm from his victim believing he paid too much for it. He took poison last week in an attempt at suicide.

The murderer escaped to the woods. He was met by a boy named George Perry, whom he warned to keep away or he would kill him too. To the boy he also announced his intention of going into the swamp to kill himself! He thereupon plunged into the swamp of about sixty acres which lies behind his farm.

Men are out searching, but have not found him yet.

Bolton, his victim, was a man of about 40 years. He leaves a widow and one son.

LICENSE REDUCTION

The action of the License Commissioners in reducing the number of licenses will be commended by the great majority of the citizens. In view of the very strong vote in favor of entire prohibition, no other course was open to the commissioners. Even the majority of those who opposed prohibition will favor the reduction in the number of licenses granted. It is to be hoped, however, that it will not mean a great reduction in hotel accommodation for the farmers who come to the city. The hotel business should not be dependent upon the liquor traffic. If it is necessary to charge a little more for meals, in order to make hotels pay, temperance men should not object to paying extra.

A MORAL VICTORY

"Victory for Democrats on Tariff Reform Cry." is the heading the Toronto Globe placed over a telegraphic dispatch from Rochester announcing the defeat of the Republican candidate in Monroe County, New York. In an editorial the Globe refers to it as an evidence of the decay of protection. Yet the telegraphic dispatch intimated that the defeat of the Republican candidate was largely due to the fact that at the recent insurance investigation he admitted having received a $1,000 cheque from an agent of the fire insurance companies, although he turned the money into the Treasury of the Republican organization, and that twenty clergymen went into the campaign to defeat him on the moral issue. Moreover, the dispatch stated that both candidates declared themselves in favor of reciprocity with Canada. It does not look as if the election hinged on the tariff issue. It seems more probable that the defeat of the Republican candidate was due to his personal record and that it indicated a revolt of the people of Monroe County, New York, against corruption in politics.

This is a view of the case that should commend itself to the reverend editor of the Globe. He should rejoice more over the real moral victory than over the fancied victory for free trade. There are many indications that the electors of the United States are now disposed to punish graft in politics, whether the money goes directly into the pockets of the politician or into the party campaign fund. The American people ignored such political corruption for many years. But in recent years there has been a moral awakening.

Such an awakening will come in Canada, and when it comes the Laurier Government will have to account for its scandalous dredging contracts, its notorious land and timber deals, the over-classification on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and many other corrupt transactions.

"A NATION OR A TROUGH"

The victory of Eugene Foss, the reciprocity candidate in a Republican stronghold of Massachussetts, indicated a very strong growth of sentiment in favor of closer trade relations with Canada, and, while the Democratic victory in Monroe County, New York, another Republican stronghold, did not hinge on the tariff question it is significant that both candidates advocated reciprocity with Canada. It is evident that the sentiment in favor of reciprocity with Canada is rapidly growing. This movement will be watched with alarm by those who wish Canada to remain an independent nation within the British Empire as it is to-day. It is a well-known fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues would make almost any sacrifice for the sake of a broad reciprocity treaty with the United States. Unrestricted reciprocity, the old policy of the Liberal party, would be only a stepping stone to annexation.

The Toronto Telegram well expresses the situation. It says:—"Reciprocity would utilize the north half of this continent as a trough at which the United States could fatten all the hogs of its trade greed. Canada a nation or Canada a trough—Canada must choose between the destinies described in the foregoing words. The choice is between the national ideal of protection that builds up Canada and the Globe-Star expedient of continental free trade that builds up the United States."

PARDON OF VILE CRIMINALS

Some months ago two men named King and Skill were sentenced at Toronto to one year each in the Central Prison for selling prurient and licentious books. After serving two months of their term, the Minister of Justice, Hon. Mr. Aylesworth, recommended that they be pardoned. When questioned about it in the House of Commons Mr. Aylesworth said that the books were classics, and that he had "letters with regard to this case urging clemency" from "a Bishop of the Protestant faith, and three other clergymen, one a leading clergyman in the Methodist church." In conclusion he said: "I gave the advice to His Excellency that these men should be summarily released, because in my humble judgment, speaking as a lawyer, they were not guilty of the offence with which they were charged."

Referring to this pardon the Globe says:—

"The two men pleaded guilty. They did so on advice of eminent counsel, and that, too, after many weeks of delay and the exercise of all the arts and ingenuities by which the giving of evidence in open court is avoided. The evidence of the Crown was damning to the last degree, and its publication would have shocked the public. The Chief Coroner of Toronto, to whom the books were referred for report by the Crown, testified that they are absolutely without scientific value, and "are unutterably vile, reeking with filth from beginning to end." After a careful examination of a dozen of these books The Globe endorses that judgment of Dr. Arthur Jukes Johnson. Their only value to science is as samples of the erotic factors in the making of degenerates and perverts. As literature they range all the way from the scrofulous French novel, unexpurgated, vilely illustrated, and elegantly bound, to the still more loathsome exposition and advocacy of the grossest unnatural sensuality."

If the Globe's statement is correct the clergymen who urged the Minister of Justice to pardon these criminals should be severely condemned. The fact is that men of influence are too ready to sign petitions in favor of the pardoning of criminals. In a number of cases men convicted of serious offences against the laws of Canada have been pardoned, and if this policy of clemency is continued there will soon be as little respect for law in Canada as there is in the United States.

The Toronto Globe says that last week the police authorities of Toronto destroyed 57,000 picture cards of unimaginable obscenity, taken from a man now serving sentence for whom a pardon is being urged. Before the conviction of this man he had circulated 55,000 unspeakably vile picture cards in Toronto and many thousands in the smaller cities and towns of Ontario.

The Minister of Justice should not be influenced by petitions for the pardon of criminals. Some men would sign a petition for the pardon of the most brutal murderer. The man who defiles the minds and souls of young people by circulating obscene literature is worse than a murderer.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The London Standard, referring to the passing of the Canadian Navy Bill, at Ottawa says that it would be highly improper for a British newspaper to criticise the domestic arrangements of Canada. That is another way of saying that if it were not improper to interfere in colonial affairs it would criticise. While the British newspapers will not criticise the action of the Canadian Government they do not commend it as they do commend the naval policy of Australia and New Zealand.

American newspapers have published a great deal of gush about Theodore Roosevelt, but a Canadian newspaper, the Ottawa Citizen, surpasses them all. It says:—

"If there is anything in the talk of a naval alliance of the first class powers to guarantee international peace, Col. Roosevelt's visit to Europe should constitute a favorable opportunity to arrange such an alliance. It may be said that he has no political status; the same is also true, in a sense, regarding King Edward the Peacemaker, but both exercise a convincing influence over the people of their respective countries, as well as other nations, and their joint influence might well be sufficient to induce Germany, France and Russia to enter into such an arrangement. If a conference with that object in view were brought about, the nation which refused to enter into the alliance would place itself in the position of standing forth as the potential trouble-maker of the future."

FELL ON THE STOVE

BABY IS BADLY BURNED

The young daughter of Mrs. T. S. Dougall, 523 Flora Avenue, Winnipeg, was arranging some of her doll's washing on a clothes rack, beside the stove, when she fell, and her hand, being thrown out to ctry and save herself, came in contact with the side of the hot stove. She sustained a serious burn, and her screams brought her mother quickly to the spot.

"I sent to the druggist for the best remedy he had for burns," she says, "and he sent back a box of Zam-Buk. He said that there was nothing to equal it. I applied this, and it soothed the pain so quickly that the child laughed through her tears. I bound up the hand in Zam-Buk, and each day applied Zam-Buk frequently and liberally, until the burn was quite cured.

"The little one was soon able to go on with her play, and we had no trouble with her during the time the burn was being healed. I would recommend all mothers to keep Zam-Buk handy for emergencies of this kind."

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at fifty cents a box. Post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, and you are warned against harmful imitations.

FROM HANDLING A PORTABLE MILL

To Becoming Managing Director of a $5,000,000 Canadian Milling Concern

(Canadian Courier.)

All the way from handling a portable flour mill to occupying the position of managing director of a $5,000,000 Canadian milling concern is a pretty strong indication that the man who accomplished it ought to have a very thorough idea of the milling business.

This is the record of Hedley Shaw, who next week assumes the office of managing director of the Maple Leaf Milling Company, the big Ontario milling concern formed by Cawthra Mulock, the young Toronto financier, Mr. D. C. Cameron, the Winnipeg lumberman who originally formed the Maple Leaf Flour Mills Co., Limited, and Mr. Hedley Shaw, founder of the Hedley Shaw Milling Company, to take over both the Maple Leaf Flour Mills Co., and the Hedley Shaw Milling Company, and put up $2,000,000 additional cash that would permit of the erection of a modern 6,000-barrel mill, a million bushel elevator and storage warehouses at Port Colborne, the site that all the Canadian milling concerns have had their eyes on for some time past.

Ontario will be all the more interested in the new big Maple Leaf concern because its head office as well as its largest mills will be situated in the province and its stock will be more largely held in the province than that of any other Canadian milling company.

And all the time we will be watching Hedley Shaw, the miller, just to see how he gets along with the operating end of the business.

LINDSAY MAN OUT WATCH AND MONEY

Hamilton, April 21—A citizen of Lindsay, came to see the sights and was so dazzled by them that he could not for a time see, and after snooping in one of the local hotels awoke to find he had been touched for his watch and chain and a sum of money. He reported the matter to the police, who are investigating. The unfortunate man could give the police no clue as to where the robbery took place, he being too indisposed at the time to remember. He vows never to leave his fireside again, and hopes that the lost will be found.

Exporters.

We generally take as much time in going over the market, as most of the reporters, viewing the cattle, and we did not see or hear of a straight load of exporters being offered and sold as such, and further we made deligent enquiry of the leading dealers on the market, all of whom stated that they did not know of a straight load of exporters being sold on Thursday's market. There were a few of the heaviest cattle picked from loads of butchers' cattle, and we heard of two of these weighing 1,300 lbs. each, that sold at $7.60. Export bulls sold at $5.25 to $5.75 and a few light butcher bulls of choice quality, as good as many of the butcher steers, at $5 to $5.60.

Butchers.

George Rowntree bought for the Harris Abattoir Co., 630 cattle during Wednesday and Thursday. Mr. Rowntree reports butchers' steers and heifers, at $5 to $7.30; cows, $3.75 to $5.15; and bulls, at $3.60 to $5.00.

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby reports good feeders weighing 1000 lbs. each, as being very scarce and high-priced. During the two days' market Mr. Murby was kept busy in picking up and selecting lots to supply his many customers; he managed to select and buy 250 cattle at the following quotations: Steers, 900 to 1100 lbs. each, at $5.50 to $6.25 per cwt.; steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $5 to $5.50; steers, 600 to 800 lbs. each, at $4.25 to $5.10; common light stockers, $3 to $4 per cwt.

The Line of March

A St. Patrick's Day Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Matthew Golden rearranged the newspapers and periodicals on his counter into their customary order. March issues of the Ladies' Own Periodical confronted him. There on the cover, encircled by a wreath of shamrocks, was Margaret Devlin's beautiful Irish face—blue-black mist of hair, forgetmenot eyes fringed thickly with black lashes, saucy nose and smiling red lips.

The name of the artist was fantastically blurred into the background, yet it was clear enough for Matthew's jealous eyes to decipher "Conners." His hands clinched savagely. He knew Conners by sight—big, bulking, red headed artist from the top floor of the studio building around the corner. He had walked past twice with Margaret Devlin. Once there had been a little thin faced girl with them—some new friend of Margaret's whom Matthew did not know.

Just then the door opened, and he turned to confront Margaret herself, bewitching in fur turban and coat of chinchilla. Her blue eyes did not lift above his firm chin; they rested there while she spoke:

"Good morning. Is the March number of the Ladies' Own Periodical out yet?"

He placed a copy of the desired magazine on the counter before her and turned away that he might not see the look of startled pleasure in her eyes when she beheld her own beauty on the cover.

"I'll take all the copies you have," said Margaret crisply, opening her jingling silver purse. "How much?" Even then her eyes were not lifted above his chin.

"Forty-nine copies at 10 cents—$4.90—thank you." The bell on the cash register clanged noisily as Matthew made change. He laid the coins on the counter. "Shall I send the magazines to you, madam? They are very heavy." His tone was very impersonal.

"If you please," said Miss Devlin haughtily, with one gloved hand on the knob of the door.

The young man who worked for him came back from lunch, the errand boy returned from the familiar number in Seventy-fifth street, and still Matthew worked on relentlessly.

The door opened, and a strange thrill down his spine told Matthew Golden that Margaret had returned. He heard her low pitched voice speaking to the clerk. The latter spoke:

"I see we are all out of the Ladies' Own, Mr. Golden. When will we have some more?"

"I shall not order any more."

The store was empty, and he pushed his chair away impatiently and locked the books into the safe. Then he reached down his hat and went out to dinner.

It was his luck that the only vacant seat in the restaurant should be opposite Margaret's father, Tom Devlin.

Mr. Devlin was as homely as his daughter was beautiful, and his plain features were lighted up into genial friendliness. "Matthew, my dear boy," he said, with just a touch of the brogue. "I'm glad to see ye. What's the matter. Ye haven't been wearing out the doormat at No. 842 this dog's age. I've been looking for ye to come around and have a game at cribbage with me—Maggie's head's so full of wedding clothes." Mr. Devlin attacked his salad, with twinkling eyes busy over the proper mixture of the dressing.

Matthew's heart gave a frightened leap, one or two hard thumps and then apparently went out of business all together.

"When is the wedding?" he heard himself ask carelessly.

"The 17th," returned Mr. Devlin.

"This month?"

"Sure."

"St. Patrick's day, then," murmured Matthew dazedly.

"Like to have ye come. Mat—9 o'clock at St. Francis'. Maggie would have it so, though Conners wanted just to step into the rector and let Father Farley tie the knot."

Matthew scraped back his chair and waved the proffered dessert aside. "I must be going along. Good night, Mr. Devlin," he said heavily.

"Then ye won't be there on the 17th?" asked Devlin, with a tinge of disappointment in his tone.

"Can't. Sons of St. Patrick parade at 9 on the 17th," said Matthew. "My congratulations to Miss Margaret."

Devlin was speaking to the waiter, and Golden took his hat and went away into the brightly lighted streets. He walked for hours up and down the hard pavements, seeing nothing save a pair of forgetmenot blue eyes and feeling nothing save a tearing pain at his heart.

Back in his little store, now closed to customers, he leaned his head wearily against the desk and thought bitterly of what had led up to the approaching wedding on St. Patrick's day, but a fortnight away.

He and Margaret had been engaged for a year when she suddenly announced that Conners was to use her as a model for a magazine cover design. After that announcement matters moved rapidly. Matthew forbade it. Margaret defied him, and without explanation on either side their troth was broken.

Six weeks had passed since that miserable night, and he had scarcely caught a glimpse of her face, save at a great distance, until that morning when she came into his news store.

Two weeks dragged slowly by, and the morning of St. Patrick's day found Matthew Golden arraying himself in the splendid uniform of the Faithful Sons of St. Patrick. He dwelt wretchedly on the same anniversary a year ago, when Margaret had stood on the curbstone and waved a green and gold flag as he passed by. It had been the happiest day of his life, for that very evening he had asked Margaret to marry him, and she had consented. By contrast today would be the bitterest he would ever know.

He strode down the street, admired by many feminine eyes and quite unconscious of anything except the event that would occur at 9 o'clock. A little past that hour the parade would march down the avenue past the very portals whence Margaret would emerge changed in name forever.

Trumpets blared, drums rattled, fifes rippled as the several bands of music fell into place. There were hoarse commands, the shuffle of countless feet on the pavements; shrill cries from the throngs gathered about, and the parade started.

As they neared St. Francis' granite bulk Matthew's heart almost stood still. He prayed hard that he might be spared the sight of Margaret's wedding party emerging from the church. The uniforms of the men, white and green and gold, with splendid sashes of emerald satin fringed with gold, made a ribbon of color down the broad avenue. Matthew was in the outer column, his face like ashes, his mouth set in a grim line of despair and his feet mechanically moving to the strains of the "Wearin' of the Green."

Then, just before they reached the church, he saw them—saw Conners' red head and a girl's figure beside him, saw them run down the steps and enter a carriage on the cross street and roll away, while Tom Devlin waved a jovial farewell before he turned to watch the paraders.

Matthew's face had turned to watch the bridal pair enter the carriage. When he found front once more his startled, unbelieving eyes saw Margaret Devlin herself—Margaret in green broadcloth with a great bunch of shamrock at her waist waving a green satin flag at—him!

Tom Devlin and his daughter followed close in the wake of the Faithful Sons of St. Patrick that day. Matthew saw them at the most unexpected corners, always smiling and waving their flags at him. He began to feel like one of the family again and to realize that there was a blunder somewhere—a mistake for which he might be devoutly thankful, for it was evident that Conners had married somebody, and Matthew did not care who it was so long as it was not Margaret Devlin.

When the parade was over Tom and Margaret were on hand to escort Matthew home. He entered the big touring car that sprang from somewhere and found himself between Margaret and her father. The girl's cheeks were flushed, and her blue eyes evaded Matthew's questioning glance.

Once at the familiar house in Seventy-fifth street Tom Devlin disappeared and left the two together.

"Margaret, dear"—Matthew was beside her instantly—"I've been a jealous fool. Tell me the mystery. Did you marry Conners or what?"

"Of course I married Tom Conners. That's why I let another girl go off with him," mocked Margaret, and then suddenly her blue eyes filled with tears and her head found its place on his broad shoulder. "If you'd had a little more faith in me, Matthew," she said, "you would have been happier yourself and made it easier for me to do a good deed."

"You'll have to explain, dear. I'm all at sea," he pleaded.

"Conners has been engaged to Agnes Lee for a year, and he hasn't had a chance to show what he can do. He needed to get out one successful drawing and then he could have all the orders he wanted. Till then he had to starve, and Agnes had to wait and wait for the home she wanted. You know Agnes is skin and bone and homely, and I'm not. So I went to Conners and suggested the picture you saw on the magazine cover. I wanted to help them, that's all. He sold the drawing, got another and larger order, and when the magazine came out father and I bought up all the copies we could, and they got out a second edition. What do you think of that? Of course Tom Conners is fixed now—they've recognized what he could do. I didn't really want my face on a magazine cover, Mat, but I had to help them out. They love each other just as we do. Father and I got them married and off on their honeymoon, and now, Matthew Golden, were you ever happier than you are this minute?" she asked saucily.

"Yes," replied Matthew solemnly. "I was happier when I looked up and saw you standing on the curbstone waving your flag at me, darling. I shall never forget the change from despair to happiness, and I have one thing to say."

"What is that, Mat?" she asked, with softly luminous eyes near his own.

"That you may forgive me for being a jealous fool and spoiling the sweet deed you were doing and that all my life, when I'm on the line of march and meet troubles and sorrows, I can always look up as I did today and see your sweet face smiling on me—there all," said Matthew huskily

Soldiers' Pets.

The British soldier always has a soft corner in his heart for animals of all sorts, and a regiment without its complement of these would be almost like a regiment without rifles. In every barrack or camp throughout the Empire one may see a motley denizens of the fur and feather world accommodating themselves to military routine as though they were born to it.

Every time the drum rolls or the stirring notes of the bugle peal out on a parade ground there is a soldier's dog or cat or bird somewhere in the immediate vicinity. They are always treated with the utmost kindness, and often live to a good old age. At Edinburgh Castle to this day may be seen "the dogs' cemetery," a small plot of ground under the ramparts of the Argyll Battery, just below Mons Meg, where the canine friends of Highland regiments stationed there have been buried.—Chambers' Journal

Parthian Shot.

"I regret very much that we cannot use your story," said the magazine editor, handing back the manuscript. "It's astonishing how much really good literature we are compelled to decline."

"It's more astonishing, though," said the disgruntled author of the story, "that you never let any of it get into your magazine."—Chicago Tribune.

The Odoriferous Rodent.

"Why is Edgerly talking so excitedly to the Bingle girl?"

"She rejected him when he was poor, you know, and I think he must be heaping coals of fire on her head."

"That's it. I was sure I smelt a rat."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Sitting Room Hall.

The hall seen in the illustration is a charming example of what may be done in artistic furnishings. There is nothing symmetrical about the arrangement, and this in itself is a great relief. Then the simple way in which the floor and walls are treated gives a feeling of repose that is very grateful. Possibly the greatest change in house furnishings in the early twentieth century was the revival of the sitting room hall, which is steadily growing in favor.

A Blessing in Bamboo.

Some houses are closer than brothers, and suburban people frequently miss the exclusive life they have been accustomed to in their "broader acres" or even in the narrower limits of a town house.

The privacy of home is something to be mourned, for it is almost a thing of earlier farm life and of the past. Nothing that can be done to call back the smallest fragment of it should be objected to by our good neighbors, to whom personality there may not be the least objection.

One way to accomplish the desired privacy is the free use of the bamboo screen upon all porches. If it be tastefully rolled at times it may never make itself felt as a too complete barrier to even the sensitive neighbor, and, indeed, it may be welcomed by him also as a merciful protection.

It is a most excellent plan to put up screens before the next and later comer arrives, when that is possible, or to do it "with the flowers"—with the early gardening—as if it were a necessary part of all the outdoor work and not a thrust at the overintimate neighbor after the unsolicited friendship has grown to be a burden.

KAFFIRS AS SERVANTS.

An American Woman's Housekeeping Experiences in South Africa.

"I never shall forget the names my Kaffir boys took," said a woman who kept house several years in South Africa, where her husband was manager of a mine. "When the Kaffir boys come from the kraals no one ever uses their native names. As soon as they are brought in contact with the whites they take a white name.

"This produces results which are not lacking in humor. Among the house boys Knife, Fork and Spoon were common names. Table, Chair, Watch, Carriage and Matchbox were other names that I had in the house at various times. My butler rejoiced in the stately appellation of New One. It was when the slang phrase 'That's a new one on me' was going about.

"One of my house boys took the utilitarian name of Ham and Eggs. The Kaffirs are very fond of rice when they learn to eat it among the whites, and our stable boy thought he had found the nicest name in the world in Rice. But the Kaffirs have the same difficulty as the Chinese in pronouncing the letter R, so poor Rice always called himself Lice.

"One day the wife of one of the carpenters sent down to the compound for a new kitchen boy. The boy had heard one expression in frequent use at the mine. It struck him as euphonious and pleasing, and when she asked him what his name was he calmly replied, 'Dam Fool.'

"'Why, I can't call you that,' said she, horrified. 'I'll call you Joseph.'

"The boy flew into a rage. He said Dam Fool was a 'pomochila gum,' a nice name, and if he could not have that name he would not work for her. He was so stubborn about it that she had either to use the name or to send him back to the compound. Eventually she kept him, and she told me that it was a relief to her feelings sometimes to have a kitchen boy answering to just that name.

"The Kaffirs are very imitative and will cook a dish exactly as they have been taught. But I never could quite bring myself to eat Kaffir cooking. It is apt to be weird.

"I had an English housekeeper who did the cooking. Once she went down to Johannesburg for a week's vacation, and her head assistant, Candle, was promoted to the position of chef. One night for dinner he brought in a dessert of baked custard. It looked perfectly conventional, but when I tasted it I thought for a moment that I was in the clutches of a nightmare.

"It seems that Candle had flavored the pudding with worcestershire sauce instead of vanilla. Poor Candle was quite crestfallen at our reception of the dish."

A Courageous Labor Leader.

Mr. G. N. Barnes, M.P., the new chairman of the Labor party in the British Parliament, only entered the House of Commons in 1906, but he is one of the ablest and most esteemed members. He is quite a "self-made" man. Born at Lochee, near Dundee, where his father was employed in a jute mill, George Barnes made an early acquaintance with work. He became an engineer, came to London, and, after his work in the day-time, studied hard at night classes, winning several prizes and certificates. Step by step he rose, till he became general secretary to the rich and powerful Amalgamated Society of Engineers—the blue ribbon of the trades union world.

LICENSE FOR SOUTH BEACH

Is Asked for by Mr. Wm. Brook -- Clergy Likely to Oppose Proposal

The License Commissioners of East Peterborough meet in their rooms here on Saturday to consider the issuing of licenses for 1910-1911. There are only two licenses issued in East Peterborough at present, at Mt. Julian and Burleigh Falls. In addition to these two, Mr. Wm. Brooks, of South Beach, Douro township, is applying for a tavern license for six months for his summer hotel, and we are informed that his application will be opposed by the clergy of that district.—Havelock Standard.

FIVE KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Special to the Review.

Terre Haute, April 22.—A big four passenger train running more than an hour late ran into an open switch at Sanford, Tenn., west of here. Five persons are reported killed and a number of others injured. The first reports were that 17 were dead and all the ambulances in Terre Haute were summoned to the big four station here. The dead and injured are being brought to Terre Haute.

The Steamer "Otonabee" will leave the Wolfe St. Wharf Saturday at 2.45 p.m. acting as an escort to the "Bessie Butler" who will convey his excellency the Governor General on an inspection of the Lift Lock. His Excellency will be shown the steamer "Otonabee" and passengers working through the Lift Lock. Both boats will then proceed to Nasaw and return. This will afford a pleasant outing for those who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing our Governor General.

SETTLEMENT NOT NOT YET REACHED

Between Water Commissioners and Canadian General Electric Company

A meeting of the water commissioners was held yesterday afternoon, when Mr. J. A. Patterson, K.C., of Toronto, one of the solicitors of the Canadian General Electric Company, and Mr. E. G. Patterson, the local manager, were in attendance. The meeting was held for the purpose of going over the proposed contract between the city of Peterborough and the company in connection with the surplus power at the new waterworks dam. A settlement was not arrived at, although considerable progress was made. It is expected that the whole matter will be settled in a few days.

"The Geisha" will be presented at Grand Opera House on Saturday evening, May 23rd by the Peterborough Amateur Operatic Co. The presentation will be under the distinguished patronage of Earl Grey. Prices 25c to 75 cents. Seats on sale at box office. Under direction of Mr. R. J. Devey.

License Reduction

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The fearless conduct of the license commissioners is to be most highly commended. The day of the public sale of whiskey as a specialty to young men is drawing to a close. It has been a matter of regret to many that a Christian minister could argue in favor of deriving part of the money that sustains his own little ones from the sale of liquor to the fathers of other little ones. But the sentiment of the people has corrected this error, and we are thankful to the commissioners for this favor. Peterborough is only just emerging from the era of tyranny and vice and darkness that has so long held away.

Yours,
SOUTH END.

COMMISSIONERS REFUSED TO RENEW EIGHT LICENSES

Seven are Hotels and One Shop—Two Hotel Licensees Must Sell Out and Two Others Received an Extension of Three Months to Allow of Further Consideration -- Repairs Must be Made to Another Hotel. Within Three Months-- One Shop Renewed Conditionally.

It took the Liquor License Commissioners two hours and ten minutes last night, to decide the applications for the renewal of liquor licenses of the city, and in that time seven applications for hotel licenses and one application for a shop license were not granted; the licenses of three hotels were extended for three months and licenses of two hotels notified to sell out.

The commissioners were prompt on time at the meeting called for at eight o'clock in the License Inspector's office. There were present, Dr. Morrison, chairman, Jas. Kendrey, H. LeBrun and Jos. Stewart, License Inspector. It is learned that the meeting was a harmonious one, and that the Commissioners did what they believed to be in the best interests of the city.

The hotels cut off, their location and licenses follow:—

Maple Leaf hotel, Ashburnham, George Lipsett.

Queen's hotel, corner of Aylmer and Charlotte street, M. C. Tooley.

Commercial hotel, corner of George and Brock streets, Mrs. M. O'Shea.

Peterborough House, Hunter street, James Head.

Montreal House, corner of Aylmer and King streets, J. B. Laroque.

Crown hotel, corner of Water and Hunter streets, R. H. Jackson.

City hotel, George street, Martin Connors.

The following two hotels were given an extension of three months:

Snowden House, Charlotte street, Donald Fraser.

Windsor hotel, Brock street, Arthur T. Johnston.

Three months extension means that the application will during that time be further considered by the commissioners. At the end of the three Ashburnham, was granted on the understanding that the liquor store be separate, and that a clerk be secured months the licenses may or may not be cancelled.

The license of the Munroe House, Hunter street, was also extended for three months. During that time alterations must be made to the house and the stables. The heating system of the house must be changed. At present it is heated with stoves. In the event of such alterations being made, satisfactory to the commissioners, the license will be granted.

The licenses of the two hotels following were cancelled, but three months extension was granted, to allow the licensees to sell out:

New Oxford, Simcoe street, Mrs. Bowman.

American hotel, Hunter street, Mrs. G. Long.

If satisfactory alterations are made to these two hotels, the licenses will be granted to applicants, other than the two present licensees.

SHOP LICENSES.

The shop license of Arthur Rountree, Water street was not granted but he was allowed three months to dispose of his stock.

The application of John E. Sullivan, and a telephone installed.

OPINIONS ON SUGGESTED EXTENSION OF T. & N. O.

Mr. E. A. Peck thought the idea of a Government road from North Bay to Peterborough was a good one. While he didn't know that the Government could be persuaded to build a road, although he felt that it was needed. Mr. Peck said he favored an electric road. Power could be developed cheaply.

Dr. M. A. Morrison said that so far as Peterborough was concerned the road would be an excellent thing, and also would be a good means of giving an outlet for the products of the north country, which is already reached by railways, and would open up a considerable tract of country as well.

Mr. R. J. Soden was of the opinion that the proposal was a capital one, and that the expenditure in connection with the construction of such a road would be well worth while. There should be considerable mineral wealth in the territory it would tap, as it was right in the principal part of the mineral belt.

Mr. B. E. Ackerman thought the road would prove of immense benefit to Peterborough, and would serve an excellent purpose in opening up a new country.

Fatalities on United States railways for the quarter ending December 31, 1909, totalled 1,609, and those injured totalled 22,491.

The Chief's Funeral

NO GAMBLING OR DRINKING AT SCENE OF BIG FIGHT

Rickard and Gleeson Won't Let Any Bar Privileges—Anxious for Johnson to Make the Coast—Special Police Service.

Jeffries and Johnson have started active training for their bout and interest in the great battle will increase from this date forward. Jeffries has hiked to the Santa Cruz mountains in California and is going through a course of work that should put him in great shape for his fight on July 4 next. Jeff has been devoting considerable attention to hand-ball, baseball, rope skipping, etc., and the first of this week started in on boxing. Bob Armstrong, the negro, will act as a punching bag for the big fellow. Joe Choynski will share in the work later on and about a month before the bout Jim Corbett is expected to put on the gloves with Jeff and carry him along at top speed. Jeffries was always a glutton for work during training and has been putting forth extra efforts for this fight because of his long absence from the ring. He will spend about all of the time in the open air, even sleeping out of doors. Jeff has no fears that he will overdo the thing, as some of his advisers think his judgment in such matters has always been of the best in the past.

Jack Johnson plans to leave for the coast April 20. He has been doing road work around Chicago for some time and also working out with the gloves. It is expected that he will establish his training camp at Seal Rocks, near San Francisco, May 1. Johnson does not believe in long training. He is somewhat careless in conditioning himself for a fight, but usually shows up in the ring in good condition. The champion has given the promoters of the fight considerable uneasiness and they have dispatched men to Chicago to see that he gets started for the coast on time. The managers of the big affair will heave a deep sigh of relief when he is landed safely on the coast.

Jack Gleason, one of the promoters of the fight, who has been in New York, has been telling some glowing stories of the arrangements for the big mill. His latest is that it will be a temperance affair. Says Jack: "There will be no liquor sold at or near Emeryville race track on July 4. Thousands of dollars have been offered for the privilege of installing a bar and waiter system near the arena, but Tex Rickard is as strongly opposed to it as I am. Should the negro astound the loyal supporters of Jeff by making a winning stand against the big Californian, there is no telling what might happen if westerners, plied with intoxicants, turned upon the men who will cheer Johnson. From present indications there will be more than 25,000 spectators, each with a decided opinion regarding the merits of the fighters.

"There will be no gambling in the arena. Of course no one can check men who make wagers, but there will be no open games of chance permitted. Tickets will not be sold to men known to have a hankering to 'start something.' Everything connected with the fight arrangements will be attended to with military precision. With thousands of visitors to California it will not be possible to keep all the crooks out, but we have arranged for an almost unlimited squad of policemen and detectives. In addition, there will be sleuths from New York, Chicago and many other cities, to watch men they know who in many instances might be strangers to Californians. William Pinkerton will attend.

"The receipts of the fight itself will probably exceed $600,000. The visitors from the middle west and other places will number at least 20,000. Two hundred dollars is a low estimate of the money each will spend, but it is a fair average. This will put $4,000,000 in circulation.

"The arrangements for the battle, receipts, expenditures, the purse itself and the future money earnings of the winner will break all records. This fight will do more to establish boxing as a clean sport than any number of minor affairs could."

PROVIDENCE WON LEAGUE OPENER FROM TORONTO

Providence, April 21.—The Eastern League season had the most successful opening here to-day that has been the case in several seasons. The day was fine and just right for baseball, the crowd was large, 10,676 paying admission and the home team won by a score of 2 to 1. The visitors played splendid ball and hot for some phenomenal fielding by the locals would have won by a good sized score. Things broke well for the Grays and several times when runs looked almost certain for the Leafs, the ball went to a local man, or was captured on a hard chance.

Three lightning double plays by the home team proved the undoing of the Torontos, and had either one gone wrong the result would probably have been different. In the fifth, with McDonald on second, and Delehanty on first, and none out, Rock knocked down a hot drive from Grimshaw's bat and got it to second ahead of Dal, and Atz nailed the batter at first. In the sixth, with Mullen on first, Vandy hit to Collins, who pegged across to Courtney, getting Vandy. Courtney threw back to Collins, who nailed Mullen at third, and again in the seventh, with Vaughan on first, McDonald hit sharply to Courtney, who forced him at the bag and then threw to second, where Rock tagged Vaughan. All the plays were of the star order and came at a time when they did a lot of damage to Toronto.

The locals got men on the bases in every inning, except the third, and had no less than 13 left on bases. Twice the side was retired with two men on the sacks and twice with three on. At critical points the Leafs braced up and held the locals safe. Both pitchers were wild and found it hard to locate the plate.

McGinley started three innings by chasing the first man up and Cronin offended in the same way three times.

Shaw scored the only run of the Leafs by a great piece of base running. He walked in the second inning, stole second cleanly and followed it with a clean steal of third. He scored when Atz made a wicked peg to Courtney in an attempt to complete a double play. The locals' runs were made in the fourth. Elston walked and was sacrificed to second by Hoffman. Collins also drew a base on balls. Rock was given a dress suit case and responded with a corking two-bagger to left centre that sent Elston and Collins across the plate.

The Leafs made a big bid for the game in the eighth and it looked like Toronto. With one down Hoffman muffed Grimshaw's fly and Shaw hit to centre for a base. Deal was passed, filling the bases. Mullen hit a short grounder to Cronin, who made a grand pick-up of the ball and tossed to Peterson, forcing Grimshaw at the plate. Vandy drove a wicked bounder to Collins, who got the ball back of the bag and threw himself on to the base just in time to force Deal. Shaw having crossed the plate. Kelly hit for McGinley in the ninth, but struck out. Vaughan filled to Phelan and McDonald popped to Atz. The Torontos look like a great ball team and impressed the fans as far better than the team of last year.

Put Out Your Flags

The Governor-General of Canada will be in Peterborough on Saturday. All citizens should unite to do him honor. Mayor Morrow especially requests that everyone who has a flag shall show his loyalty to Canada and the Empire by displaying it. Get out your flags and bunting. A general display of flags will be more appreciated than the address of welcome.

FOOTBALL

The North Hastings Review of Madoc, says:—A meeting of all those interested in football will be held in the Review office on Monday night, April 25th, at 8 o'clock. This meeting is for the purpose of organizing a junior football team to enter the Midland Football League. As there is, from the present outlook, going to be no other sports in town this summer everybody should join in and help the boys win the championship. Don't forget the date, Monday night, April 25th, at 8 o'clock.

BASEBALL

Providence took the opening game with Toronto yesterday before a crowd of 14,000, by a 2—1 score. Cronin and McGinley did the twirling and got away with some good work, although both were inclined to be wild. Vaughan and Shaw for Toronto made three of the five hits obtained off Cronin.

Montreal got away to a good start at Jersey City and won by 3—1. The Royals played errorless ball.

Newark put the Rochester champions away by a 2—1 score. McGinnity twirled for the Indians, and his team played well. Shortstop Holly, of the Hustlers, contributed the only misplay of the game.

Dr. Adkins lost his initial game to Buffalo. The score was 4—2.

Detroit shut out Cleveland in Cleveland, 5—0. The Tigers bunched hits off Young.

Bill Carrigan made a home run in the Washington-Boston game. Boston won 10—3.

Mooney Gibson was the star of the Pittsburg-St. Louis fixture. He started a batting rally with a two-bagger. Babe Adams started in the box for the Pirates, but had to give way to Philippe.

Babe Marquard, before twisting his ankle in the sixth innings, featured the Boston-New York game by his pitching. In the six innings he only allowed two hits and fanned seven men. In the second innings he struck out the side.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO

What Booth's Kidney Pills are Doing for Peterboro People

All the blood in the body passes through the Kidneys every three minutes.

The Kidneys filter the blood.

They work night and day to daily remove about 500 grains of impure matter. If they fail some part of this impure matter is left in the blood bringing on pain in the back, headache, dizziness, irregular heart, hot dry skin, rheumatism, gravel, dropsy, deposits in the urine. Booth's Kidney Pills make the filtering right, and overcome Kidney trouble. Hundreds of Peterborough County residents have found this out.

Mrs. John Wallace, of 323 Water street, Peterborough, says: "I had suffered with many painful and annoying symptoms of Kidney trouble for over two years and could find nothing that would benefit my condition. My back was weak and a dull, heavy pain settled across the small of it, extending into my sides and shoulders. I could not sleep at night as the Kidney secretions were so frequent and irregular that I would have to leave my bed a number of times. I was dizzy and weak and would usually awake with a dull headache. Booth's Kidney Pills procured at Madill's drug store cured me when all else failed. I am stronger and feel better generally. I can conscientiously recommend Booth's Kidney Pills, and I would not be without a box in the house."

A Coming Strong Man

Prof. H. A. Titus, Titus building, 158-158 23rd street, New York, writes as follows in "Physical Culture," of one of his pupils, who recently appeared in a weight lifting contest act at a local theaterium:—

James E. Barnes is one of my most successful pupils. Although practically a new-comer in the field, he is already one of the strongest weight-lifting men in the world. He is now in Canada, where he is defeating the champions of the various Canadian cities one after the other. In Toronto he recently broke the world's record by this performance: Lying on the back and pulling a 218 pound barbell over to chest and pushing it up to arm's length. Putting it on the feet and pushing it up with feet 45 times. Lifting it back on the hands and pushing it up with the hands 13 times, then back over the head to the floor. Mr. Barnes challenges anyone in the world to a weight-lifting contest. He is particularly anxious to meet Rolandow, Sandow, the Saxon Trio or anybody in their class anywhere. If any strong man wants to challenge Barnes, let him put up a forfeit with any of the New York City newspapers to show that he means business.

Worms in Horses.

Horses that are poorly kept and become reduced in flesh are very liable to become wormy. Here is a remedy that has been fully tried and proved to be a first class corrective of that condition: Thoroughly mix a teaspoonful of pulverized smoking tobacco with a ground feed of corn or bran two or three times a week and give it to the horse. It will expel the worms, improve the horse's condition and make the hair glossy.

This remedy will not injure a mare with foal, but it pays to be very careful about giving any medicine to mares in that condition.

Chief Tremblay, of the Montreal fire brigade, motored to a fire and had the blaze extinguished before the brigade arrived.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Graham the Jester.

The chief "jollier" in the House of Commons is Hon. George Perry Graham, the Minister of Railways and Canals. His good humor is irresistible, and he escapes from many a tight corner by reason thereof. The Graham smile is different from the sunny one which made Sir Wilfrid famous. It is a broad, big-hearted grin. An instance of the Minister's "jollying" tactics, successfully employed, was given recently during an animated talk over the question of granting water powers to private individuals. This is one of those bugbears of Parliament, and frequently raises its head. The Opposition argued long and lustily against neglecting what they thought were the people's interests, although Mr. Graham pointed out that these were adequately safeguarded by the Railway Commission. Two hours were consumed. Provincial rights were dragged in, and eventually the talk concerning water powers died of exhaustion. The next bill on the order paper was that standing to the name of Mr. Alexander Haggart, of Winnipeg, to incorporate the Congregational Union of Canada.

"Any water powers asked for in this?" enquired an Opposition member facetiously.

"Oh, no," launched Mr. Graham. "This is not a Baptist aggregation." Whereat the House smiled hugely.

Melbourne a Fine City.

Melbourne, the capital of Victoria, Australia, is a fine city of about 500,000 inhabitants. It is younger than Sydney, being only about seventy years old; but for handsome buildings it would be hard to find an equal. It has been laid out upon broad and spacious lines. Collins street runs for about two miles from Spencer street station to the fine square where the Federal Parliament Buildings and Government offices are situated. Outside the city are splendid avenues, with lines of trees, the effect being particularly fine. The battle of the sites for the seat of the Federal Government still goes on. Sydney, though consenting to Melbourne as a temporary arrangement, has never ceased to agitate for the establishment of a new and independent site, and one is in contemplation midway between the two cities. A very fine railway station and offices are just being finished at Flinders street. Lower down are the docks, which are reached by the Yarra Yarra, a few miles from Hobson's Bay, opening into Basses' Straits.

A Gold Mine.

Sir Thomas Lipton has a keen sense of humor, and tells a good story about a Scotsman who went to a horse-race for the first time in his life.

I ought to say that he told it to a company of guests on Shamrock III. one evening when he was lamenting the long odds against his ever winning the America Cup because of the hard rules imposed.

"Well," said Sir Thomas, "this Scotsman was a feeble-minded old man, and his companions who took him to the race meeting presently persuaded him to stake a sixpence in the third race on a 40 to 1.

"By some amazing miracle this outsider won.

"When the bookmaker gave old Sandy a golden sovereign and his sixpence, the winner could not believe his eyes.

"'Do you mean to tell me,' he said, 'that I get all this for my saxpence?'

"'You do,' said the bookmaker.

"'Ma conscience!' muttered Sandy. 'Tell me, mon, how long has this thing been going on?'"

A Day Lost

A Story of the International Date Line.

By CHESTER WILLIAMS.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

An old salt told me this story while I was waiting on the dock for an incoming ship. He was a queer looking old chap with rings in his ears:

"We was a-drawin' nigh New Zealand. A year afore we'd h'isted anchor at Wellington—Wellington's a town in New Zealand, boss—and arter goin' clear round this 'ere globe a-shippin' cargoes in heathen lands and a-sellin' 'em in Christian lands we was a-gittin' back to where we'd started from to settle up with the owners.

"Our cap'n knowed well enough how to trade, but he wasn't nowhere at navigation. He'd been one year afore the mast when his brother, in the soap boilin' line, up and died and left him $10,000. He put the lump in with the owners of the Polly Mitford and got the command. He warn't fit to command a yawl, boss, and all the men knowed it.

"They made a plan to seize the vessel and put the second officer, Mr. Withers, in command. Now, Mark Withers didn't have nothin' to do with the mutiny, fer he didn't know nothin' at all about it. He was the best man you ever sailed under, boss—kind and considerin' to the men and with a head like a sperit level with the bubble always in the middle. That was jist the kind of man the cap'n ud almost hate, and he hated Mr. Withers like pizen.

"Well, jist afore the mine was ready to spring some of the men weakened and give away the hull thing. Now, if the cap'n had managed the sailin' of the ship as well as he managed wot he was a-goin' to do he wouldn't 'a' had no trouble. He put Mr. Withers in irons and made a court out of the men wot give the plot away, and they understood well enough that if they didn't find Mark Withers guilty every mother's son of 'em ud have to stand trial when we made port.

"They tried him, and they convicted him. He was sentenced to be hanged to the yardarm at noon on Friday, the 30th day of June, till he was dead, and God have mercy on that poor soul of his'n.

"Now, of all the men aboard that ship there wasn't none wot thunk more of Mr. Withers than this mis'able hulk wot stands afore you.

"Well, I didn't sleep none that night. I jist laid awake and thunk—thunk wot could I do to stop the hangin'. You see, there wasn't no reason for it. We would reach port in a day or two, and there'd be a fair trial. But the cap'n knowed that we could prove his ignorance of navigation and that ud weaken his case. What he wanted was to git squar' with the man he hated afore it was too late.

"That night I goes on a-thinkin'. I thunk and thunk till I reckoned the top of my head ud split off. Mr. Withers was to hang the next day but one at noon. What I was a-drivin' at was to delay the execution till we could make port. But there wasn't no way. I opened my knowledge chist a hundred times and shet it ag'in without gittin' nothin' out.

"Jist afore mornin' I fell asleep, and I dreamed—dreamed a sure enough dream this time. I ain't a-goin' to tell you wot I dreamed, boss, but that dream give an idee. I didn't think it was much of an idee at the time, but it was better'n nothin', and I saw that there was one small chance for Mr. Withers. I stayed in my hammock long enough to think out a plan to give the prisoner that one chance and when I turned out I knowed what I was a-goin' for to do.

"When four bells in the mornin' was a-strikin' I started aft at the head of seven men. They was the best men on the ship, and they was the only best men. All the rest was worst. We marched aft to the quarterdeck where the cap'n was a-standin', and — all drawed up in line afore him.

"'Well,' he said, a-sniffin' somethin' in the wind.

"'Cap'n,' says I, 'here's eight of us come to recommend a p'int of law.'

"'Wot do you know about law, you lubbers? Git back forard.'

"'Cap'n,' says I, 'you have given Mr. Withers a fair trial.' You see, I concluded to start in favorable and shift round afterward. 'Cap'n,' says I, 'seein' as you've given Mr. Withers a fair trial, don't you think you'd orter give him a fair hangin'?'

"'Wot do you mean?' says he, changin' his talk by shiftin' to the left leg instead of the right.

"'I mean,' says I, 'that if you hang Mr. Withers tomorrer you'll do it agin marrytime law.'

"'Marrytime law! Wot do such fish as you know about marrytime law?'

"I reckoned it was about time to shift the wind a few points, so I says, kind of brazin myself, 'As cap'n of this 'ere vessel if you permits an illegal execution you'll be liable to be tried fer murder jist as soon as we make port.'

"He changed his tack ag'in and give his quid a grind. I knowed the matter didn't rest easy on his mind noways, for I saw him whiten. Howsumever he squared around and lit out on us:

"'If this is a plan on the part of mutineers to hold on to Mr. Withers to make him master of this 'ere ship I want you to understand that there ain't a-goin' to be no interference with justice. If necessary I'll hang eight more men.' And he turned his eye on us as if he was a-measurin' how much of the ship's rope would be required for the job.

"'There ain't no sich intention, cap'n. There's a valid reason why Mr. Withers' hangin' tomorrer 'll be contrary-wise to good law.'

"'Wot is it?' he yelled. He was a-gittin' mad fast.

"'Mr. Withers has been sentenced by the court to hang at noon on Friday, the 30th of June. There won't be no sich day fer us. This 'ere ship left Wellington a year ago and has been a-sailin' and a-sailin', till we've gone clean round the globe. You're navigator enough to know, cap'n, that we've lost one day in our reckonin'. Tonight we'll cross the international date line and jump a day in our record. It won't be Friday, June 30, but Saturday, July 1.'

"Boss, you'd oughter seen the way he looked at me when I said that. It seemed as if the idee struck him hard.

"'This is Thursday,' he said, 'ain't it?'

"'Aye, aye, sir!'

"'If we don't reach the date line afore tomorrow noon it'll be Friday, and the hangin' will be legal.'

"'Aye, aye, sir! But if we do reach the date line afore tomorrow at noon it'll be Saturday accordin' to the new reckonin', and Mr. Withers can't be swung accordin' to the sentence of the court.'

"The cap'n looks up at the sky and skins his eye along the horizon. Then he turns to the fust officer, who was standin' by.'

"'You got the sun today, didn't you, Mr. Greevis?'

"'Aye, aye, sir!'

"'How far do you reckon we are from the one hundred and eightieth meridian?'

"'Bout ninety miles, sir.'

"Then the cap'n put his eye round the horizon ag'in. I knowed well enough what he was a-thinkin' about. With the wind we was a-gittin' we couldn't make the date line afore the time set for the hangin'. Worse'n that, the wind was a-dyin' out.

"'Well, my man,' he said, kind of chucklin',' 'I reckon Mr. Withers 'll hang, and hang legally.'

"Boss, as we men walked forward, do you know, every mother's son of us had his eye on the sky a-tryin' to see some sign of wind. But there wasn't no sign nowhere. A thin thickness stood on the horizon, but that didn't mean nothin', so far as I could see, and I didn't see no hope. I went below and put my arms round Mr. Withers, who was a-sittin' pale and thoughtful-like, and tried to tell him about it all, but my speakin' tube was clogged, so I couldn't say nothin', and one of my mates had to tell him. He thanked me and asked how the wind was a-holdin'. I says it was a-dyin' down. The color went out of his face, and he said solemn-like, 'Then there's no puttin' off my sailin' day for the big ocean.'

"I rubs my shirt sleeve agin my eye and goes up on deck to look for wind. Do you know, boss, the sails was a-flappin'. I turned my eyes skyward, feelin' as if there wasn't no hope nowhere, and seen that the thin thickness wot I told you about was a-thickenin' some more. Besides, there was a few bits of clouds wot looked nigher 'n the misty bank behind, with dark centers and ragged edges. I turned about to the quarterdeck and seen the cap'n was a-lookin' at 'em too. Then some of the other men on deck begun to watch 'em, and pretty soon up comes all the off watches, every man a-lookin' out at them ragged clouds.

"Arter awhile the cap'n, seein' it wouldn't do to put off preparations any longer, called all hands to shorten sail and git the ship ready for a gale. Well, it struck us 'bout eight bells. It wasn't none of them white squalls wot blows over in a hurry, but a roarin' wind, backed by a big bank of clouds.

"The Polly Mitford went over on her beam ends, but the flyin' jib had been left, and that stiddied her, and after rockin' to port, then to starboard, then to stern, she slid down from the crest of a high wave and was buried in a sea of buttermilk.

"At any other time, boss, we'd ruther not seen that wind. Now we prayed for it to keep a-blowin'. But as night wore on we found the ship was a-leakin'; then she listed, and—well, it begun to look as if one man 'd better have than a hull crew go to the bottom. I ain't a-goin' to tell you 'bout that black night, them roarin' waves, that howlin' wind.

"All to once the flyin' jib busted into ribbons. The cap'n lost his head and was a-givin' orders so wild that no one would obey 'em; the fust officer was a-shakin' with fear, and it begun to look like we'd got to git some un to command or founder.

"There was a rush for the forward gangway. Down went half a dozen of us, and up we brings Mr. Withers and puts him in command. The cap'n didn't make no protest. He was too skeered to think of anything except drownin'. Mr. Withers tuk the helm hisself, sent me below with a gang to work the pumps, managed to git up another jib and saved the ship.

"The next mornin' the wind dropped to a ten knot breeze, and there on the horizon was land. We knowed we'd crossed the date line, and Mr. Withers was saved. Afore noon we rounded to in the harbor at Wellington.

"Of course there wasn't no more tryin' anybody. The cap'n had been tried afore a jury of wind and waves for fitness to command and had been convicted. Mr. Withers got the vessel on the next voyage, and that's the end of this 'ere yarn."

Reduce Taxation.

There have been heavy deficits in the United States Treasury for several years. For the present year the receipts will be a great many millions short of the expenditures. The president and his cabinet are endeavoring to discover the direction in which new taxes can be levied. They should follow the example of Canada and reduce instead of increasing taxation. Such a device would be a very simple way of both increasing the revenue and striking a blow at the trusts which are growing fat at the expense of the people. We have tried it in Canada and can speak from experience.—Victoria Daily Times.

Great is Ontario's Wealth.

The silver output of Ontario last year was over $12,380,000, the largest in the history of the province. Our total mineral production for the same period was $90,000,000. And the mining industry in this province is still in its infancy.—Citizen, Ottawa.

Now—and Then

YEARS ago when none of us knew better we took our wheat to the village mill and our good friend the miller ground it for us the best he could.

It wasn't his fault if our wheat was mostly grits or if it was frosted or smutty. He did the best he could with the materials we gave him and the facilities he had for grinding.

The making of flour today is not a mere grinding process. It is a scientific process. The great Ogilvie Flour Mills of today are a vast commercial enterprise extending from ocean to ocean.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is a world product. It is well known in Africa as well as in Canada. It is as much appreciated in the poorest household at home as it is in the Royal Household abroad. To make Royal Household Flour the product it is, involves vast capital and vast resources. Every advanced process, every modern device that can in any way improve the quality of Royal Household Flour is immediately adopted regardless of expense.

If the production of ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR was purely a milling process it would not be better than any good flour. But it is not the milling alone that makes it the finest flour in the world. It is the all embracing system of care and watchfulness and scientific knowledge that surround it at every stage from wheat field to kitchen.

Every step in the production of ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR from the planting of the wheat to the delivery of the package to the grocer is embraced in the requirements of this system. It is watch, watch, watch, and test, test, test and know, know, know at every step. No happen-chance. No guess work. Everywhere and always, scientific knowledge and eternal vigilance.

Canadians ought to be proud of Royal Household Flour. It is no small thing to have to say that the world's most perfect flour is made in Canada from Canadian wheat and has become a world-wide factor through Canadian skill and capital.

"Royal Household" is head and shoulders above ordinary flour in quality and perfection. It is the result of Capital, Skill and Experience which are the parents of scientific milling knowledge.

The best flour for Bread and Pastry is "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD." To try it is to prove it.

Send in your name and address, also the name of your dealer, and "Ogilvie's Book for a Cook," containing 125 excellent Recipes will be sent free of charge.

C. P. R. BUYS PROPERTY ALONG THE WATER FRONT

Property of the William English Estate, Wm. Taylor, R. Denne and Isaac McCaul Passes into Hands of Railway Company — Negotiating for More.

R. A. Elliott & Co., real estate agents, acting for the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., have closed a deal whereby considerable property, lying along the river front, is purchased by the C.P.R. The property of the Wm. English estate, Wm. Taylor and R. Denne, between King and Sherbrooke streets, and that of Isaac McCaul, between Sherbrooke and Charlotte streets, makes up the purchase and the Review is informed that the prices paid were large ones. The C.P.R. want to get control of a much larger amount of property along the river front, but the prices asked by the owners have been raised to such a high mark that at present it appears as though they will not be successful. It is safe to assume that the Railway Company contemplates a movement that would be greatly to the advantage of the city. Just what their intention is cannot at present be ascertained. The property of the Chamberlain estate, that of G. W. Morrow and the Peterborough Canoe Company, between King and Charlotte streets, is wanted, but the prices asked are said to be too high.

However, the matter is in the capable hands of R. A. Elliott & Co., and further announcements of purchases may be made in the near future.

A THRIVING SEASON LOOKED FOR AT KAWARTHA LAKES

Increase in Transient Traffic Expected – Cottagers Making Spring Preparations at Their Cottages — Heavy Run of Bass and Lunge is the Experts' Forecast.

It is rather early in the season to make well based predictions for the summer season at the Kawartha Lakes, but from present indications the season will be a very busy one. The hotels at the various resorts on the lakes are looking for an increased patronage, and the strong inducement of good fishing should be the means of attracting many. Of course the fishing may not be good, in spite of the hopeful outlook, but the prophecy that the bass and lunge will run freely is made by the experts, and, generally speaking, their ante-season forecasts are pretty reliable.

Conditions for the spawn maturing have been much more favorable this spring than last year, owing to the water being lower, and also on account of the fact that there has been no sudden decrease in height like there was last spring, when much of the spawn was left high and dry on the shores and islands.

The cottagers are already beginning to look after the housecleaning and renovating operations at their summer homes. The "Stoney Lake" has made two trips to the lakes, this season, and on both occasions she has carried a large number of cottagers.

Neither the Lakefield Canoe Co. nor the Brown canoe factory have been making canoes especially ordered by tourists or for the summer resorters, and stated yesterday that it was a little early in the season for such orders. They look for a lively season, however, as their output is taxing their manufacturing capacity.

F. J. Moore & Sons are supplying the lumber for extensions and improvements to several cottages, although it is not likely that there will be very extensive operations along these lines this year, the anticipated increase in traffic being expected in transients.

Mr. W. Irwin, of Peterborough, is having a large addition made to his cottage at "Headlands," Stoney Lake, and Mr. W. Mitchell is having a boathouse and sleeping room combined built on his island, above Boschink, opposite Bell's Creek. Mr. Pace, of Toronto, is building a new cottage at Sandy Point, Clear Lake. The cottage will be a good sized one, and will be conveniently arranged. Alterations and improvements are also being effected at Mrs. A. L. Davis' cottage, Stoney Lake. Mr. Thompson, proprietor of the hotel at Mt. Julien, is making improvements to the house.

INTERESTING AND TIMELY LECTURE ON DECORATIVE ART

By Mr. Harold E. Wadely, Under Auspices of Woman's Art Association—A Programme of Clever Contributions by Local Artists.

It was a large and appreciative audience that attended the enjoyable evening's entertainment, arranged for by the Woman's Art Association, at the gymnasium of the Young Woman's Christian Association last night. The lecture on "Decorative Art," by Mr. Harold E. Wadely, manager of the Brenton Carpet Company, was one of exceeding interest and instruction and the audience was one that could and did appreciate the many points brought out by Mr. Wadely during the course of his lecture.

In addition to the lecture Mrs. H. E. Wadely, Miss Lavina Hallihan and Miss Julia Choate contributed. In her recitations, Mrs. Wadely, displayed clever elecutionary powers, and her four numbers earned the unatinted approval of the audience. Miss Hallihan's singing of "A Geisha's Life," and "The Jewel of Asia" was a distinct treat as was also the work of Miss Choate in her violin selections.

Mr. O. W. Dumble acted as chairman during the evening.

Mr. Wadley's lecture was a practical one. He demonstrated, by means of wall papers, friezes, pictures, draperies, floor coverings and other articles incidental to the decoration of a home, and showed how good and bad effects, both to the room and those occupying it, are obtained.

In the matter of decorations it was not altogether a matter of making the home pleasing to the eye. The effect on the disposition of the occupants should be considered. Decorations which tended to add a feeling of restfulness should be used. The modern tendency is to buy a great many pretty articles and to place them about the room without a purpose of carrying out any particular scheme.

By way of illustrating his ideas of room decorations, the lecturer showed several schemes on a framework which he used to represent the walls of a room, and the effects obtained were heartily endorsed by the audience.

In his demonstrations, Mr. Wadely displayed a number of exhibits from the Mendel studio, and these were greatly admired.

At the conclusion of the lecture a vote of thanks to Mr. Wadely, those taking part in the programme, and the Woman's Association, was moved by Mr. A. Mowat and seconded by Judge Hoyles.

The Queen of Irish and Scottish Songs

To all lovers of Irish and Scottish song, a rare treat presents itself. It may be the opportunity of a lifetime. In Australia, England, Scotland, Canada and the United States, wherever Miss Margaret McCann has appeared, enthusiasm has run wild over her rendering of Irish and Scottish songs. Listen to what the "Age" Melbourne, has to say of her.

"Miss Margaret McCann, who is about to leave Australia for America, is taking a bold step. Judging from the amount of support accorded her at her benefit concert in the town hall, on Tuesday evening, there are almost no limits in Melbourne to the degree of appreciation vouchsafed and vouchsafable to the skilful singer of Scottish ballads. Is she then going to a land where these things are better appreciated than they are here? For the idea seems simply impossible. That, however, is her own concern; ours is that in losing her, our local Scots are losing one who has always been successful in giving them the keenest of pleasure. So let us take off our hats to Miss Margaret McCann and ever—as we do in good faith—that her arch delivery of "Doup the Burn, Davie," will take a lot of beating, in the states or elsewhere. On the whole the affair proved one of the most successful events of its kind that has ever been held in the town hall."

Miss McCann will sing at the opening of the new T. A. S. hall on Wednesday and Thursday, April 27th and 28th. All seats reserved. The plan for both evenings will open on Monday morning, April 25th, at Mr. Lynch's drug store. Tickets 50c. and $1.00.

THE HYMNS OF LONG AGO

On Sunday morning next there will be held at Murray St. Baptist church a service of unusual interest. The occasion is the annual Sunday school service. The subject of the day is "The Present and the Past." The hymns sung by the children will be those once so familiar to us, but which have been almost forgotten, and are quite new to the present day. Among others will be sung: "In the Christian's Home in Glory There Remains a Land of Rest," "Around the Throne of God in Heaven," "There is a Happy Land," etc. A full orchestra will accompany the singing, and the school superintendents of the past will assist in the service. Doubtless a large number will be anxious to be present and enjoy this retrospective day.

PETERBOROUGH WELCOMES THE KING'S REPRESENTATIVE

GREAT CROWD AT STATION TO GREET HIS EXCELLENCY

Earl Grey Was Warmly Welcomed by Civic Representatives—Band Played "God Save the King" and "O Canada"—Visit to C.G.E. and Quaker Oats Works.

Peterborough has to-day the honor of welcoming for the first time the vice-regal head of Canada. His Excellency Earl Grey. Extensive and elaborate arrangements have been made for His Excellency's reception and entertainment here, and the committee in charge of arrangements—the Reception Committee of the City Council—have drawn up a comprehensive and interesting programme for the Governor-General's benefit.

His Excellency arrived from Toronto this morning on the 11.28 C.P.R., and was accompanied by the Earl of Lonesborough, military secretary, and Capt. Fife A.D.C. His Worship Mayor Morrow and the City Council met the vice-regal party, and with His Worship the mayor walking by his side His Excellency was escorted through the large and intensely interested gathering to the carriage that awaited him at the north side of the station. The members of the Council followed and took the carriages that were waiting for them. When the train had drawn up His Excellency stepped from the rear coach as the band played "God Save the King." As he walked up the station platform the immense crowd cheered loyally and the distinguished visitor smiled his gracious acknowledgement of the very hearty reception accorded him. As His Excellency was proceeding to his carriage the band played with fine effect, "O Canada," and "Rule Britannia."

From the station the Governor-General's carriage was driven to the plant of the Canadian General Electric Company, and the party were shown through the premises by Mr. Frederic Nicholls, the general manager of the company, and Mr. E. G. Patterson, the superintendent of the works. His Excellency expressed surprise and satisfaction at the size and excellent equipment of the large plant.

From the C.G.E. the party were driven to the Quaker Oats mills, which again evoked congratulatory comment from His Excellency.

Luncheon at the Oriental was served at 1.30.

After the luncheon His Excellency was presented with the civic address of welcome at Central Park. This was followed by a drive around the city and a trip over the lift locks.

ADDRESS FROM CITY READ AT CENTRAL PARK

Mayor Morrow Officially Welcomed His Excellency in Presence of a Large Number of Citizens

A vast concourse of people gathered at Central Park shortly after three o'clock, when an address of welcome from the city was read to His Excellency by His Worship Mayor Morrow. The address was beautifully gotten up and was a very handsome example of artistic and decorative work, as shown in such documents. The pages were bordered with a silk and gold design, rich in color, ornamented with brilliantly colored initials, the first page bearing the arms of Canada and Ontario in heraldic colors. The whole effect was rich and chaste. It was bound in crimson velvet leather with the title stamped in gold, the covers being lined with white satin, tooled in gold on the edges. The seal of the city appeared on the fourth page in colors and gold, opposite the signature of Mayor Morrow. A handsome box having on the cover the crest of the city, was supplied to hold the address. The address was very generally admired and received many words of praise from officials who were unaware that such artistic work could be had in the city. The address was gotten up by Mr. F. H. Dobbin, of the Review, the script being written by Mr. McKone, principal of the Peterborough Business College, who is an expert penman, and whose skill prepared a very handsome piece of work in the engrossing. As a finishing touch to the ceremonies of the day the address was a creditable feature.

The wording of the address was as follows:

To His Excellency The Right Honorable Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada;

May it please Your Excellency:—

The Council of the City of Peterborough desire to express to you on their their own behalf and on behalf of the people of the city the great pleasure it gives them to be honored with a visit from Your Excellency on this occasion. We are pleased because it is a gratification to receive one who has occupied prominent places on the councils and the governments of the Empire, had given eminent service to the King and Government, and had always shown an ardent desire for the welfare of the people and for the best interests of the Empire as a whole.

Most heartily we welcome you as the representative of our beloved Sovereign, for whose person and throne we, in common with all Canadian citizens, entertain the strongest feelings of devotion and loyalty. You have filled the exalted position of Governor of His Majesty's most important possession beyond the seas in a manner that has been most acceptable to the people of this Dominion, and that has assisted greatly in our country's development and progress, which during your term of office has been so markedly rapid, and we are glad that we are to be afforded this opportunity to show you some of the evidences of that prosperity and advancement in this not unimportant part of Canada.

We are not a little proud of our manufacturing industries, of our mer-

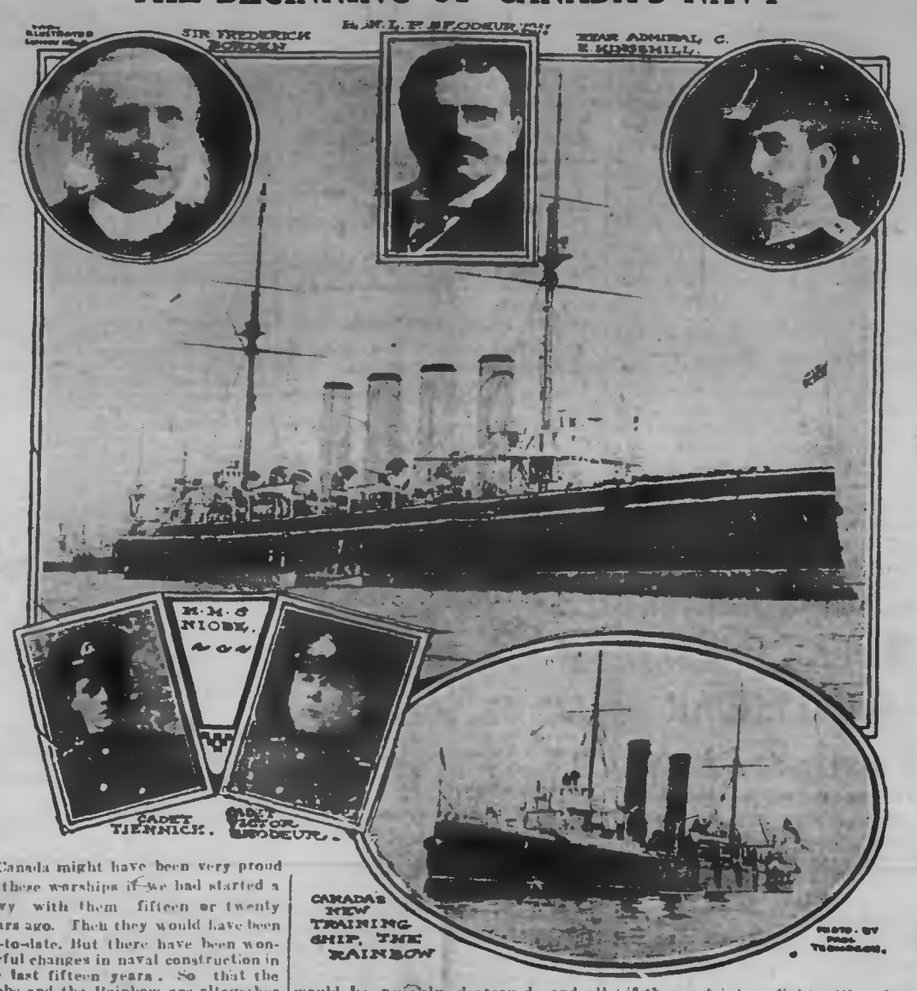
THE BEGINNING OF CANADA'S NAVY



Canada might have been very proud of these warships if we had started a navy with them fifteen or twenty years ago. Then they would have been up-to-date. But there have been wonderful changes in naval construction in the last fifteen years. So that the Niobe and the Rainbow are altogether outclassed by modern warships. They would be quickly destroyed and all the millions invested in them wasted, if they got into a fight with a dreadnought.

ANTI-GAMBLING BILL CAUSES MUCH DISCUSSION IN SENATE

The Upper House May Give it Hard Fight—It is Thought That They May Demand the Evidence When it Comes up for Second Reading.

Ottawa, April 23. A lively debate is anticipated over the Miller anti-racetrack gambling bill in the Senate next Tuesday. This was indicated by the debate which occurred on the second reading yesterday.

It has been taken for granted that the Senate will kill the bill, but in view of the compromise which was reached by the advocates and opponents of the measure in the House, it is now conjectured that the bill will pass.

Senator Watson, on moving the second reading, said he thought explanations could best be given at the committee stage.

Senator Davis said he noticed that places of less than 5,000 population were not to be allowed the same privileges in connection with horse-racing given to places of 15,000 or more. Would the bill stop the annual races which were held in connection with the exhibition at Prince Albert?

The bill was reported to have already entailed an expenditure of over $40,000. That such an amount had to be expended to advance a bill to the compromise point was in itself a serious criticism of the character of the legislation. It was a sample of the bills becoming more numerous each year, which were strenuously promoted by a class of people who wanted to regulate the conduct of other people.

It was an excellent specimen of that class of legislation which was designed to send people to heaven by means of the criminal code. There were so many laws of this sort in existence now that a peaceful citizen could walk across for three days, or three hours, without having made himself liable to be interfered with.

Senator McHugh said that in the committee stage he would like some explanation given of an apparent discrimination between running and trotting races.

The bill was read the second time, and Senator Watson moved that the bill be set down for consideration in committee of the whole for Tuesday next.

Senator Wilson declared that it was unreasonable for the promoter of such a serious bill to have refused the Senate full explanation before the second reading was given. Senator Lougheed said that the course followed indicated the assumption that the Senate was more moral than the Commons, where the measure had occupied the attention of the special committee for at least seven weeks.

The Senate was equally entitled to have evidence given before a special committee.

Senator Davis said that this was not the bill with which the Commons had been occupied for seven weeks, but was a substitute bill of an entirely different character. For that reason it should go before a special committee for all parties, and particularly the moral reformers, to have a chance of presenting evidence.

Senator Watson said that for the time being he represented the moral reformers, and he thought if they were satisfied with the compromised bill, the other side should be.

The motion for the committee stage on Tuesday was adopted.

ALBERT HOLMES STILL AT LARGE

Cardinal Farmer Will Probably Die Before Being Taken.

Cardinal, Ont., April 23.—An unbalanced mind led to the murder of Nathan C. Bilton by Albert Holmes at the farm of the latter near this village Thursday morning. The evidence at the inquest yesterday made this plain. The two men were on friendly terms. Bolton was assisting Holmes to cut up a pig, the latter not feeling well, and when seized with an uncontrollable impulse to kill, while insane, Holmes cut down Bolton with an axe.

Ethel Holmes, daughter of the murderer, a pretty miss of twenty-two, told her story in an unaffected manner. She was sitting in the kitchen when groans came from the adjoining shed, and she saw Bolton with his head split open. Her father had disappeared through a side door, going directly to the woods.

Though diligent search was made for the fugitive, no trace of him had been secured up to this morning. It is said that if he remains in hiding the matter of his capture will not be easily accomplished, as the section is densely wooded, making a search difficult. It is believed he will kill himself rather than submit to arrest.

Husband and wife had met in the barnyard, but it is not known whether they exchanged words, as Mrs. Holmes is too ill to attend the inquest.

Holmes had been greatly depressed since purchasing the farm from Bolton. He frequently said that he had made a mistake, that the farm was too big to work.

Holmes' mental worry had resulted in him attempting suicide one week ago by drinking poison. He worried over the disgrace of his foolish act, especially as he was an elder of the Presbyterian church.

Dr. Locke swore that Holmes, having suicidal tendencies, the sight of the blood, and the axe led him to murder in a moment of weakness.

The first trace of Holmes was obtained yesterday from a tramp who says he passed him on the Grand Trunk track near Iroquois Thursday night going east.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC LEGISLATION IS UPHELD BY AYLESWORTH

Decision is Given by Minister of Justice Refusing the Application of Opponents to Have the Whitney Government Power Scheme Declared Ultra Vires.

Toronto, April 23—The Hydro-Electric power legislation passed by the Ontario Legislature, for which disallowance was asked by certain financial interests in Toronto and Montreal, is not ultra vires of the Legislature, and the petition for disallowance is refused. This is the substance of the report made by Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, to the Governor-General in council, and received at the Parliament buildings yesterday. In this finding, the Minister of Justice says:

"The undersigned has carefully considered this legislation, and the various objections urged against it. The ground that the act is ultra vires of the Legislature, although taken by some of the petitions, and to some extent urged by counsel advocating the disallowance of the act, is, in the opinion of the undersigned, quite untenable. The act clearly relates solely to municipal institutions in the province, or matters merely of a local or private nature in the province, all of which are subjects declared by section 92 of the British North America Act, 1867, to be within the exclusive authority of the Provincial Legislature."

The act, for which a disallowance petition was drawn up, was passed last year by the Legislature "to validate certain contracts entered into with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario . . ." In this act, the contracts with the various municipalities were confirmed, although actions were commenced in the courts to have them declared void. Then the electrical interests went to Ottawa.

In his preamble, the Minister of Justice reviews the legislation, the act provided that the contracts with the municipalities should be varied in certain particulars, that the names of some municipalities should be stricken out and that of Ingersoll added, and, in the recital, it is enumerated that in view of certain doubts as to the validity of the contracts in question, such doubts should be removed.

The strongest passage in the document, which consists of a dozen typewritten pages, is taken from an opinion of Sir Barnes Peacock, read on behalf of the Privy Council in the case of Hodge v. The Queen, which says:

"When the British North America Act enacted that there should be a Legislature for Ontario, and that its legislative assembly should have exclusive to make laws for the province and for provincial purposes in relation to the matters enumerated in section 92, it conferred powers not in any sense to be exercised by delegation from or as agents of the Imperial Parliament, but authority as plenary and as ample within the limits prescribed by section 92 as the Imperial Parliament in the plenitude of its power possessed and could bestow. Within these limits of subject and area, the local Legislature is supreme, and has the same authority as the Imperial Parliament, or the Parliament of the Dominion."

WHOLE WORLD MOURNS THE DEATH OF GREAT HUMORIST

Mark Twain's Funeral Will be Simple—Only Relatives and Close Friends Will Attend the Services at Which Rev. Henry Van Dyke Will Preach.

New York, April 23.—A simple funeral service over the body of Samuel L. Clemens, will be held in this city this afternoon. The body will then be taken to Elmira, N.Y., where it will be buried beside those of his wife and children. Later a public memorial service will be held in a large hall.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton University will preach the funeral sermon to-day, which will be held at the Brick Presbyterian Church, 37th street and Fifth avenue, at 3 o'clock. The service will be attended by only relatives and close friends of the dead author. There will be no pall-bearers, and although final arrangements have not been made the service probably will consist of merely a short address by Dr. Van Dyke. There probably will be no music. The body will be brought to New York from Redding, Conn., on a special car.

At Elmira another simple service will be held. This service will probably be at the home of Gen. Langdon, a relative of Mr. Clemens' wife, and so far as now known will consist simply of a short address by Jos. Twitchell of Hartford, Conn., who was one of Mr. Clemens' oldest friends.

Memorial Library.

Redding, Conn., April 23.—The free public library which the literary colony here is building, will start as a permanent monument to the town's most distinguished citizen. The building is to be known as the "Mark Twain Memorial Library."

One of Mr. Clemens' last acts was to draw a check for $6,000 as his contribution towards the building fund. Mr. Clemens also gave a great part of his private library to the institution.

Greatest Humorist.

London, Eng., April 23.—The Daily Mail says that it is no exaggeration to say that Mark Twain was the greatest humorist the modern world had known.

"With the exception of Tolstoi," says The Morning Leader, "probably there is no writer whose death would rouse more universal emotions of respect and regret."

"Huck Finn" Weeps.

Paris, Mo., April 23.—B. C. M. (Barney) Farthing said to be the original of "Huckleberry Finn," wept when he heard of Mark Twain's death. "The old days are passing," he said, "even the long sweep of the majestic Mississippi seems to have dwindled. The noise of its traffic and the music of its deep-throated whistles, are practically no more. The man who put into words for the delight of the world the pictures of the great river is dead."

All business places and city offices will be closed on the day of the funeral and memorial services will be held at the same hour as the services in the east.

A movement has been started to have Clemens' boyhood home purchased by the state, and State Senator McAllister said that a bill to this effect would be introduced in the next Legislature.

Nearly Eighty.

Salt Lake City, Utah, April 23.—"Mark Twain lacked only six months and nine days of four score years," said Judge C. C. Goodwin, a veteran editor, in commenting on the death of the humorist.

"I know he said that he was only 75," continued the judge, "but when we were in Virginia City, Nevada, Mark was older than I was, and I am 78. Here is the record of it." He opened a book of biographies by Amelia J. Carver, published in 1869. There it was: "Samuel L. Clemens, born Nov. 30, 1830."

CHINESE STILL RIOTING AND PEOPLE FLEE

Hankow, China, April 23.—The situation in Hunan Province is reported as critical. Women and children are fleeing for their lives from Changsha, the capital. A number of villages near that city have been reduced to ashes by native mobs. The country is placarded with threats to kill all foreigners.

This disquieting news was brought by missionary refugees who arrived here from Changsha and near-by missionary stations yesterday forenoon. Many of them had traveled thirty miles on foot. Their houses had been burned and they had lost all of their personal effects.

The missionaries stated that gunboats in the river have their guns trained upon Changsha and near-by points, and have afforded a refuge for many foreigners. Three thousand Chinese imperial soldiers are occupying the stragetic points of the capital and detachments are being hurried to the outlying districts where rioting is reported.

Many Chinese have been killed. In one instance a technical school was set afire and thirty students were burned to death.

When vessels approached Changsha to rescue the imperilled ones the Chinese mob saturated junks with kerosene oil from the looted stations of the Standard Oil Co., and setting them afire allowed them to float down the stream in an attempt to fire the oncoming steamers.

King Edward went by automobile to Lourdes, near Pau, France, yesterday, where he visited the shrine and watched, bareheaded, the procession of pilgrims.

The Dominion Marine and Fisheries committee has decided to continue the lobster season as at present, abolishing the size limit, except for St. John and Charlotte County, N.B.

AN EXPRESS TRAIN CRASHES INTO CAR

Kingston, April 23.—At noon, when a Kingston & Pembroke Railway express was passing over Montreal street, it crashed into a street car, and a dozen passengers had miraculous escapes. C. L. O. Tampe, Frederick, Maryland, received injuries to back and head; Thelma and Lillian McDermott, were cut by glass; Ruth and Irene Doyle, daughters of John Doyle, sustained injuries to legs and arms, and James Watson, a boy, was cut with glass. All will recover.

The street car is a total wreck. The engine struck the car in the centre and the passengers made their escape at both ends. Three Toronto travelers, William Buck, J. K. Wallace and R. McGill, had a thrilling experience, but got out safely.

An enquiry into the cause of the accident will be held. A defective semaphore is given as the cause. The fact that the train was running, as it had just rounded a curve, prevented a catastrophe.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

THE ENQUIRY HAS COST $30,000

Ottawa, April 23.—The Liberal committee which is investigating the Lumsden charges will finish on Tuesday, there being one more witness to be heard. The evidence will be reported to the House almost immediately and some stirring debates are anticipated.

Frequently there has been no quorum present, one or other of the four members being away, and the point will be raised whether the report, based on the evidence taken without the necessary quorum, is a valid one. The enquiry has cost about $30,000.

Annulment Confirmed.

Montreal, April 23.—The Court of Review unanimously confirmed yesterday the judgment of the Superior Court in the marriage annulment of William Agnew against Miss Gober of Kingston. His parents brought the action to annul the marriage on the ground that their son was not of age and did not secure their consent.

MAN STRUCK BY CAR AND KILLED

Toronto, April 23.—D. Plews, aged 68, a cleaner at the general postoffice in East Adelaide street, was struck down by westbound car 1,046, at Queen and James streets, at 8.20 last night, and died in St. Michael's Hospital at 9.55 without having regained consciousness. The car was in charge of motorman 126 and conductor 449.

The old man was crossing the street from north to south, and apparently did not see or hear the approaching car, which was said by eye-witnesses to be going "pretty fast." He was struck on the side and thrown to the north of the tracks. The police ambulance removed him to the hospital, where it was found his skull was fractured.

WOLTER GOES TO ELECTRIC CHAIR

New York, April 23.—Albert Wolter, a youth of 19, who was "crazy" about women, must die in the electric chair for the murder of Ruth Wheeler, a 15-year-old stenographer. After one hour and fifty minutes of deliberation, a jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree at 10.20 o'clock last night.

The boy's counsel said yesterday afternoon that Wolter was too tenderhearted to harm a cat, but twelve men decided last night that he had strangled Ruth Wheeler and thrust her while yet alive into his fireplace, where, soaked with oil, her body burned. He had been asleep in his cell—and sleeping soundly—while the jury was deliberating on his fate.

All eyes immediately shifted toward the prisoner, but he was stolid as a piece of stone. As he was being handcuffed to officers, preparatory to being taken back to the Tombs, he gazed about him unconcernedly.

Neither relatives of the murderer nor of his victim were in court to hear the verdict. "I don't want to talk to-night—I'm tired and I want to get a little good sleep first," he said.

Ruth Wheeler was killed on March 24. Wolter was arrested on March 26, and was placed on trial last Monday.

CUSTOMS FRAUD AT NEW YORK

New York, April 23.—George F. Bedell, who was chief clerk for James F. Vaill, former deputy surveyor of the port, and who had charge of the weighing department, was arrested yesterday by United States Marshal Henkel, on an indictment, charging conspiracy to defraud the Government out of custom duties.

Yesterday afternoon Marshal Henkel arrested Charles D. Drew and Charles H. Wardwell, former assistant customs weighers. The prisoners were arraigned and held in $5,000 bail each on charges connecting them with Bedell. Bedell is held in $5,000 bail.

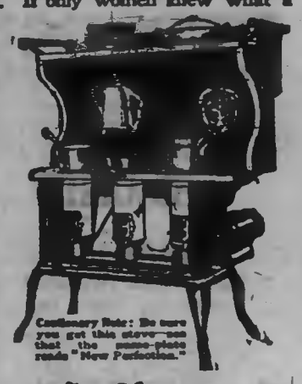
BISHOP FALLON IS AT LONDON

London, April 23.—Bishop Fallon, the new head of London diocese, arrived in London last evening. He was met by local clergy and taken to Mount St. Joseph, where he will remain in retirement until Monday, when the consecration takes place. When he stepped on to the London station platform last night it was his first visit to London.

A Storekeeper Says:

"A lady came into my store lately and said:

"'I have been using a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove all winter in my apartment. I want one now for my summer home. I think these oil stoves are wonderful. If only women knew what a comfort they are, they would all have one. I spoke about my stove to a lot of my friends, and they were astonished. They thought that there was smell and smoke from an oil stove, and that it heated a room just like any other stove. I told them of my experience, and one after another they got one, and now, not one of them would give here up for five times its cost.'"



Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

The lady who said this had thought an oil stove was all right for quickly heating milk for a baby, or boiling a kettle of water, or to make coffee quickly in the morning, but she never dreamed of using it for difficult or heavy cooking. Now—she knows.

Do you really appreciate what a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove means to you? No more coal to carry, no more coming to the dinner table so tired out that you can't eat. Just light a Perfection Stove and immediately the heat from an intense blue flame shoots up to the bottom of pot, kettle or oven. But the room isn't heated. There is no smoke, no smell, no outside heat, no drudgery in the kitchen where one of these stoves is used.

ELECTIONS IN THE AUTUMN

The Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Gazette says it is rumored in Ottawa that the Laurier Government will bring on general elections in the autumn, although in the natural course of events there would not be another election until three years later. In support of this report it is stated that the Liberals are very active in sending out campaign literature, that meetings are being held in many constituencies, and that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is about to make a tour of the Northwest. The chief reason for bringing on the elections so soon is supposed to be the fear that when the people of Canada become acquainted with all the facts connected with the squandering of public money on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway the Laurier Government will be completely wrecked. Leading Liberals think that if the facts can be suppressed until after an election they may get another lease of office.

THE CITY OF VANCOUVER

The Canadian Courier of Toronto, says:—"Vancouver has been for the best of sixty years the only mainland port by which Canada could be got into from the west."

As a matter of fact Vancouver was founded in 1885, and in the following year a great conflagration destroyed it, leaving only one house standing. New Westminster on the Fraser river was the mainland part of British Columbia for many years before Vancouver had any existance. The city of Vancouver is now estimated to have over one hundred thousand inhabitants. Last month Vancouver led all the cities of Canada in the value of building permits issued. Toronto stood next to Vancouver. Undoubtedly this British Columbia town is destined to be one of the greatest cities in the world. Its growth in twenty-five years from nothing to a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants is marvelous. Not only is it the Pacific terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway, but there is every reason to believe that the Grand Trunk Pacific and Canadian Northern Railway will both have lines running into it.

NAVAL AUTONOMY

Liberal newspapers and politicians are trying to create the impression that Mr. Robert L. Borden, the Conservative leader and his followers in Parliament wish to destroy Canadian autonomy because they declare that the Canadian fleet should automatically be at the service of the British Admiralty the moment war is declared, whereas Sir Wilfrid Laurier says Canadian ships shall take no part in any war until he and his Cabinet Ministers decide whether it is a just war or not. But no one is proposing that the British Parliament or any other Parliament but the Canadian Parliament shall have any authority over the Canadian navy. It is simply proposed that our own Parliament shall insert a clause in its own bill that the Canadian navy shall always be at the service of the British Admiralty in time of war, unless recalled by the Canadian Parliament. Our Parliament could recall the Canadian navy at any time, if such a clause were inserted in the navy bill, but unless our navy was recalled it would be ready to go into action the moment war began. Such an arrangement would not in the least lessen the power of the Canadian Parliament, but it would lessen the power of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to prevent the Canadian navy being of some use to the Empire at the outbreak of war.

OPINION OF THE TIMES

The British newspapers are always extremely careful about criticising the actions of any colonial government, but they are always quick to express approval of anything that seems worthy of praise. The attitude of most of them towards the Laurier naval plans is one of silent disapproval, but the London Times thinks that one clause of the Canadian Navy bill is so very objectionable that it does not hesitate to condemn it. Sir Wilfrid Laurier speaking in explanation of the clause said it meant that in case of the British Empire being involved in war the Canadian warships should take no part whatever in it until the Canadian Government decided whether to participate in the war or not. In reference to this the London Times says:—

"In the sudden crisis of a declaration of war against us, which might be upon us in a night, instantaneous and effective action could only be secured by instantaneous automatic adhesion to the plans of a central command. Outlying divisions of the fleet responsible to separate control would inevitably be left to their own devices. No enemy which encountered them would stop to enquire whether or not the Governments controlling them had decided to participate in the war. Each Parliament must indeed control the forces which it creates, but these are dangerous responsibilities, from which neither Parliaments nor Governments could absolve such forces after the declaration of war. It is because the clause which Mr. Borden criticised may tend to obscure these all-important facts that we regret its inclusion in the bill."

Coughs, Colds
Bronchitis

If there is an ailment in the throat or chest, it is surely essential that the remedy be conveyed direct to the affected part. It's because the healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed into the sore, irritated throat and bronchial tubes, because its balsamic fumes kill the germs and destroy the cause of the trouble. These are the reasons why Catarrhozone never yet failed to cure a genuine case of Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, or Throat Trouble.

The wonderfully soothing vapor of Catarrhozone instantly reaches the furthest recesses of the lungs, produces a healing, curative effect that is impossible with a tablet or liquid, which goes merely to the stomach, and fails entirely to help the throat or lungs.

To permanently cure your winter ills, your coughs, sneezing, and Catarrh, by all means use a tried and proven remedy like Catarrhozone. But beware of the substitutor and imitator. Look for Catarrhozone only. 50c and $1, at all dealers. 10

WORTHLESS PROMISES

For many years the Prohibitionists of Canada looked upon the Liberal party as especially friendly to their cause. Sir Wilfrid Laurier always had words of good cheer for them and when they waited upon the late Liberal Government of Ontario they were always made happy with promises, which, however, ambiguous they might be, were supposed to mean something. They found after a time that Sir Wilfrid's promises were made to be broken and that those of the Ontario Liberals meant nothing. Of late they have been looking hopefully to the Senate, a body which is now preponderatingly Liberal, in the hope that it would pass Sir Richard Scott's bill to prevent the shipment of alcoholic beverages into prohibition districts. The Senate has killed this bill. The Conservatives do not try to deceive the Prohibitionists with false promises. They do not promise much, but what they do promise they carry out.

HE GOT RELIEF RIGHT AWAY

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cure Kidney Disease of Eight Years Standing

That's what they did for William, Q. Cain, and now he says: "Dodd's Kidney Pills are a great Medicine."

Mapleton, Albert Co., N.B., April 22. —(Special.)—"When I began taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I got relief right away. I have found Dodd's Kidney Pills a great medicine." So says William Q. Cain, well known and highly respected in this neighborhood. And Mr. Cain has a very good reason for making so emphatic a statement. For eight years he was a sufferer from Kidney Disease, and did not seem to be able to get relief.

"Why, I was so bad," Mr. Cain goes on to state, "and my kidneys bothered me so that if I would go to pick anything off the ground I would fall." But Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him just as they have cured thousands of other sufferers all over Canada. They never fail to cure Kidney Disease of any kind. Not once, but scores of times, they have vanquished Bright's Disease, the most deadly of all kidney troubles, while every day brings stories of cures of Rheumatism, Lumbago, Dropsy and Heart Disease from various parts of the Dominion. Other kidney medicines may cure. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure.

OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ont.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I wrote to her some time ago I was a very sick woman, suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the female organs, and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend this medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and think they are fine."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, Lindsay, Ontario.

We cannot understand why women will take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, without first trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

Four of A Kind

Two American Gentlemen Make Love to Two Peasants In Brittany With Serious Results.

By ALLAN WRIGHT.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

One summer day two maidens of Brittany dressed in the costumes worn by the peasant classes, walking along a country road, came upon two young art students sketching. One was seated on a stool beside a bridge crossing a brook, at work before his touring easel, while the other was lying on his back on the grass near by smoking a cigarette. The two girls as they crossed the bridge gave a sidelong glance at the canvas on the easel. The artist was putting on the finishing touches and had succeeded in making a very pretty picture. One of the girls stopped for a moment and exclaimed under her breath, "How beautiful!" and was proceeding on her way when the artist stopped her.

"Will you not tell me," he called, "what it is in my picture that you like?"

"Certainly, monsieur," she replied in a very sweet voice. "It is the sunlight, sifted through the leaves of the trees, dancing on the water."

These two young men were George Allinson of Chicago and Gilbert Wallace of San Francisco. It was Allinson who addressed the girls. Wallace arose and joined the other three.

"It seems to me," the girl added, still regarding the painting, "that there is something wanting under the cottage on the bank in the background."

Allison looked up at her surprised. "You are right," he said. "I have omitted to put in the reflection of the house in the water."

This was the beginning of an acquaintance between the two Americans and the two girls. Their conversations were carried on in French, which the young men spoke tolerably well. Both the girls were comely, and it seemed to the men that there was something about them to render them superior to their class. Having been asked their names, they gave them as Jeanne and Fanchette. Jeanne, the one who criticised Allinson's painting, was a brunette, Fanchette a blond.

Nothing can be more delightful than a flirtation between two girl friends on the one side and tow men friends on the other, especially when there is no clashing in preferences. Allinson and Jeanne paired; Wallace and Fanchette did the same. The four met frequently and walked and chatted, most of their intercourse being in company of the whole. The girls, who were circumspect, were not to be found by the young men separated, though when all met they would at times stroll in pairs in different directions.

The time came when the two Americans who had entered upon this association with two peasant girls for a bit of pastime began to find that there was a serious side to it. Their communications grew more and more like lovemaking, and the girls gave a willing ear. In time the expression of pleasure and amusement gave way to a thoughtful cast. Were they falling in love? Were the girls giving away their hearts? The men could not marry French peasant girls. Yet would it be honorable, having won their hearts, to desert them?

Allinson and Wallace consulted with each other over their position, fully realizing its seriousness, but making no effort to break with the girls before matters should be worse. Preparations were made between them to fold their easels and sketching chairs and go to Paris, from whence they came, and thus cut the Gordian knot. But when one was ready to go the other backed out. And so they drifted as in a boat toward a cataract.

They have a curious custom in Brittany. On certain fete days the marriageable girls appear in red petticoats with white or yellow borders round them. The number of borders denote the portion the father is willing to give his daughter. Each white band denotes $20 per annum; each yellow band represents $200 a year.

One day when this double pair were together the girls said that one of these fetes was to come off and it would be pleasant for them all to meet there. Neither of the young men realised how far he had gone in his affair till the girl he was devoted to in a roundabout way hinted that he would learn just what dowry he might expect her to bring him. The young men agreed to meet the girls at the fete; then when the former were alone together they compared notes, each admitting to the other the hint he had received as to the information he could get as to the dowry his girl would bring him.

The matter now looked serious indeed. The two men spent much time—indeed, all their time—endeavoring to find a way out of the escapade, neither of them wishing to find such a way. They drifted into the hall as they had drifted into the affair itself, though they made a resolution to show the girls that they did not consider the affair of any serious consequence by doing considerable of their dancing with others. But they had been making such resolutions ever since the affair commenced.

"Dear little things!" remarked Allinson to Wallace. "They will manage to be especially interested in the stripes on their petticoats!"

"And if either of them can show a yellow band she'll regard the matter fixed beyond a doubt. Fancy you, with an income of a thousand, being caught by a dowry of two hundred a year."

"And fancy you, heir to a big property, being caught by a couple of white stripes representing $20 a year each."

"Do you know what I think we deserve?" said Wallace. "We deserve to be roasted over a slow fire."

"You mean you deserve that. You made eyes at Fanchette the moment you saw her."

"You began it yourself by asking her to criticise your picture."

"Let's cut this fete and take the evening train to Paris."

"We'll take the train in the morning."

"Is that a go?"

"Yes. Here's my hand on it."

These words were spoken as they entered the dancing room. There were the two girls waiting for them.

"By Jove!" exclaimed Wallace. "Your girl has a double yellow stripe—four hundred a year. That with your thousand would enable you to live in this beautiful country and daub at your inclination."

"Yours has but a single white stripe. But it's just as well since you have a cool twenty thousand a year."

Each man walked up to the girl he was entangled with and asked her to dance. As Allinson approached Jeanne she looked down to adjust the fall of her skirt and gazed proudly upon her two yellow bands. Fanchette, however, looked upon her single white one despondently.

The music was not bad, the girls looked very pretty, and between the dances there was moonlight outside. Somehow it seemed to each of these two young men that it could not be possible that the girl he was with was a peasant. There was just enough of his own thinking self left to make him understand that he was looking through rose colored glasses. Each man danced inside, then strolled with his girl out into a flower garden. The flowers, lighted by a full moon, did not appear more heavenly than the girl whose warm hand rested on his arm. When the ball was over and the two men friends went away together neither spoke for some time. Then Allinson said:

"I've made an ass of myself."

"Same here."

"I've offered myself."

"Same here."

"I wish we could meet the fool killer on the way home."

"It would be the only way out of it."

"What are we going to do?"

"What we agreed last night—take the train this morning to Paris. There, away from these two girls, we may find some solution of the problem."

The next morning they breakfasted in silence, went to the train in silence and rode to Paris in the same unsociable condition. Each had given his fiancee his address and begged her to write him at once and two or three times a day. On the arrival of the first mail that could bring a letter from Brittany each feared he would get a letter, and each was disappointed because he did not get one.

No letter came the next day nor the next nor the next.

"What does it mean?" asked Wallace.

"Don't know," replied Allinson.

"I've a mind to go and find out."

"Like the man who jumped into the brambie bush a second time to scratch his eyes in again."

"You're right there. I won't go."

At the end of a week the two men were in a fever. Though they had probably been let out of the affair comfortably, they would have preferred some other way of being let out. That's the trouble in such matters—each party prefers to do the breaking off. They were thinking of going back to Brittany to find out what was the matter when they met with a surprise. They received a card. It read thus:

Miss Grace Nettleton and Miss Leola Thorne would be pleased to see Mr George Allinson and Mr. Gilbert Wallace at a musicale to be given at 12 Rue de S. on the evening of Oct. 7 at 9 p. m.

"Who in thunder are Grace Nettleton and Leola Thorne?" exclaimed Allinson.

Wallace said nothing for a while. His eyes were glued to the card. Presently he broke silence.

"George, it seems to me there's a nigger in the fence."

"What do you mean?"

"I have a theory. It's this: Those two girls we have been courting are either American or English girls studying music in Paris. They went to Brittany for a vacation and for some reason best known to themselves—probably to better mingle with the people—assumed peasants' costumes. They just simply wiped the floor with us."

"You don't mean it!"

"I do. Look at their names, Nettleton and Thorne. I feel a prickly sensation all over."

"Well," exclaimed Allinson, "my girl has made a bargain, and I'm bound to hold her to it."

"So I will with mine if I can."

The two young men, immaculately dressed, went to the musicale, where they were received by the two girls who had snared them. She who had been "Jeanne" wore two yellow silk bands around her skirt, while "Fanchette's" costume was decorated by a single white one. Jeanne turned out to have $200,000 in her own right, and Fanchette was heir to a million. They were both Americans.

The young men expected to see a pair of dancing eyes in each girl's head, but the triumph was well concealed. Though two pairs of lovers made a long wooing with many setbacks, the affair terminated in a double wedding.

What French Folks Eat.

The French breakfast is invariably the same—a bowl of cafe au lait and bread and butter. It is the only time in the day when butter is given to one. At noon one is served with fish and bread without butter, or a vegetable and bread. At night there will be soup, a bit of meat, whatever vegetable was cooked in the soup, and wine. Wine is the common beverage of the country, but it is no heavier than lemonade. The poorer people do not live so well as this. They have bread and cafe au lait or chocolate for breakfast and for supper, and a salad (which is the cheapest of all foods there), or pot-au-feu for the meal of the day. Dandelion is served as a salad, and never cooked.

FOR THE HOSTESS.

Suggestions For Decorating the Covers of Guest Books.

As a little addition to a well furnished guest room there is a book in which each visitor writes his or her name and the date of the visit. It is a pretty idea, and when decorated with designs or colors that harmonize with the room this booklet gives an air of completeness which is very gratifying to a guest.

Suggestions are here offered for decorating the covers of guest books. Paints or dyes will be found to give satisfactory color results, and the designs you will trace from the drawings.

If you decide to try the circular design transfer the drawing by means of carbon paper to the front cover of a plain linen backed blank book. Any shade of paint looks well. Of course it is best when it reflects the color scheme of the room. The conventional design is always in good taste. The letters look well in the same color or in black ink.

Yellow on gray linen or blue on tan is a charming combination. Black is always permissible for outlining or backgrounds.

A daisy design is very effective in white and pale green on any dark background—brown, for instance. It is simple and can be dashed off in a few minutes.

Pansies for thoughts of your guest furnish another form of easy decoration. In so many colors does this saucy flower come that it offers endless possibilities.

There are the yellow and white combinations for your yellow room and all shades of purple for the lavender guest room. Blue, too, can be made to color the petals, and brown and reds are also ready for your use.

Paint the stems with pale green. In spring or summer a guest book of this design is irresistible beside a bowl of the fragrant flowers.

An ingenious worker can make a detachable cover or slip of any material for her guest book and vary the cover with the furnishing of the room at different seasons. Embroidery might be a happy medium if time be one of your assets.

CIRCULAR PATTERN.

"There is a special delight in writing my name in a private register," said one guest the other day. Yes; you will agree with her when you see the pleased recognition of your effort to attend to the details of the guest room of your home.

How Wise Woman Keeps Maids.

She doesn't nag.

System is her strong point.

She has regular duties and sticks to them.

She knows her own mind and does not distract with changing orders.

She never loses her temper or permits it to be lost by her subordinates.

She expects to be obeyed in her own home, but does not give impossible commands.

She keeps the children within bounds and does not permit them to impose upon the workers in the household.

She makes her maids comfortable. Their bedrooms, bathrooms and kitchen are as attractive as she can make them.

She provides if possible a special sitting room with a writing desk, work table, easy chairs and a shelf of interesting books.

She does not refuse permission to have callers outside of working hours and is willing to give extra days off when occasion warrants.

She takes a friendly interest in the affairs of her maids, but never degenerates into a regulator or pryer into those affairs.

In return she expects good work faithfully done and a willingness on the part of her maid to help in an emergency.

Renovating Furniture.

To remove a dent from a table or cabinet cover it with four thicknesses of paper that has been wet and then set a very hot iron on the surface for only a minute. The steam will raise the compressed wood layers. To remove scratches an excellent furniture polish is made of equal parts of alcohol, olive oil and pure cider vinegar. Faded spots in wood caused by heat or light can be taken out by rubbing with linseed oil or sweet oil mixed with an eighth part of alcohol. Old linen or flannel rags are best to use for this purpose.

Two Cases.

The clerk of arraigns on assize was swearing the jury when a juryman said:

"Speak up! I cannot hear what you say."

The presiding judge asked him if he were deaf.

"Yes, my lord, of one ear."

"Well," responded the judge, "you may go, for it is necessary that jurymen should hear both sides."

Another judge, however, on a like objection, said:

"Oh, let him be sworn. We only hear one side of a case at a time."

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys, and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. A WELL KNOWN MAGISTRATE SAVED AS BY A MIRACLE

REDUCED TO A SKELETON AND Doctors Pronounced Case Incurable

SAYS HE OWES HIS LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Magistrate Speers' signed statement illustrates the unfailing curative and tonic properties of "Fruit-a-tives"—the marvellous fruit medicine that has brought health and strength to thousands in every part of the Dominion.

HENRY SPEERS, Esq., J.P.

MOORFIELD, ONT., March 25th, 1909.

"I feel that my complete recovery from what seemed inevitable death, is practically a miracle. I suffered from severe indigestion for nearly two years, and became almost a skeleton. I could not work—could not even walk. Two experienced doctors pronounced my case incurable. They could do nothing for me as they said my heart was affected. I looked forward to death in a short time. I not only had the doctors but tried many remedies and treatments, but got no better.

"My son asked me to try "Fruit-a-tives", and from the outset of taking these wonderful tablets, I was better and gradually this medicine completely cured me, and I have gained over thirty pounds in weight. I am well, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives". I am so well that I have sold my farm and bought 200 acres more land. I make this statement voluntarily for the sake of humanity, as I believe my recovery is a miracle, and I am convinced that "Fruit-a-tives" is a wonderful cure for Stomach Trouble".

HENRY SPEERS, J.P.

"Fruit-a-tives" cured Mr. Speers because "Fruit-a-tives" is the most wonderful stomach, heart and nerve tonic in the world. "Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on the stomach, insures sound digestion, regulates bowels and kidneys, purifies the blood, and relieves the distressing irritation of the heart.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit juices. By the marvellous discovery of a well known physician, fruit juices are combined with heart and nerve tonics in such a way that a new compound is formed. It is this new compound—one of the greatest discoveries of the age—that has saved thousands of lives. It is why "Fruit-a-tives" cures when all else fails—why "Fruit-a-tives" gives instant relief when even the doctors cannot relieve the trouble. We state it, without hesitation, that "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure every case of Indigestion and Dyspepsia, if properly used.

Remember, there is nothing else "just as good" or "just the same" as "Fruit-a-tives". Insist on having "Fruit-a-tives" and see that you get the genuine. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent post paid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stop Pain in the Bladdder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the backaches and pains in the back, the growing muscle weakness, spots before the eyes, yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps, unnatural short breath, sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K. 1811, Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power or you will be the judge, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

A HINT TO YOUNG MOTHERS

Don't walk up and down the floor with a cross, restless child. Nothing can be more demoralizing to the little one, and it is a serious task upon the mother's strength and nerves. When a child is peevish and cross there is probably some little derangement of the stomach or bowels, and a dose of Baby's Own Tablets will remove the cause of the trouble and enable the little one to sleep soundly. Mrs. W. Bouffard, Piopolis, Que., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets superior to all other remedies for curing constipation and making teething easy. They also promote healthful sleep, and I recommend them to other mothers." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

UNJUST ATTACK UPON ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

The Church Does Not Own the Crown Hotel Building and Has Never Been in Any Way Responsible for the Sale of Liquor on the Property.

A letter signed "South-End," which appeared in The Review the other day, insinuated that St. John's church was responsible for the existence of one of the hotels which has been deprived of its license. This is a grave injustice to the church. The land on which the hotel stands does belong to the church, but the building does not. Many years ago the land was leased for a long term of years for the purpose of erecting a building for the Commercial Bank, with no anticipation that it would ever be used for any other purpose. After the failure of the bank the owners of the building converted it into a hotel, the church having no voice or influence in the matter, as the land was leased without any restriction as to what the building should be used for because it was not imagined at the time, that it would ever be used for any other purpose than a bank. It is evident that St. John's church cannot be justly held responsible for the existence of the hotel on the property. While the church does not own the building and has never been in any way responsible for it, influence has been steadily exerted to keep the character of the hotel as high as possible.

The church has never derived any revenue from the hotel.

In view of these facts the insinuation contained in the letter signed "South-End," was clearly unjust.

P. C. I. HOCKEY CLUB AT HOME

Most enjoyable and successful was the "At Home" of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute Hockey Club, carried out at the Conservatory of Music hall last evening. The attendance, mostly young people, numbered two hundred and the scene presented throughout the affair was a particularly pleasing one. The decorations of college pennants and the colors of the P.C.I. club were tastefully arranged. Music for dancing was furnished by Mr. C. Bodley, of Toronto, in that artist's usual highly commendable manner. The caterer of the evening was Mr. T. Hoppers and the supper proved to be an excellent one.

To Mr. Garnet Rankin, the secretary, and his committee much credit is due for the able and satisfactory manner in which all arrangements tending to the success of the "At Home" were carried out.

The patronesses were: Mrs. John Crane, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Mrs. G. M. Hayes, Mrs. J. K. Hodgson, Mrs. R. N. Merritt, Mrs. J. F. Harvey.

A WELCOME NEVER EQUALLED

Of the famous Australian soprano, Miss Margaret McCann, who has sung throughout the British Empire and United States, and been most enthusiastically received, and who appears in this city at the opening of the new T.A.S. hall on the evenings of April 27th and 28th, the New York Daily News says:—

A feature of the Emmet Celebration at the Brooklyn Grand Opera House was the appearance of the famous Australian soprano, Miss Margaret McCann, who was introduced by the chairman, David Healy, as a "singer of international renown who came all the way from the Antipodes to pay respectful homage to the memory of Emmet." Miss McCann received a welcome from the great audience which has seldom or never been equalled in the case of any other stranger. The building fairly shook with applause as she was escorted to the platform by Mr. Healy.

Miss McCann is a beautiful woman with a gracious manner, a graceful carriage and great personal magnetism. But the beauty of her voice is the greatest of all. It has a golden warmth, a limpid crystal purity and a sympathetic quality which is lacking in many great artists. Her vocal method is the perfection of art. She has an exquisite tone production, perfect command of sustaining power, even to the vanishing point of tone, and her phrasing is artistic and faultless in every detail.

The dates of the opening are April 27th and 28th. All seats reserved. Prices 50c. and $1. Tickets at Lynch's drug store, Hunter street. Plan opens Monday morning.

THE WOMEN MAY BRING FACTORY TO LINDSAY

Lindsay Warder:—At last night's meeting of the Board of Trade Mr. F. B. Goodman, of Toronto, gave the members a tip well worth while considering. He stated that during his short visit in Lindsay and walking up and down the streets he noticed that Lindsay has a large female population; in fact he stated that he saw ten ladies for every man. On these grounds he advised the members to send a deputation to interview Mr. John Eaton and ask him to consider the advisability of erecting a white-wear factory in town.

"Mr. Eaton is erecting factories in many towns and would no doubt consider your application," said Mr. Goodman. The board decided to look into the matter at once.

BIG MILLING RE-ORGANIZATION

Negotiations for what is undoubtedly the largest milling consolidation that has ever been effected in Ontario have just been completed in Toronto, and following them the official announcement is made of the organization of the Maple Leaf Milling Company, Limited, with a capital of $5,000,000.

The new Company has taken over the property of the Hedley Shaw Milling Company, Limited, and the Maple Leaf Flour Mills Company, Limited, and in addition secures from the new interests that have become identified with the Company $1,000,000, additional cash capital, which besides permitting of the erection of a modern 6,000 barrel mill and a 4million bushel elevator and storage warehouse at Port Colborne, will supply the new company with further working capital. It is understood that Mr. Cawthra Mulock, Toronto, is associated with Mr Hedley Shaw, of the Hedley Shaw Milling Company, Limited, and Mr. D. C. Cameron, President of the Maple Leaf Flour Mills Company, Limited, in the organization of the new concern.

The capital share of the new Company will be $5,000,000, divided into $2,500,000 of 7 per cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock, and $2,500,000 of common stock. The Company has no bonds either issued or authorized.

The preferred stock will, therefore, be in a particularly strong position as it is preferred both as to assets and dividends.

The ability of the Company to easily earn the 7 per cent. Cumulative Preferred dividend on $2,500,000 of preferred stock is indicated by the net earnings of the old Companies, as per certificate of Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Company, which shows that from September 25th, 1908 from which date the plants of the Maple Leaf Flour Mills Company, Limited, were in operation, to August 20th, 1909, these net earnings amounted to $218,834.00, and from August 21st, 1909, to February 28th, 1910, the net earnings of the Companies amounted to $166,793.60. This would be equal to over 15 per cent. on the preferred stock, and the payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on that stock would leave slightly over 6 per cent. for distribution on the common stock. The new Company's earning power will be very greatly increased once the new mill now under erection at Port Colborne is completed. The future of the Company is sure to be watched with the greatest interest by Ontario, inasmuch as the new Company will have a capacity fully equal to that of any other Canadian Milling concern, and, perhaps, more than any other company has, and will be almost entirely an Ontario concern, having all but one of its mills as well as its head office within the Province of Ontario.

The entire plant which the new Company will have at Port Colborne will be the most modern of its kind in Canada, the equipment of the new mill being fully equal to that of any other mill in the world. Such a site it is believed by experts will make the Maple Leaf Milling Company, Limited, an important factor right from the moment the mill is in operation at that point, inasmuch as by its geographical position it will enable the new Company to lay down its flour almost at any point in Canada, at all Atlantic seaports, and in the British and foreign markets, considerably cheaper than can be done by any other milling concern.

During the past few years the farmers of Ontario have been getting further away from the cultivation of wheat and going more extensively into stock raising, and this should give the Port Colborne mill a very ready market for its by-products.

All of the old officials who made the old companies so successful in the past will, in addition to retaining their financial positions in the new Company, retain their active interest in its management.

Mr. Hedley Shaw, who was the founder of the Hedley Shaw Milling Company, Limited, and the General Manager of the Maple Leaf Flour Mills Company, Limited, will be Managing Director of the Maple Leaf Milling Company, Limited.

The firm of Cawthra Mulock & Co., members of the Toronto Stock Exchange, have made arrangements for a public offering of $2,000,000 of the 7 per cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock at $100.00 per share, the same to carry with it a bonus equal to 25 per cent. of common stock, that is for every four shares of the preferred stock subscribers for the applicant will receive as a bonus one share of common stock.

To a very large extent, the shareholders of the old companies have become shareholders of the new, indicating their continued confidence in the bright future the Company should have now that it will be able to do business on a larger scale, owing to the large amount of additional capital that has been placed in its Treasury.

It is expected that full details in connection with the public offering will be made public within a few days.

SHORT SESSION BOARD OF WORKS

Several Small Matters Considered at Meeting Last Night

There was nothing of very great importance considered at the meeting of the Board of Works last night, although several small matters took up the attention of the board. Those present were Ald. Hicks, chairman; Mayor Morrow, Aldermen Gillespie, Metheral, Duncan, Duffus, Phelan.

A letter from Mrs. Allin, 541 Sherbrooke street, asking for a crossing for an entrance, was referred to the city engineer.

A request was read from Mr. G. N. Graham for an approach for the Oriental livery stable. On motion of Ald. Duncan and Ald. Gillespie this was granted.

The following quotations for cement in car lots, f.o.b., Peterborough, were read:—Canada Cement Co., $1.65 per bbl.; Alfred Rogers, $1.70 per bbl.

On motion of Ald. Phelan and Ald. Duffus, that the street watering for the south part of the city be left in the hands of the chairman and the street commissioner, as the successful tenderer for the contract refused to accept it.

A letter was read from E. H. D. Hall, city solicitor, in regard to the petition of George Burnham against the construction of a sidewalk on the south side of McDonnel street, between George and Water streets.

On motion of Ald. Phelan and the mayor it was decided that the chairman should interview Dr. Burnham in regard to the matter.

The chairman reported that he and the mayor had considered the claim of B. and H. Edwards for damage to an house owned by them while the sewer service was being cleared by water, and considered that no action should be taken.

On motion of Ald. Phelan and the mayor the purchase of cement was left with the chairman and city engineer with power to act.

On motion of Ald. Duffus and Ald. Metheral, the placing of gravel on London street, between Bethune and Aylmer streets, was left with the street commissioner.

BOY SOPRANO DELIGHTED A LARGE AUDIENCE

Wilfrid Morrison, the Canadian boy soprano, delighted a large audience at St. Andrew's church last night at a concert under the auspices of the Young Women's Guild. He has a voice of considerable range and marvellous sweetness and takes the higher registers with apparently the greatest ease. Master Morrison is only fourteen years of age and is regarded as one of the greatest boy sopranos in the world. His programme numbers last night were 'Carmencita,' 'A May Morning,' by Denza, 'Sing, Sweet Bird,' by Ganz, and 'Carmena,' by H. Lane Wilson. He was generous with encores and they were equally pleasing. Master Morrison received a flattering reception at the close of his first number, and the enthusiasm became unbounded before the concert was over. 'Sing, Sweet Bird,' was in the opinion of many the most enjoyable number on the programme.

The other artists o fthe evening were Miss Julia Choate, violinist, whose charming and artistic rendition of 'A Reverie,' by Vieuxtempts, and 'Hejre Kati,' by Hueby, and two encores evoked great enthusiasm.

Mr. D. Oscar Waring, reader, gave several numbers. His 'King Robert of Sicily' was excellent, and his other numbers were of a high order of merit.

Mrs. C. S. McClelland made an ideal accompanist for Master Morrison's selections, and Miss Sisson played for Miss Choate.

It is customary for the audience to allow His Excellency to be the first to take his departure at the conclusion of a play under his patronage as "The Geisha" will be to-night.

Victoria is delighted at the news that Commander W. B. McDonald, son of Senator McDonald, of that city, is to command the Niobe.

PROTECTION AT THE CROSSINGS

On the Grand Trunk Railway Between Here and Port Hope

At all crossings on the Grand Trunk Railway between here and Port Hope, where the approaches on the highway do not permit of a traveller on the highway being able to notice a train approaching, the Railway Company is removing the trees and shrubbery on either side of the track for a distance of one hundred feet, and at such an angle to the track that at a distance of one hundred feet from the track on the highway a train can be seen one quarter of a mile away.

This work, which is being undertaken by the railway company, will be greatly appreciated, and it is understood that similar action will be taken on other lines of this railway.

To-day's Market

The usual prices prevailed at the market this morning. There was a good offering of eggs and butter.

On the Rollers

In the ladies' skating competition at the Brock street roller rink last night, Miss Mudge won the first prize, a hat pin valued at $3.50. On account of the large number of entries the management decided to give two other prizes, and these were awarded to Miss Yelland and Miss Irene Craig. The attendance last night was large.

CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE TO PLAY TRIPLE SCHEDULE

Strong Constitution Was Adopted—First Double Header to be played on Saturday May 21st—Each Club to Receive Twenty Certificates.

After adding several amendments and clauses to the constitution drafted by the special committee, appointed at the last meeting, the representatives of the four Peterborough city amateur baseball league clubs adopted it at the meeting held last night.

There were present the chairman, Mr. H. A. Yenney, the secretary-treasurer, and Messrs. F. D. Craig and W. Metheral, of the Strathcona Club; Jas. Hickey and James Doris, T.A.S. A.C.; L. Dobson West End A.C. and J. Reed, P.A.C.

A proposition from the Riverside Grounds Company was received and adopted, with one amendment.

The committee drafting the constitution was appointed to draw up a triple schedule, the first double header to be played May 21st.

The admission fee and amount of deposit specified in the constitution must be paid into the secretary-treasurer before the schedule is adopted.

For admission gentlemen will be charged 15 cents and 5 cents for grand stand. Ladies will be admitted free to grounds and grand stand. Boys will be charged 5 cents.

The constitution, which appears to be a strong one, is as follows:—

1. This organization shall be known as the Peterborough City Amateur Baseball League.

2. The annual meeting of the league shall be held not later than April 18.

3. The active officers of the league shall consist of the president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and a representative of each club.

4. A majority of officers shall constitute a quorum and due notice of every meeting must be given to each representative two days before such meeting, the said meeting to be open for business at eight o'clock if a quorum is present.

5. The entrance fee of $2.00 must accompany each application for admission to the league, same being returned if application be not accepted.

6. No club can be represented at the annual meeting unless the admission fee of $2.00 be paid on or before date of meeting.

7. No verbal proxies will be accepted at any meeting and all proxies must be signed by an officer of the club, and witnessed.

8. The amount of deposit required from each club to be $5.00 same to be paid into the secretary-treasurer before schedule is drawn up and to be returned at the end of the season to clubs finishing the season.

9. Spalding's rules to govern all games as far as actual play is concerned.

10. All games must be played on advertised time. Any team delaying games will be fined $2.00 per team.

11. All games must be played at Riverside Park unless otherwise directed by the league executive.

12. All games must be played to a finish, that is, there must be no tie games.

13. Umpires to be appointed by the league executive.

14. Any club playing a man who violates any rule of this league must lose such game, and is also liable to suspension.

15. Any amateur player will be allowed to play in the league but must be a resident of the city at the time the schedule is drawn up.

16. No club will be allowed to enter the league after May 1st.

17. No permits or special privileges will be issued to any club under any consideration.

18. Each player in the league must hold a certificate from the league to entitle him to play in such games.

19. The number of certificates to be issued to each club will be twenty.

20. The home team must supply three balls to the umpire before the game is called and the same must be satisfactory to the umpire.

21. The sum of $3.00 must accompany a protest to be returned to the club protesting if such protest is proved. In the event of the protest being lost the amount will go to the league.

22. The first game shall start at 2.15 o'clock, and the second one ten minutes after its conclusion.

23. In the consideration of a protest the representatives of the clubs interested will not be allowed to vote.

24. A copy of the constitution must be sent to the secretary of each club.

25. Certificates duly signed by the president and secretary of the league and club must be furnished to the umpire in case of dispute.

26. Certificates to be handed out to clubs on the night the schedule is adopted.

A PROSE POEM ON THE LOCAL BASEBALL OPENING

A few more weeks and we will hear the old familiar baseball cheer, and see red-hot fans wend their way to Riverside to see the fray. The kids make fruitless efforts to induce the cop to let them through to see the idols of the town, run, dunt and pull the high ones down. The grand-stand may be ten cents more, but, as good fans have coin galore to wager on the favorite boys, no one will care to make a noise. The "umps" takes his accustomed place, behind the artist with the face that juveniles abhor to see, when first they mix in the melee, "Play ball," he lisps, and shifts his quid, the grandstand murmurs "swat it, kid," and thus the struggle fierce begins to see-saw through till some one wins. The same quartette of baseball teams will fight it out again, it seems, and classy brands of baseball dope is handed out to give us hope. The heavy hitters, as of yore, cry loudly for the umpire's gore, led by Bat Callaghan, who cries, "I've got it," as he drops the flies that ordinary school boys love to nestle in a ten-cent glove. The Strathcona curse do frown as Shaw strikes out with "just two down" The juicy errors coming fast, the umpire constantly being assed, base-runners falling in their tracks and other stunts that good ball lacks, are witnessed by the cheering throng, who can't imagine what is wrong. They swear that this is their last game, but next week it is just the same; they're in their places long before the big mogal begins to score. It's human nature, Lizzie, dear, though you may think they're acting queer when they assert they never will witness another baseball mill.

GOLF

For the coming season on the local golf links a schedule of some hundred games has been drawn up by the captain, Mr. G. A. Little.

The season will be a long one for the golfers and things at present look like a record year.

The games for the 24th of May are almost a sure thing and Peterborough and Port Hope will be on hand for friendly games.—Lindsay Post.

PHYSICIANS Failed to Cure Rheumatism

Miss Flora Chapman Vividly Describes Her Sufferings and Ultimate Cure With "Nerviline."

"After being an enthusiastic user of Nerviline for years, I feel it my duty to tell you personally what your wonderful preparation has done for me.

"I suffered torture from rheumatism and heart trouble, tried scores of so-called remedies, consulted for weeks and months with Toronto's most eminent physicians, but derived only slight benefit.

"A friend insisted on my using Nerviline, and to my surprise a vigorous rubbing of this powerful liniment eased the pains and reduced the stiffness in my joints. I continued to use Nerviline and was permanently cured. I am now perfectly well, and for three years have had no rheumatism at all. I know many families where no other medicine but Nerviline is kept—it is so useful in minor ailments like earache, toothache, neuralgia, coughs, colds, lumbago, and sciatica. I call Nerviline my "Life Guard," and urge all to try its merit."

RUMORS AT LINDSAY.

The outlook for a town league does not present a very roseate hue. There are all sorts of rumors in circulation regarding certain teams organizing, but this turns out to be only guff. In view of the situation existing, the only proper thing to do is to gather together the strongest nine that can be produced in town, and enter it either in the Mariposa League or the Midland League that is, of course, if Lindsay is wanted in these organizations.—Lindsay Post.

Toronto lost again to Providence yesterday by 3—2. The Grays Corralled eleven hits off Rudolph and Vaughan had two errors.

Baltimore chased the Buffalo pitcher from the box in the sixth and won 7—3.

Rochester fell down again at Newark. McGinnity's men shut the Thistles out 2—0. Manager Ganzel played the game under protest, because the umpire put a slightly soiled ball into play.

The Royals made it two straight from Jersey City. Wiggs pitched great ball for Montreal.

Krause's effectiveness with men on bases gave Philadelphia a 3—0 win from Boston.

Walter Johnson was wild and was hit at critical times in the Washington-New York game. The Highlanders won 3—2.

The champion Tigers had it on the Naps and pulled out ahead 5—2.

Bug Raymond was outpitched by Scanlon and New York lost to Brooklyn.

Montreal has secured a catcher named Bridges from the Pittsburg Pirates.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Roosevelt's Visit to Paris.

Paris, April 23.—The only discordant note heard from the Paris press in its comment upon Mr. Roosevelt's visit comes from the ultra clerical papers like Gil Blas, which openly derides the American guest as a charlatan.

Frederick Masson, writing under the heading "Hail, Caesar," publishes a remarkable attack, in which he paints Mr. Roosevelt as a demagog who, with all the skill of a Barnum, is arranging for his reappearance upon the American stage.

After describing American democracy as marching between plutocracy and demagogy, the writer asks if it is possible that the former President intends to plunge again into the fight which had already provoked a crash of credit in the United States and in which anarchy under cover of demagogy may precipitate bloodshed, pillage and arson in industrial centres.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 6 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish.

ROYALTY IN SLUMS.

How the Submerged of Lambeth Look on Princes.

There was a great bustle in Lambeth—the part of Lambeth that surrounds "the old Vic," in Waterloo road—for Lambeth had visitors coming, and the visitors were the Prince and Princess of Wales.

Everyone knew they were coming, for bills posted up outside the Royal Victoria Hall stated the fact in black type, and a red reminding slip which crossed the bills announced "Tonight."

Moreover, a string of flags hung across the Waterloo road, and policemen stood at the corners of New Cut and Lower Marsh, where the naphtha lamps were flaring over stalls loaded with pickled herrings, cough drops, halfpenny toys, corn cures, gilt framed oleographs, second-hand tools, the cheapest of lace collars for evening wear, and piles of those prime favorite Lambeth sweetstuffs, "nutty stick-jaw," and "velvet cushions."

About the crowds that thronged the pavements and clustered round the doorways of the once notorious "blood and-thunder gaff" hung the beacon that shines down the New Cut and Lower Marsh every night—the bright illumined sign that tells the Lambeth folk to remember "the old Vic."

They rallied round "the old Vic" in thousands, and when the royal brougham trotted smartly down Waterloo road, and pulled up at "the royal entrance" in New Cut, the audience of a couple of thousand inside the old theatre were stirred by such a wild burst of cheering from the street that they half regretted for the moment they were not outside instead.

The orchestra struck up "God Save the King," and the electric lights in the newly-arranged royal box, at the left hand corner by the stage, were switched on. There was a moment of anticipatory excitement, and then the Lambeth mothers in the gallery nudged each other with eager elbows, and whispered loudly, amid the music "There she is—don't she look nice—an' 'im, too!"

The Princess of Wales stepped to the front of the box, placed her large bouquet on the edge, and looked round the house with a smile. The prince stood by her, smiling, too, and near them were the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, with equally cheerful faces.

Every one in "the old Vic" smiled, from the stalls, where people had paid as much as half a crown for a seat, up to the top of the gallery, where they had paid only twopence.

"Don't she look sweet!" said one of the mothers of Windmill street, as she jogged a year-old baby up and down on her knee and studied the princess with a critical eye.

"Look, she's takin' her cloak off," she added, "and she's got a black satin uress. Diamonds in her hair, and a diamond collar, and diamond earrings, too. Just fancy, Mrs. Smith, our seein' the princess and her diamonds in 'the old Vic'! It's quite a night."

So everybody thought. They joined—a little nervously—in the four-line chorus of "God bless the Prince of Wales," and settled down to a couple of hours' real enjoyment—Welsh songs sung in Welsh by Welsh men and women, songs from operas, and the Prince and Princess of Wales sitting there in the box just as jolly and as much at home as everybody else.

Everybody was in a good humor, and when one of the babies in the gallery cried out just as little Miss Dora Coombs, with the long dark curls, reached the "twidliest" bit of a Sarasate solo on the violin, the gallery only laughed.

What a contrast "the old Vic" presented to "the old Vic" of years and years ago! It was resplendent with its gold decorations on a creamy ground and its ceiling of spotless white.

On the bars stood great urns of coffee and piles of buns, and in the orchestra sat a real doctor of music playing the piano for royalty and the audience.

The prince and princess stayed right to the end, and before they went they told Miss Cons, the honorary secretary of "the old Vic," who celebrates her seventy-third birthday this year, how much they enjoyed their night in Lambeth.

Are Your Children Puny?

A Suggestive Letter to Parents.

Nature is not often at fault.

Stupidity and thoughtlessness of parents are responsible for many of the half-dead men and women we meet.

Their fathers and mothers did not supply the aid that would have set their body activities into full force to develop vitality and rugged strength.

Mrs. Timothy Bristow writes a letter that should set thousands of parents thinking: "My boy and girl, fourteen and sixteen years old, looked pale and puny. They seemed not to care for play like neighbors' children. They were too effeminate and lacked something I would have liked to see them possess. I don't know what put it into my head, but I gave up making cookies and sweet dishes, and it didn't take me long to see they were eating more of the right kind of food. I just thought I would give them some of my own tonic, 'Ferrozone,' and was delighted with the result. Such an appetite it gave them! They grew fairly fat and had a lovely pink color. I think when such a good tonic as Ferrozone is available there is no excuse for delicate children. Certainly lots of nourishing food, and Ferrozone will give a child a great chance to grow up hearty and strong."

FERROZONE Makes Health.

And Ferrozone is a good tonic for old folks, too—it's full of nutrition and blood-building properties and makes the weak strong very quickly. Try one or two tablets with your meals. Fifty cents per box, six for $2.50; all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co, Kingston, Canada.

REIGN OF FILLETS.

Fashions of Greece For the Easter Girl.

Greek and Roman fashions reappear in the hair ornaments of today, but with a difference. Hairdressers hold that few American faces can stand the severity of purely classic adornments. A woman may be ever so charming, but unless she has Juno's perfect features she had better not assume Juno's fillet. Fillets and wreaths, though, American women will have, and some go so far as to crown their pompadours with two and even three bands. But they are bands such as the maids of Athens never had—fillets with attachments of spangled, sequined and jeweled wings and cabochons. Then there are wreaths of grape leaves, with the fabric made of a lustrous tinsel fabric, exquisitely light, with a sort of moonlight on the frost effect. Hairdressers aver that if the women of old Greece and Rome, with their several fillets, could see these wreaths they would be green with envy, and as they aren't here to deny the statement it will have to be accepted.

CLASSIC TOILET MODERNIZED.

Debutantes with loads of fluffy hair can venture on wearing the simpler fillets of gold or silver, jewels, rhinestones or sequins made without adornments of feathers or bows. A beautiful fillet is of pearls—simple bands confined at either side with cabochons of the same gems—but only a very lovely woman can wear this—ought to wear it, at least. The debutante nowadays is given to lovelocks, careful little ringlets and floating wisps of hair, which are charming when they are artistically done.

For the younger girl, who is not supposed to require many embellishments, are ribbon bowknots and loops and twists of silk to stick in her fluffy hair. Only for her older sisters are the gold and silver poinsettias, the winged insects, the clusters of goldeu fruit and the filmy birds. One favorite ornament for older girls is a tuft of frosted silver wheat mixed with the misty feathers of an aigret and caught to the hair with a silver white butterfly.

The beauty of these ornaments depends much on the quality of the tinsel. "There's an awful difference in tinsel," remarked one dealer in hair ornaments as she laid out two specimens, one most exquisite, the other gaudy and inartistic just because of the cheap tinsel used in making it.

Two kinds of gold are fashionable in making up hair ornaments. One sort is termed pale gold and the other old gold. Neither has the deckled yellow to be found in Frenchy side combs and mountings for broad and narrow rhinestone bandeaus.

Seasonable Salad.

Cut some sweet oranges in small pieces and serve on crisp lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Divide some medium sized tomatoes in half and remove all the seeds and hard portion. Cut the latter into small pieces and put it into a basin with some dice shaped pieces of cucumber and some finely shred crisp lettuce and dress the whole with mayonnaise sauce. Fill the halves of the tomatoes with the mixture and place a large olive in the middle of each.

Arrange lettuce hearts on individual plates and place in the center of each one tomato, cut into small pieces, and on top of this sprinkle French endive stalks, chopped very fine. Serve with French dressing of oil, vinegar and paprika.

Toasted edcators can be served with salad for a change in place of cheese wafers.

Mock Chicken Pie.

In a certain vegetarian family a mock chicken pie is made which is popular among friends who still cling to meat in their diet. A pint of pecaments is chopped fine and mixed with a cupful of pine nuts, one can of button mushrooms, half a dozen small onions that have been boiled whole and a can of corn. Three large potatoes are peeled, cut into dice, boiled half tender and drained. A sauce is made with two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and two cupfuls of water or milk. The sauce, the potatoes and the first mixture seasoned with salt and pepper are put into a baking dish, covered with a biscuit or potato crust and baked about half an hour in a hot oven. It is not a cheap dish, but it is tasty and nutritious, and it outwits the butcher.

To Polish Glass.

When a goblet or tumbler is cold after being washed it takes longer to dry and polish. It is best to leave such articles in a pan of warm water and dry each glass as it is lifted from the water.

When the construction at present under way at Port Colborne is completed the company will have a total milling capacity of 12,500 barrels per day. The company has at present thirty-five elevators situated throughout the Western Wheat Belt, and fifteen additional ones are being added at the present time. A million bushel elevator is being constructed next to the new mill at Port Colborne. The company has also warehouses and offices at Toronto, Winnipeg, Kingston, Ottawa, and Montreal.

MARKET FOR OUTPUT.

The rapid growth of the business of the two companies taken over has long made apparent the necessity of additional milling capacity. Further, the tremendous increase in the total output from the Western wheat belt makes it absolutely necessary to have more mills in Canada to handle it. Last year the output of the Western wheat belt amounted to about 125,000,000 bushels, and men who have made a close study of the development that the Western country is likely to see, estimate that by the end of the year 1920 Canada will be producing at the rate of fully 500,000,000 bushels annually. As in the past, a great proportion of this large production will of necessity find its way into Canadian mills. Larger demands are bound to come as the population of the country increases, and the enquiry for the Canadian product, both from Great Britain and from the foreign markets of the world, will increase. The chain of mills that is now controlled by the new company will enable it to go ahead and secure its full share of the trade of every section of Canada, as well as to obtain even a very much larger proportion of the export business to Great Britain and to foreign markets than it has up to the present time.

SECURITY AND EARNING POWER: The assets of the old Companies taken over as above stand in excess of all liabilities and without any allowance for good-will, trade marks, etc., at $3,770,524.11, this amount being ascertained on the basis of an appraisal by the Canadian-American Appraisal Company, Limited, as of March 17th, 1910, of the capital assets taken over, and the certificate of Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Company as of February 28th, 1910, as to current assets and current liabilities, with a liberal allowance for all contingencies. There has also been placed in the Treasury $1,000,000 of additional cash, which, besides permitting of the completion of a 6,000 barrel mill and a million bushel and storage warehouse at Port Colborne, and of fifteen additional elevators in the West, will provide the new Company with further capital.

As per certificate of Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Company, of London, quoted below, the earnings of the old Company on the present plant amounted from September 25th, 1908, to August 20th, 1909, to $218,843.38
And from August 21st, 1909, to February 28th, 1910, to $166,783.29
being for the latter period at a rate equal to over 13 per cent. on the prefered stock of the Company.

The following is the certificate of Price, Waterhouse & Company:—

"Commercial Union Building,
"Montreal, April 4, 1910.

"Messrs. Cawthra Mulock & Company, Toronto,

"Gentlemen:—

"We have examined the books of the Maple Leaf Flour Mills Company, Limited, which include the transactions carried on under the name of The Hedley Shaw Milling Company, Limited, at Toronto and Branches, from September 25th, 1908 (prior to which date the Company's principal mills were not completed nor in operation) to February 28th, 1910, and we certify that the profits for the period, after making provision for depreciation, but before charging interest on loans, were as follows:—

From September 25th, 1908, to August 20th, 1909 ..... $218,843.38
From August 21st, 1909, to February 28th, 1910 ..... $166,783.29

"Yours very truly,
"PRICE, WATERHOUSE & CO."

MANAGEMENT.

The properties of the old companies have been constructed and developed under the direction of Mr. Hedley Shaw, late General Manager of The Hedley-Shaw Milling Company, Limited, and of The Maple Leaf Flour Mills Company, Limited, and Mr. D. C. Cameron, late President of The Maple Leaf Flour Mills Company, Limited. Both these gentlemen will retain large interests in the new Company, besides being actively identified with it. Mr. Hedley Shaw will occupy the position of Managing Director of the new Company, thus giving to it the full benefit of his long practical experience.

FAVORABLE LOCATION OF NEW LARGE MILLS.

The location of the new large mill at Port Colborne is without exception the best there is in Canada. This mill when completed, in addition to having the large capacity mentioned, will have one of the most modern equipments in the world. The Company at all times will be able to keep it well supplied with wheat. In addition to its own 1,000,000 bushel elevator, which will be situated just alongside of the mill, the Company will be able to make arrangements to have the last steamers, coming down from the West at the end of the season of navigation, tie up for the winter months at the elevator and in this way afford additional storage capacity without any necessity of any capital outlay for it. Should at any time the Company find it advisable to do so, it will also be able to draw from the Government elevator, which will be situated on the same pier as its Port Colborne mill.

The location of the Company's mills is such as to provide a ready market for the bye-products of each. The greater part of the milling capacity will be in Ontario, where, as Government statistics show, a smaller amount of wheat is being grown each year as the farmers go in more and more for stock-raising. This means a brisk demand for the bye-products of the mills for feed.

A complete report on the advantages of the Port Colborne site, prepared by Mr. Hedley Shaw, will be found in the prospectus.

Worms in Horses.

Horses that are poorly kept and become reduced in flesh are very liable to become wormy. Here is a remedy that has been fully tried and proved to be a first class corrective of that condition: Thoroughly mix a teaspoonful of pulverized smoking tobacco with a ground feed of corn or bran two or three times a week and give it to the horse. It will expel the worms, improve the horse's condition and make the hair glossy.

This remedy will not injure a mare with foal, but it pays to be very careful about giving any medicine to mares in that condition.

"THE MAGNET CLUTCH OF SYMPATHY THAT MAKES BRITONS ONE"--EARL GREY

His Excellency Was Reminded of it When He Saw the "Magnet Clutch" at the Electric Works To-day—Makes Grateful Response to Toast at Complimentary Luncheon To-day.

About sixty were in attendance at the complimentary luncheon given in honor of His Excellency Earl Grey at the Oriental hotel at 1.30 o'clock. His Excellency was seated at the centre of the head table with Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., on his right and Mayor Morrow on his left. Mayor Morrow presided.

Grace was said by ex-Mayor Rush.

Among the invited guests were members of the City Council, Board of Education, Separate School Board, Water Commissioners, City Poor Trust, License Commissioners and members of Parliament.

The luncheon was served in the Oriental's best style, and at the conclusion the toast to the King was proposed by His Worship Mayor Morrow and honored by the singing of the National Anthem. Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., proposed the toast to His Excellency Earl Grey and the Governor-General made a graceful response.

In proposing the toast to the King Mayor Morrow spoke as follows:

"Your Excellency and Gentlemen: On an occasion like the present, I feel that it is a great honor, indeed, to preside at this complimentary luncheon to His Excellency Earl Grey, the honored representative of His Gracious Majesty the King, in this, our fair Dominion.

"I am sure that we are all proud of this city in which we dwell, proud that we live in Ontario, the banner province of the Dominion; proud, too, of the fact that we are citizens of the greatest of the overseas Dominions, and no less proud that we belong to the great and glorious British Empire.

Let me direct your thought across the sea to him who is the honored head of that great Empire, a monarch who is beloved by his own people, and held in the highest regard by the whole civilized world, to him who has justly earned that proud title of "Peace Maker." So gentlemen, let me give you as our first toast, "His Imperial Majesty, King Edward the Seventh."

In proposing the toast to "Our Guest," Mr. Stratton referred to the visit of King Edward, (then Prince of Wales) to Peterborough, about fifty years ago, and citizens were delighted to honor the King's representative today, as they were to honor His Gracious Majesty. The speaker referred to the many good qualities possessed by Earl Grey and alluded to the excellent work he had done in promoting the anti-tuberculosis campaign and in fostering the drama and music in Canada by the Earl Grey musical and dramatic competition. "Earl Grey is a jolly good fellow," said Mr. Stratton, "and we are delighted to honor him."

The health of Earl Grey was drunk with enthusiasm and the gathering sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

In responding Earl Grey touched on Mr. Stratton's remark that Peterborough people did not know why he had visited Peterborough. "When passing from Toronto to Ottawa," said Earl Grey, "I could not miss the opportunity to see Peterborough of which I have heard a great deal and all of which was very complimentary to Peterborough. I see that in Peterborough everything is done on schedule time, and as the programme calls for me to be at Central Park at three o'clock, and it is now five past three, the great speech which I have prepared will have to remain with me. My expectations of Peterborough have been surpassed by what I find here on my visit. I was delighted with what I saw at the Canadian General Electric Company's works, and with the courtesy of Mr. Nicholls and Mr. Patterson, and with the Quaker Oats works where I was given such kind treatment by Mr. Denham. At the Electric Works I learned some things that were new to me, and one of them that interested me greatly was the "magnet clutch," a small block of metal which was held with amazing firmness to the plate on which it rested by the magnetic force. As I looked at that magnet clutch and thought of the great power that held it where it rested, I thought of the magnet clutch of sympathy which makes Britons the wide 'world over as one and keeps all her many possessions in solid cohesion." (Cheers.)

"I thank you for the honor you have done me to-day," continued Earl Grey. "I have had a lovely time this morning and I know the afternoon will be just as enjoyable. To-night I will see "The Geisha," which surprised and delighted everyone when it was presented in the competition at Toronto. Gentlemen, I thank you for your kindness to-day. It will never be forgotten." (Cheers.)

The function closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

GREAT NOVELIST'S GRATITUDE

His Bonny Child Stricken With Eczema

Marvelous Deliverance by Zam-Buk.

The beautiful three year-old son of Mr. Campbell Rae-Brown, author of the famous "Kissing-Cup Race" and "The Great Newmarket Mystery," has been cured in a fortnight by Zam-Buk, of a most distressing attack of eczema.

Little Stuart Campbell Rae-Brown, because of his clear skin and regular features, is constantly being sought as a model by painters and photographers, but his prettiness would now be a thing of the past, but for Zam-Buk's timely healing of the terrible sores on his face.

"I cannot express to you," writes Mr. Campbell Rae-Brown from his country home at Eden Villa, Dunoon, "the gratitude felt by my wife and myself for the astounding way in which your Zam-Buk cured our only child's face of its terrible affliction.

"There was scarcely a pinhead of his face left untouched by the disfiguring eczema. Perfectly sound and well in other respects, imagine our feelings when, after trying many so-called cures in vain, we began to think our boy might be permanently disfigured!

"No sooner had we applied your great remedy, then, hour by hour, and day by day, the unsightly blotches began to disappear, to fade—I can think of no better expression—gradually away, leaving behind not the very slightest trace of the affection! The skin of his face again assumed its own delicate texture and natural bloom, and when the glad day came when the cure had been wholly effected, we could scarcely believe our eyes. Our boy, whose beautiful face had been lost to us, had been restored—a miracle had been performed—by Zam-Buk."

Surely no higher testimony could be required to prove Zam-Buk's unique power over skin diseases than this spontaneous and unsolicited letter from such a popular author.

Eczema, disfiguring sores, rashes and skin injuries, are daily perils, and Mr. Rae-Brown's practical advice to all parents, is to get Zam-Buk into the home, and so have it always handy.

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for ulcers, skin eruptions, poisoned sores, bad legs, varicose veins, chilblains, cold sores, piles, itch, ringworm, and all skin diseases. Also heals cuts, burns, bruises, etc., and, used as an embrocation, relieves rheumatism, sciatica, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

MORE WHEAT FROM TEXAS STATE

Mr. William Whyte, 2nd vice-president of the C.P.R., in an interview, stated that he expected 125,000 American farmers to enter Canada and take up land this year. He estimated that each of these newcomers would bring in $1,000. In the course of his interview he stated that within five years the province of Saskatchewan would be producing more wheat than the State of Texas, and in 15 years the province of Saskatchewan would be growing more wheat than the whole of the United States. Within 15 years the United States will be importing wheat. These statements made by such a well-known authority as Mr. Whyte mean that Canada's future as a grain growing country possesses almost unlimited possibilities. Milling companies which extend operations by the erection of large mills at the present time, and take advantage of such an increase in our output of wheat, should offer an attractive field for investment.

USING PURGATIVES INJURES HEALTH

What You Need in Spring is a Blood Building Tonic

A spring medicine is an actual necessity to most people. Nature demands its aid in carrying off the impurities that have accumulated in the blood during the indoor life of winter. But unfortunately thousands of people who do recognize the necessity of a spring medicine do not know what is best to take, and dose themselves with harsh, griping purgatives.

This is a serious mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicine weakens the system, but does not cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives cannot do this—they weaken you still more. The blood should be made rich, red and pure, and only a tonic medicine can do this. The best blood building, nerve restoring tonic medical science has yet discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood. This new blood strengthens every organ, every nerve and every part of the body. This is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure headaches and backaches, rheumatism and neuralgia, banish pimples and eruptions, and give a glow of health to the most sallow skin. Men, women and growing boys and girls who take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills eat well, sleep well, and feel bright, active and strong. If you need a medicine this spring—and most likely you do—try this great reviving tonic, and see the new life, new health and new strength it will put into you.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY COMMENTS ON AYLESWORTH'S DECISION

Ontario's Premier Issues a Statement Regarding the Refusal of the Minister of Justice to Disallow the Hydro-Electric Legislation.

Toronto, April 25.—After a few days' consideration Sir James Whitney has issued his promised statement commenting upon the report of the Minister of Justice in answer to the petition for disallowance of the Hydro-Electric Act of 1909.

Sir James' comments are characteristic, and his sentences almost say, "I told you so." He says:

"The decision of the judicial committee of the Privy Council in the cases of the Florence Mining Co. and refusal of the Dominion Government to disallow the Ontario statute known as the Hydro-Electric legislation of 1909, together mark the beginning of a new era in constitutional development under the British North American Act.

"It is now certain that in the future there will be no further attempts—at any rate no successful attempts—to minimize, or destroy, the powers of a Provincial Legislature acting within the limits of its jurisdiction.

"The unfair and dishonest methods adopted against this legislation, which I can only touch upon in passing, prove clearly that when men's pockets govern their action they are not, as a rule, particular as to the nature of the means they are willing to adopt in order to succeed.

"From the beginning, the electric interests in Toronto and elsewhere were the bitter opponents of this legislation. All the stock gamblers were against it. An emissary was sent over to England, and the so-called financial journals there blossomed out with editorials made up very largely of misrepresentation, and 'frigid calculated falsehoods.' The result, however, has proved disastrous to the idea that these journals have any real power or influence. Every imaginable influence over there—social, political, private and public—was retained where possible, and all who realize the strength of such combined influences in London will at once appreciate what this means.

"Then, emissaries were sent out among the farmers owning land over which the transmission line was to pass, loaded up with all manner of falsehoods, by means of which to spread anxiety and alarm among the people. Last—and also least—the opposition of the Legislature, after proclaiming abroad the virtues of producer gas, the defects of electric power, and the general wickedness of the legislation, finally settled down alongside the electric interests, and has remained there ever since, doing all in its power to destroy the Hydro-Electric power scheme. Through all this time of stress and peril, the press of Ontario, in the main, stood squarely by the provincial position.

"To the applications for disallowance, an answer was put in by the Provincial Government. The same great pressure was again brought into play, and when, if ever, the secret history of this matter is made public, the people will, indeed, be amazed. Those who have looked through a red-covered pamphlet entitled, 'The Credit of Canada: How it is Affected by the Ontario Legislature,' will be able to form some idea of the efforts that were made, and to roughly estimate the amount of money which was expended.

"Well, the efforts of the men who would have taken away from the Provincial Legislature the right to legislate within its jurisdiction, except as and when permitted by the Dominion Government, have failed, and the question has been settled forever. This being so, it is unnecessary to speculate on which would have occurred had the statute been disallowed, beyond saying that the province would not have submitted, and would have lost no time in taking such steps as would have put an end to the situation."

SIGHTSEERS IN LONDON'S FAMOUS CATHEDRAL

WHISPERING GALLERY IN ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL
FROM THE SPHERE.

Visitors to St. Paul's Cathedral, one of the finest buildings of the city of London, rarely fail to climb to the whispering gallery in the interior of the dome, which is reached by a flight of 260 steps from the library. This gallery, which is about 210 feet above the cathedral floor, is noted for a curious echo, and is so named because a whisper uttered near the wall on one side of it is distinctly audible to a person standing on the other side, a distance of 108 feet in a straight line. From this point a good view is obtained of the church interior, the tesselated pavement of which looks like a minute chessboard, but it is liable to cause giddiness to any one not used to heights. It also commands the best view of Thornhill's paintings and of the cathedral generally.

From the whispering gallery 118 steps lead up to the stone gallery, an outer gallery with a stone parapet running round the base of the dome. Here in the clear sky of the early morning may often be obtained a wonderful view of London, a view which is still more extensive from the golden gallery above the dome. From this point the lantern may be ascended by a spiral staircase to the golden ball, where six persons may stand at once, though it is doubtful whether the exertion required in going beyond the stone gallery repays the fatigue, as there are 616 steps to mount from the floor of the church to the golden ball.

ALBERT HOLMES CAPTURED AND JAILED FOR KILLING BOLTON

Edwardsburg Murderer is a Mental and Physical Wreck and is Unable to Sleep Since His Crime—Will Not Take Food.

Brockville, April 25.—Contrary to general expectation, Albert Holmes, the slayer of Nathan Bolton, the Edwardsburg farmer, was taken alive on Saturday near the scene of the crime. His arrest was effected by G.T.R. section men who found the accused towards evening sitting on a pile of ties beside the track. Shortly before, the man came out of his hiding place, apparently relieved at being discovered and quietly submitted to arrest. He was delivered over to the authorities at Cardinal and arrangements promptly made for holding a preliminary trial.

The evidence adduced was along the line of that given at the inquest on Friday, the leading witness being Ethel Holmes, daughter of the prisoner, who first discovered the crime and gave the alarm. She was sitting alone in the kitchen adjoining the shed where Holmes and Bolton were cutting up a pig. There was no altercation as far as she could hear, but groans attracted her attention, and on opening the door looking into the shed she made the gruesome discovery of Bolton in the throes of death lying on the floor with his skull crushed in by two blows from an axe, which was covered with blood and hair. Her father was not to be seen, having passed out into the yard en route to the woods.

Magistrate Clark made out the committal for a charge of murder, and a constable brought Holmes to the Brockville County jail to await his trial.

Holmes is a mental and physical wreck. In fact he is so weak that he has been unable to leave his bed since coming to the jail and is under the care of a physician with a constant guard to avoid any attempt at suicide. Though very reticent he states that after entering the swamp, on the edge of which he conversed with a boy named Perry, he never came into the open again until Saturday. Constables and neighbors passed close to him on several occasions, but he had no difficulty hiding in the thick brush. His clothing was torn and watersoaked, and altogether the murderer presented a completely changed appearance from what had characterized his make-up a few days before.

Holmes attributes his act to the promptings of Satan, the evil one telling him to raise the axe and slay Bolton, which he did on the impulse of the moment. He realizes the enormity of the crime, which is preying on his mind to the extent of insane frenzy. He is in a very despondent mood, unable to sleep, and stubbornly refuses to eat even the most tempting dishes. He gives vent to his mental anguish by loud outcries and moaning, but apparently cannot weep. The prisoner passes on no conversation with his guard. He is a tall strapping man in easy circumstances, giving his age as 53.

The funeral of the murdered man was held yesterday afternoon. It was one of the largest seen in the Township of Edwardsburgh in many years.

AMATEUR EDITORS AT NIAGARA FALLS

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 25.—To allow Mayor Dores, aldermen and others criticized by him to give their side of the story, proprietor J. E. P. Rothwell turned over the publication of The Record to a committee of citizens for next Wednesday. The entire news matter and editorials will be written by amateurs. The proceeds for advertising will be donated to the general hospital.

The U. S. Heating & Lighting Co., capitalized at seventeen millions, has located across the river. An effort will be made to secure the Canadian plant for this city. Canadians are financially interested in the concern.

J. S. LARKE DEAD AT SYDNEY

Ottawa, April 25.—The Department of Trade and Commerce received yesterday a cable from Sydney, Australia, conveying information of the death of J. S. Larke, Canadian trade commissioner there. Mr. Larke was appointed by Sir Mackenzie Bowell in 1894, and was the first Canadian trade commissioner. Previously he was editor of the Oshawa Vindicator. He was a strong protectionist, and had considerable reputation as a public speaker. Two years ago he made a tour of Canada, addressing boards of trade. He was 70 years of age and a widower. He was a native of England, but came to Canada when a lad.

FAREWELL TO SIR RICHARD

Ottawa, April 25.—The banquet which the members of the Senate will tender to Sir Richard Cartwright on Tuesday next is in the nature of a farewell. Sir Richard is at present leader of the Government in the Upper House, but his physical condition is such that he cannot longer undertake the duties of that office.

Hon. Sydney Fisher will succeed him, the opportunity to a vacancy having occurred through the death recently of Senator Baker.

THEY WANT A FRENCH PARTY

Montreal, April 25.—A French-Canadian Conservative member of the House of Commons has advocated the formation of a French party in this province on the same grounds as the Irish members in the British House of Commons. This new declaration was made by M. Blondin, M.P. for Camplain, at a meeting held yesterday afternoon at Coteau Landing, which had been convoked by Dr. Lortie, M.P. for Soulanges. Besides the Federal member there were present Mantel, M.P. for Terrebonne, and Blondin, M.P. for Champlain.

All three gentlemen pronounced themselves as followers of Mr. F. D. Monk, M.P. While on the marine question Mr. Blondin made the surprising statement just given. He said that if a French-Canadian party were formed similar to the Irish party at Westminster, they would eventually hold the balance of power, just as John Redmond and his followers hold the balance of power in the British House of Commons.

SHOOTING AT THE SOO

Two Italians are Near Death in the Hospital

Sault Ste. Marie, April 25.—Salvatore Gianola lies at the point of death in the hospital, and Bengotti Salvatore is perhaps fatally wounded as the result of a quarrel among Italians at the steel plant late Saturday evening. The shooting was done by Veto Longo, still at large.

Longo, who was, with two friends, standing near the coal pile, called Gianola to him, immediately pulling a revolver and fired three shots. Longo threw the revolver away and Gianola picked it up, firing two shots after him. Gianola then went to his boarding-house and telephoned the police.

Entering Palumbo's store, he was met by Bengotti Salvatore, who was with Longo when the shooting was done. Benditto said: "What, are you not dead yet?" as the same time he pulled a revolver and a razor. Gianola wrested the razor from Benditto and cut him so badly that he is in a precarious condition.

Longo has several convictions against him here for using unlawful weapons. It was claimed by an Italian last night that Longo had been injured by the shots fired by Gianola and was hiding in the Italian quarter.

COLORED LEADERS WERE ARRESTED

Havana, April 25.—The culmination of the recent agitation of the race question was reached Saturday night, when Gen. Evaristo Estenos, the leader of the independent party of color, and four of his associates were arrested. This was followed yesterday by the arrest of twenty-four more negroes in Havana, three in Oriente and two in Santa Clara.

The agitation is regarded as a seditious movement, calculated to develop revolutionary agitation against the Government.

TERRIBLE DEATH OF AN ITALIAN

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 25.—Luigia Venglin, an Italian, was fatally injured at the blast furnace No. 2 of the Lake Superior Corporation yesterday morning, and died at six last night, after several hours agony. The deceased stood on a trestle in the way of the gas when blowing the furnace out, and received the full force of it. Besides being burned, he was badly injured by flying coke.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

CHILD HAS TWO HEADS

New York, April 25.—John O. Nelson of No. 4,114 Stuart avenue, Brooklyn Hills, Queen's Borough, has a daughter who has two well-developed heads. She is six years old, and is unable either to sit up or walk, but her general health is good and she possesses normal intelligence, according to her father.

When the child was born the doctors said she could not live, but Mr. Nelson, then possessed of comfortable means, engaged the best physicians and gave the little one the most careful attention, sparing no expense. Mr. Nelson said nearly his entire fortune of $35,000 had gone toward making the delicate infant a healthy child.

The Nelsons live on the ground floor, so that they can easily get their daughter out of doors without attracting attention, consequently few persons in the neighborhood have seen her. The child speaks English and German with equal fluency, using both mouths when she speaks, her father says.

RAILWAYS JOIN BATTLE

Vancouver, April 25.—The announcement of the completion of the purchase of the Dunsmuir mines and lands on Vancouver Island by C.N.R. interests, is heralded as the first fight for the coast business with the C.P.R., and an era of development and consequent prosperity is looked for. For the past three weeks the C.P.R. has been energetically securing all available coal properties, the largest deals being for the Western Fuel Co.'s properties at Nanaimo for two and a-half million dollars and mines at Boat Harbor in which John Arbuthnot is interested.

Canadian Collieries, Ltd., with $20,000,000 capital has been incorporated to take over the Dunsmuir Mines. It is a C.N.R. enterprise.

Protest From Vatican.

Rome, April 25.—The proposed visit of the Prince of Monaco to Rome has resulted in a new protest from the Vatican, where the prince's act is considered a personal affront to the Pope. It was officially announced a few days ago that the prince would arrive in Rome on April 24, and would be received by the King the following day. His lecture on oceanography is arranged for April 28.

FRUIT CROP IS RUINED

Middle Western States Visited by Destructive Frosts.

Chicago, April 25.—Total loss of the entire fruit crop of the central lake region, extending westward to the foothills of the Rock Mountains and southward into Kentucky and Tennessee, was adjudged a certainty Saturday night by Prof. Henry J. Cox, weather forecaster for the United States Government in Chicago.

After observing the progress of the wintry storm, with its biting frost, which projected itself against and obliterated the unseasonable warmth of the last few weeks, the forecaster said he could see no hope for peaches, pears, plums, cherries, strawberries, apples and other small fruit which usually are so plentiful and cheap in the summer months.

The monetary loss may reach nine or ten millions of dollars, and in view of the high cost of living, will have a far-reaching influence, inasmuch as it will increase the prices of canned goods, because there will be no 1910 crop of fruit to can.

The forecaster Saturday night said he could see no hope for better weather during the next few days. If any fruit has been left with the germ of life in it by the frosts that already have occurred, he says, coming frosts show every prospect of wiping out the last chances of a crop.

The states which experienced freezing weather and the temperatures that prevailed are as follows:

	Above zero.
North Dakota	18 to 21
South Dakota	24 to 28
Nebraska	26 to 30
Minnesota	18 to 24
Iowa	22 to 28
Missouri	26 to 34
Illinois	26 to 34
Michigan	24 to 40

Peary Granted Leave.

New York, April 25.—An order from the Navy Department has been issued granting Commander R. E. Peary six months' leave with permission to depart from the United States.

This means that Commander Peary is now at liberty to make the trip to Europe which he has projected and deliver certain lectures that he has arranged for. He is also to receive medals and other testimonials from scientific societies.

IDEALS FOR CHILDREN

Hamilton, April 25.—That John Ross Robertson of The Toronto Telegram, W. J. Gage and Rev. George Mellougall were ideals for the Canadian children, and that they were all assured a place in heaven for their benevolence and good deeds, was the statement of Rev. Lewis H. Hill, B.A., of Burlington, in Charlton avenue church last night. Mr. Robertson would be rewarded because of his interest in the Sick Children's Hospital, and God would smile on him, while the angels would go to meet him. Mr. Gage would get credit for his work in connection with the Gravenhurst Sanitarium and Rev. Mr. McDougall for his work among the Indians.

FORCED RESIGNATION OF ABBOT JANSSENS

Brussels, April 25.—The circumstances surrounding the retirement of Abbot Lawrence Janssens from the post of secretary of the congregation of religious affairs, are given as somewhat different color in reports received here, where much interest has been excited because of the fact that the abbot is a Belgian.

According to these reports from Rome, the secretary did not willingly resign his office, but was summoned by Cardinal Merry del Val, papal secretary of state, by whom he was threatened with dismissal if he did not resign at once.

The offence of the abbot is said to have been the call which he made upon Mr. Roosevelt, following the latter's decision not to visit the Pope.

EDWARD HERRINGTON HAS THREE WIVES

Brampton, April 25. Edward Herrington of Boston Mills, Peel County, is under arrest, charged with bigamy.

It is alleged that he has three wives living, and a numerous family, although he is only 35 years of age.

For the past two years he has lived in this county as a farm laborer, with a wife and two children.

Wife No. 1, it is said, lives in Lindsay, supporting herself and two children, and wife No. 2, who brings the charge, is in Bowmanville, with one child. Constable Jarvis of Bowmanville has held the warrant for two weeks, while searching for Herrington.

Mr. J. E. Herbert, ex-mayor, one of the leading Liberals, and an influential citizen of St. Johns, Que., died yesterday afternoon after a short illness.

Weston, the pedestrian, nearing the end of his across-the-continent walk, collapsed Saturday near Utica, N.Y., owing to eating clam chowder, but revived in four hours.

In the collections of the hospital tag day in Ottawa on Saturday, the sum of $11,300 was raised. Sir Wilfrid Laurier wore a tag all day, and Earl Grey sent a check.

King Albert formally opened the Belgian Exposition Saturday. Others of the royalty present at the ceremony were Queen Elizabeth, the Countess of Flanders and Princess Clementine.

Fire which brought out in the Hotel Thomas, Cincinnati, practically destroyed that structure. Three bodies have been recovered, and it is believed at least six more are in the ruins.

ARE CHARGED WITH FRAUD

Haileybury, April 25.—The preliminary trial of H. Blackburn and Edward Jones, for obtaining money under false pretences, was finished Saturday night.

These men caused the rush a short time ago which caused several hundred men to go to the Cariboo district to find only swamps and very little of any indications of mineral.

The accused received $800 for an interest in these claims, and J. Robertson & Son and Peabody & Co. paid them $500 to go to Cariboo again and stake other claims.

They brought back samples of ore that assayed $1,050 to the ton.

The case was adjourned till the June Assizes.

GAEKWAR OF BARODA COMING

Vancouver, April 25.—Sir Sayaji Rac, Gaekwar of Baroda, one of the most influential of the independent princes of India, will arrive from Yokohama on a tour of American continent June 15. Evelyn Thaw Visits Husband.

Matteawan, N. Y., April 25.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw visited her husband, Harry K. Thaw, for an hour at the asylum here Saturday. This was her first visit since Thanksgiving Day. The purpose of their conference could not be learned.

Thirty-Four Buildings Burned.

Falls City, Neb., April 25.—Fire Saturday afternoon practically wiped out the business portion of Salem, 23 business houses and 12 dwellings burning. The estimated loss is two hundred thousand dollars.

TWO THOUSAND ARE HOMELESS

Lake St. Charles, La., April 25.—Fanned by a high wind, a fire which broke out here shortly after 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon swept over twenty or more blocks of the city. Two thousand persons have been rendered homeless.

Requests for aid were wired to Beaumont and Orange, Texas, and to Jennings, La. The Southern Pacific Railroad offered special trains.

Many houses in the path of the flames were dynamited, but showers of spark were swept beyond the gaps, igniting the buildings on the farther side. Within a short time the wind had driven the fire over a space two miles in length.

It was almost eight o'clock at night when the fire, which followed a northeasterly direction from the business section, finally reached the outskirts of the city, burning itself out.

Early estimates, which placed the damage at $3,000,000, are believed to be excessive. More conservative figures range from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

Next to the court house, the costliest buildings destroyed were those of the Holy Cross Convent, Catholic Church and rectory. Three hotels were burned.

It is estimated that the insurance will amount to less than one-third of the total loss.

HERE IS A STRANGE HEN

Chicago, Ill., April 25.—Guests and employes of a down-town hotel Saturday night were interested in a white hen that has a clearly-defined nose and lips in place of the beak of a chicken, and feet like knobs instead of claws.

"The chicken is nine months old," said Michael Singer, one of the hotel proprietors, who owns the fowl, "and has to eat from the hand, being unable to pick food, like other chickens. It cannot scratch, and does not cackle nor make other noises like a chicken. It has laid two eggs, both of which were flat on one side and of extraordinary size."

ARE PLAYING AGAINST TIME

Winnipeg, April 25.—At the conclusion of the argument to rescind the order requiring the appearance of witnesses and production of documents before the royal commission of Alberta, which is enquiring into the Great Waterways Railway deal, Judge McDonald reserved judgment. He offered to give an off-hand decision to allow of immediate appeal, but counsel preferred to have a considered decision.

Delay is probably desired in the matter, the commission's time being limited.

GRAND DUCHESS TAKES THE VEIL

Moscow, April 25.—The Grand Duchess Elizabeth, widow of Grand Duke Sergius, and a sister of Empress Alexandra, has taken the veil of a nun. She will devote herself to the Hospital of the Woman's Refuge, which was founded after the assassination of her husband, Feb. 17, 1905, by a bomb.

AN EXCHANGE OF CITIZENS

Canadians are rejoicing with reason at the great influx of American farmers into our Northwest, but there is reason, also, to mourn over the fact that there were about 1,200,000 Canadians in the United States at the time of the last census, and the census taken this year will probably show that there are over a million and a half Canadians in the Republican now. According to the records of the United States Government 53,448 persons, of whom 24,118 were native Canadians, left Canada to settle in the United States last year.

Most of the Canadians who go to the United States find employment in the big cities of the United States. If the Canadian tariff were as high as the United States tariff, many millions of dollars' worth of manufactured goods that are now made in the United States for consumption in Canada would be made in Canadian cities instead, and young Canadians would not have to go across the border to seek employment.

WOULD LEAD TO ANNEXATION

The Winnipeg Free Press, although a Liberal newspaper, has sense enough to see that any reciprocity treaty with the United States would be liable to be suddenly terminated, and that the permanency of it could only be assured by a political union. It says:

"The moral is that the Canadian Government should do a good deal of thinking and take plenty of time before getting involved in so-called reciprocity negotiations."

Unfortunately, the Toronto Globe looks at the matter in a different way, and the influence of its editor with the Government is so great that he was able to induce Mr. Fielding to make tariff concessions to the United States at a time when Canadian newspapers in general, irrespective of party connections, were supporting the Government in the announced determination to stand "pat."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has announced that the two Governments will soon open reciprocity negotiations, and the people of Canada will await the result with great anxiety.

AT WAR, BUT NOT AT WAR

Sir Wilfrid Laurier admits that as soon as Britain is at war Canada is at war, but he says that in some British wars Canada will refuse to take part. The Canadian Government of the day will have to decide whether the Canadian warships are to participate or not, Sir Wilfrid says, and until it receives an order from Ottawa no Canadian warship is to attack a hostile warship unless it is first attacked. Mr. Robert L. Borden has shown that such a naval policy is unworkable. Speaking in Parliament during the recent naval debate he said:

"Let us look at the conditions to which the declaration of the Prime Minister will bring us. He says that our ships will defend themselves if attacked, but if not attacked they will not attack a ship of the enemy. Every one who has studied modern conditions knows that nearly every great nation of the world at all events certain great naval powers, have merchant ships with guns in their holds. These ships, upon a declaration of war, and such declarations come very suddenly under modern conditions, mount the guns they have in their holds, hoist the naval flag of their country and prey upon the commerce of any other nation against which war may have been declared. Suppose that one of these ships mounts her guns, flies the flag and proceeds to prey upon British commerce under the very guns of a Canadian cruiser; according to the declaration of the Prime Minister that Canadian cruiser would not interfere until an order in council has been passed. Suppose that a Canadian cruiser upon the high seas in sight of British ships should observe those British ships to be attacked by the cruiser of a nation which had suddenly declared war against Great Britain, a Canadian ship is not to attack her unless she is attacked herself. Then, I presume, she is to remain idly by while British ships are captured by the cruiser of the hostile power, and all this for the reason that no order in council has been passed at Ottawa. A British merchantman might very well appeal for protection, one would think, to a ship of war flying the British flag, but under circumstances such as those the only answer that the Canadian ship could give would be that she could take no part whatever until an order in council had been passed at Ottawa, and pending that she must assume the status of a neutral vessel. All this seems very absurd. But, further and more important than all that, it would simply result in a course such as I have indicated; it would simply mean a declaration of complete independence from the rest of the Empire. That is all it could possibly mean."

We cannot be in the Empire and out of the Empire at the same time. We cannot be at war and not at war at the same time. If Canadians wish to leave the British Empire the time to do it is when peace prevails. Too break away in time of war would be to brand ourselves as the meanest and most cowardly nation that ever existed on the face of the earth. But Canadians do not wish to leave the British Empire either in time of peace or time of war, and the best way to show the world at large the sentiment of the people on this question is to turn the Laurier Government out of power.

THE NORTH COUNTRY RAILWAY

Referring to the suggestion of an Apsley correspondent that Peterborough capitalists should get together and form a company to build a railway to the north country the only method of getting the railway built is to interest the Canadian Pacific Railway in the project as it would be too big an undertaking for local men to finance. The suggestion is right in that it is too big a proposition for Peterborough to handle alone. Practically no railway building has been done in Canada in recent years except by the Dominion and Provincial Governments and the great railway corporations. Many railway charters have been granted, but very few of them have been utilised except by the Canadian Pacific, the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Northern Railways. The Review proposed some time ago that the Board of Trade and the City Council should bring the matter to the attention of the three great railway companies. We have also suggested that the Ontario Government might be induced to build the railway as a southern extension of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway. This Government railway has proved a great financial success, while it has accomplished wonders in building up the north country. Peterborough is almost directly south of its present southern terminus at North Bay, and if the line is to be extended southward Peterborough is the point for which it should aim, as it would be a most convenient starting place for the people of the central and eastern counties of Ontario, who now have to make a roundabout journey by way of Toronto to reach the northern part of the province, which is now developing so rapidly.
